The courts have now decided that the banks should have paid only forty-two and a half cents to the State the past four years, and only the regular rate of fifty-two and a half cents this year. This cut in half the amount that goes from the bank taxes to the school fund for this year, and as the State is paying back the rebate due the banks for the past several years, the Auditor thinks the school fund will have to stand its share of this rebate, and this share is nearly or quite half of all that will have to be returned.

The Auditor and State Superintendent decided last year that the school fund would have to make up an "overdraw," or deficit, for the preceding year before it could be divided up into per capita, which turned out to be $235, or ten cents lower than it had been before for many years. If they now decide that the fund must pay its share of all the rebate out of this year's fund, this last reduction may be as a drop in the bucket, and the per capita for the year may be small enough to curtail the school term in nearly every rural district in the State. Neither the Auditor nor Superintendent of Public Instructions is ready to talk about the matter. They will not be until they get all the figures in and have some legal advice on the subject.

Talmage, The High Bridge Camp Meeting. Convenes July 23 to August 1st inclusive this year. B Fay Mills the Evangelist occupies the principal place on the program for Saturday and Sunday, July 24th and 25th and the great Talmage will preach July 31st and August 1st. A brilliant program is arranged for intervening days, of music, sermons and a special feature of illustrated lectures by Prof. Shearer, of Cincinnati.

Hereafter senders of registered letters will be indemnified against loss to the extent of $10. The law provides that no greater sum than $10 can be allowed on any one letter and claimants must show that letter contained $10 in order to recover that amount. The government has never before been responsible for registered letters, though employes in whose hands losses occurred were in many cases required to make good the losses.

IN the matter of heat, the Louisville Commercial says this summer has not been a patching to that of 1854, which was the hottest ever known in this section. For 71 days from June 22, 1854, to September 17, the thermometer registered 90 degrees and upward; the highest was 104 degrees, the lowest 90 degrees, and the average 96.43 degrees. During 28 days of this period the temperature reached 100 degrees and upward.

A REPORT from Frankfort says that the Republicans will adopt the device of the gold Democrats at their convention and will thus vote for Hindman for Appellate Clerk, not nominating a candidate themselves. Little credence is placed in the story here, as fusion was declared against at the meeting of the State central and executive committees of the gold Democrats.

A prominent Republican was asked when the tariff bill would get out of conference, and he replied disgustedly: "When its schedules can no longer be profitably worked on the stock market." It is remarkable how often the assertion is heard that the conference is being purposely prolonged for speculative purposes.

Hereafter we may have sufficient revenue for the needs of the government, or we may not; but however that may be, the revenue of the farmer is not going to be helped by anything that the Administration or Congress has done.—Enquirer.

There are now no dividing issues between Democrats as broad and vital as those which exist between Democracy and Republicanism of the Hanna-McKinley stripe. Let Democrats unite everywhere to defeat McKinleyism for good and all. After that beneficent end is accomplished, Democrats can settle their own differences, if they have any in their own way.—Chicago Chronicle.

President McKinley's surrender has now become an abdication. He has finally divested himself of his last remaining constitutional power, and the country is practically without a President. Like a Morovingian King, he retains the semblance of a ruler, but really holds office only to sign the decrees which other men impose upon him. He is a highly respectable figure-head; he is an excellent royal-progress kind of Chief Magistrate, traveling about to lay corn-stones and wish his people prosperity; but a President in the constitutional sense—a President of independent initiative, jealous of his prerogative, direct representative of the people—he is not.—N. Y. Evening Post.

RESERVOIRS BURST.

A Disaster That Resembles the Johnstown Flood—Several Persons Drowned.

NEWBURGH, N. Y., July 15.—Melzingah reservoir in Fishkill mountains, near Mattewan, burst at 3 o'clock Wednesday morning owing to the heavy rains. The water ran into the creek and two miles below, near Duchess Junction, washed away brick yard, buildings, including a boarding house occupied by laborers. It is reported here that nine of them were drowned and others are missing.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., July 15.—News of the bursting of the Beacon Mountain reservoirs received here says that three buildings, two of which were boarding houses, were swept away by rushing water, and 20 people are missing.

NEWBURGH, N. Y., July 15.—The flood at Duchess Junction washed away about 200 yards of the Hudson River railroad track. Trains are stalled on each side of the breach. There were two reservoirs in the mountain, the lower one half a mile distant from the other. The upper dam gave way, letting the volume of water into the lower reservoir. This also burst, and the water rushed down through a ravine. Van Buren & Timony's brickyard on the Hudson just below Duchess Junction are a mile distant from the site of the lower reservoir. Without warning the flood reached them through the ravine and made terrible havoc. Buildings were torn in pieces and their occupants carried away in the raging flood. The water works system was operated by a private company and supplied the villages of Mattewan and Fishkills-on-the-Hudson.

A temporary trestle has been built at the break in the Hudson River railroad track and the Montreal express south-bound has passed over. It will be late Wednesday afternoon before trains can be run on time.

At 9 o'clock seven bodies had been recovered. Two of them were those of Peter Mulligan and wife, who kept one of the two boarding houses for brickyard laborers that were swept away by the flood. The names of the others are not known. It is reported that 20 are still missing. Tons of earth and sand were washed down in the flood, and men are digging in to this mass to recover other bodies.

Trains were stalled all the way from Fishkill to Poughkeepsie. One of these was a Cook excursion train, the passengers on which expected to start for Europe Wednesday.

The loss of life at Timoney's brickyard, Duchess Junction, by the flood Wednesday morning, is now stated at nine. There were about 30 laborers in boarding houses that were swept away. All escaped but the nine. One man had an arm broken and others suffered minor injuries.

The identity of six bodies recovered has been established as follows:

Peter Mulligan and wife.

Mrs. John Conroy, wife of the engineer of the brickyard.

Selina Conroy, aged 6 years.

John Zinca, a Hungarian laborer.

Willie Ferrey.

REPUBLICAN LEAGUE.

Leonard J. Crawford Elected President—Omaha for the Next Convention.

DETROIT, Mich., July 15.—Leonard J. Crawford, of Newport, Ky., was Wednesday afternoon elected president of the National Republican League. While the contest for the presidency had all the appearance of a close struggle, the result can scarcely be said to have been in doubt. Two ballots by states were taken, the second one being necessary to verify the first, in which the detailed result could not be determined owing to the confusion caused by numerous changes of votes and the persistent airing of local differences in some of the state delegations.

According to the indications M. J. Dowling, of Minnesota, will be reelected as secretary, which will complete the leading slate of Crawford, Dowling and Omaha for the next convention. The committee on time and place of next convention Wednesday selected Omaha, but left the question of dates to the Nebraska league.

There was no contest over resolutions; the expressed wish of the colored delegates for the addition of an anti-lynching declaration was willingly granted. During preparation of the platform in committee some of the western members urged the policy of saying as little as possible about the "sound money" feature of the St. Louis platform, but the resolutions heartily endorsed that platform in all respects.

Ore Mines Starting Up.

BESSEMER, Mich., July 15.—The old Colby mine has started up with a force of 250 men. Nearly all the mines are beginning to use wood as fuel on account of the scarcity and advance in the price of coal. At Negaunee, Mich., Shaft No. 1, of the Queen mine, started Wednesday, giving employment to between 300 and 400 men. All the ore hoisted is being shipped, besides cars are being loaded from the large stock piles.

Trial Heats of the Henley Regatta.

HENLEY-ON-THAMES, July 15.—In the trial heat for the diamond sculls of the Berks station, Wednesday, Dr. W. S. McDowell, of the Delaware Boat club, Chicago, beat Hon. E. A. Guinness, Thames Rowing club. In the trial heat for the Stewards' Challenge cup, at the Berks station, the Winnepeg Rowing club, of Canada, beat the Utrecht University Boat club, Triton.

Will Enforce the Alien Labor Law.

OTTAWA, Ont., July 15.—The Dominion government has decided to put the alien labor law in force in Western Ontario as well as Manitoba, the northwest territories and British Columbia, and an agent will be appointed for this purpose in a few days.

First Bale of New Cotton.

ATLANTA, Ga., July 15.—A special to the Journal from Williamsburg, Ga., says that J. N. Daniel shipped one bale of the new crop of cotton from there Wednesday. It weighed 565 pounds and was the first bale shipped from Georgia this season.

FOR TREASON.

Eighty Rich Spanish Merchants in Havana Arrested.

Several of Those Under Arrest Are Members of the Union Constitutional Party—Two Influential Spanish Officers Still Spanish Canson to Cubans.

HAVANA, July 16.—The greatest excitement that has existed since the war began prevails here now. Eighty rich Spanish merchants and bankers, including Don Antonio Quesada, ex-mayor of Havana, were arrested here charged with selling merchandise and medicine to the Cubans. Many of these under arrest are prominent members of the Union Constitutional party. The combined wealth of the men arrested exceeds $30,000,000.

It is stated by their friends that the arrests are made for the purpose of blackmail, and it is intimated that the chief of police has informed the prisoners that they will be released if the sum of $100,000 be paid.

La Lucha has revealed a fact which is making much comment here. Near El Seborncal, Remedios, Santa Clara province, the Spanish Capt. Estrada, with his guerrilla forces, captured a Cuban stock of arms, including several rifles and two big gun carriages, made in Barcelona, Spain. The cannon, it appears, had been taken from the carriages by the Cubans and put in some other safe place.

Everybody here at once began talking about those mysterious guns.

Later the mystery was solved, to the great surprise of the Spanish loyalists. The cannon were sold to the Cubans by two Spanish officers, who were very influential with the government and with Gen. Weyler. Such remarkable incidents are showing the real character of Gen. Weyler's administration.

A report is current that the patriots have attacked and partially burned Cardenas. There are fully 5,000 Cubans in the vicinity of Mantanzas City and Cardenas. Gen. Molina left Mantanzas with a strong column. Gen. Weyler has not succeeded in capturing Gomez and has evidently given up the idea.

THE LONDON PRESS

On the Alleged Note of Secretary Sherman on the Sealing Question.

LONDON, July 16.—The Daily Mail says editorially. "Unless we get an arbitration treaty the day will come when the unbridled verbiage of a small section of American politicians will magnify petty insult into a pretty war. Secretary Sherman's dispatch is too undiplomatic for English ears and too hollow for American common sense. In the interests of humanity the rumored alliance between Japan and Spain is desirable. Our Yankee friends want a little blood letting to bring them to a sensible international policy, and this would best be done by any hands other than those of England."

The Times, in an editorial article, says: "It is impossible to doubt the authenticity of the document. It is a manifest attempt, in offensive language, to fasten upon England a charge of bad faith. If this was not Secretary Sherman's intention he has shown himself singularly unfitted for the delicate and responsible duties of his office. If it was, then the statement he recently made repudiating the charge of bad faith is deliberately misleading. When he was first appointed to his present office doubts were expressed as to the wisdom of the choice. If he really sent this dispatch they will be fully confirmed."

The Daily Chronicle thinks Lord Salisbury would be justified in returning Secretary Sherman's dispatch on the ground that the British government does not receive communications couched in such terms. If he does not, it is because American diplomatists assume a certain liberty of langage not used by other countries.

The Chronicle proceeds to severely censure the methods of American diplomacy, and says: "The fact that some nations, like ourselves, are fortunate in being favored with the presence of a diplomatist, who is no less a gentleman in public than in private life is not sufficient to remove this slur and danger."

The Standard says editorially: "The appearance of Secretary Sherman's dispatch has undoubtedly damaged the position of the state department. It is preposterous that we should be accused of bad faith by men who have notoriously refused to comply with an impartial award simply because it was given against them."

The Post in an editorial, says: "Every indication points to the certainty that Great Britain will be compelled to fight for her existence against the United States, as the American government believes that war can be safely begun. In such a situation war can not be averted by justice nor by good will. Our statesman must search their consciences and make sure that in any controversy that may be raised their attitude is just and fair. They should concede so long as there is any reasonable doubt concerning the justice of their position, but they must be prepared for an appeal to force.

"Our duty is to make sure that it comes by no fault of ours and that it shall find us united and prepared. The respite will in all probability be the time needed for the creation of a more powerful American fleet, say three or four years, or for the creation of a political combination with some naval power, say in as many months.

Bicycle Firm Assigns.

CHICAGO, July 16.—The Mason & Mason Co., manufacturers of bicycles, made an assignment Thursday. The liabilities are placed at $60,000 and the assets at $75,000. The affairs of the company are said to be in such condition that it will resume business within a very short time.

He Wanted to Die.

LEXINGTON, Ky., July 16.—Jesse Kayes, 28, of Saundersville, near here, former night watchman at Stoll & Co.'s distillery, took morphine and audanum Thursday with suicidal intent, but physicians saved him.

THE MINERS

Of the Fairmont District Will Join the Strike—The Miners Are All Working in the Clarksburg, W. Va., District.

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., July 17.—The mines were all working here Friday and ontwardly everything is running smoothly, but there is an undercurrent of uneasiness among the operators and dissatisfaction among the miners, and there is no doubt that Saturday will settle whether a strike will be declared or not. Delegations of miners will attend the meeting at Monongah where President Ratchford and Eugene V. Debs will speak, and there is a strong probability that a general strike for this region will be declared. Now men continne to arrive and all are given work, and operators are loading all the cars the roads furnish. Coal is being shipped to Cleveland and Chicago.

FAIRMONT, W. Va., July 17.—The events of Thursday and Friday show plainly that it is the intention of the miners of this section to come out, and the time of the action is supposed to be Saturday, when Debs, Sovereign, Ratchford and Gompers are billed here for an address. It is the opinion that if the men can be got out to the meeting they will not go back to work in the mines. The general impression seems to be that the men will attend this meeting, notwithstanding Saturday is pay day, and will fail to show up Sunday morning. It was announced positively Friday night that the O'Donnell miners will come ont, and from a meeting held at Monongah Thursday evening and addressed by one of the agitators, it is almost sure they will follow suit. The meeting here Saturday is being looked forward to with the greatest interest by both miners and operators, as it is expected to be the turning point.

WILLIAMSBURG, W. Va., July 17. The miners working in the Logan consolidated mines in Matewan, this county, came out Friday and joined the strikers. They Friday morning marched en masse to Thacker, five miles east, where they are now trying to induce the men who are in the four mines at that place to come out. Supt. Hunter of the Logan mines, will put on a force of non-union men Saturday at the old price, and this may provoke a disturbance, although all is now quiet. Three carloads of non-union men were put on in the Toms creek mines in the Elkhorn field Thursday. It is reported that the men at Pocahontas in this field came out Friday. Indications now point to a general strike in the Norfolk & Western field.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., July 17.—The coal diggers at eight mines in the Kanawha coal field quit work Friday. They number about six hundred. Others have agreed to quit Saturday. The probability is that all of the miners between Charleston and Montgomery will be idle by Saturday night. They number about 2,200.

COLUMBUS, O., July 17.—President Ratchford, in speaking of the action of Gov. Hastings in signing the miners' bill just passed in the Pennsylvania legislature, providing for the weighing of coal before it is screened, said: "It is the strongest expression of friendship for the cause that Gov. Hastings could have made at this particular time."

Of the bill President Ratchford said: "If the system is changed to run of mine coal it will change our demand accordingly but need not necessarily complicate matters."

Word was received at national headquarters Friday that the suspension in Illinois is practically complete.

GREAT EXCITEMENT

SEATTLE, Wash., July 17.—"When are you going to the Klondike?" In 12 hours that question has been asked and answered a hundred thousand times in Seattle. On the streets, in the houses, everywhere is heard nothing but Klondike and the whole town is feverish and agitated as never before over the Alaskan gold discoveries. Men who can not go are forming pools to grabstake men who will. Ex-Gov. John H. McGraw will leave on the next steamer. Gen. E. M. Carr, of the state militia, who at one time camped within seven miles of the fabulously rich placer, will go. Col. Joe Green and A. J. Balliet, Yale's great oarsmen, are packing their effects, and attorneys, doctors, clerks and laborers are all scheming to secure a share of the vast wealth in the north.

Indescribable expectation is directed toward the steamer Portland, due at any hour from St. Michaels. She has at least a million dollars in gold on board, and will bring news of Seattle men who have risked their lives for gold. Every one says that at last the mother lodge of the Pacific coast has been found, and that the half has not been told.

Senator Harris' Successor.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., July 17.—Gov. Taylor remains at Johnson City trying to decide what to do about the appointment of a successor to Senator Harris. It is his desire to postpone the matter a few weeks, but such pressure is being forced upon him that an appointment may be made at any time. The new senator will be either T. M. Insley, of west Tennessee, or James Richardson and Benton McMillin, of middle Tennessee. While Gov. Taylor favors McMillin the indications are that Insley is gaining strength.

YUKON GOLD FIELDS.

Not Less Than Four Dollars' Worth of Gold Scooped Wisn Every Shovelful of Dirt—Salaries of Miners About Twelve Dollars a Day.

CHICAGO, July 19.—Vice President P. B. Weare, of the North American Transportation & Trading Co., has received dispatches from the Cloudyke placer gold fields of Alaska, which confirm the stories of its fabulous wealth received from the Pacific coast during the past week. The steamship Portland, of the North American Co., arrives at Seattle, Wash., from its semi-annual expedition within a week and bears $1,000,000 in gold dust from the Yukon fields. The dispatch sums up the yield of dust and nuggets in that Eldorado country during the year as approximately $5,000,000. The letter is from Capt. John J. Healy, who has piloted crafts for the North American Co. through the winding Alaskan rivers for years. It is dated June 7, from Circle City, near the British boundary, and depicts graphically the immense fortunes which have been made within a fortnight by roaming, penniless miners.

Capt. Healy tells of new regions which have been discovered; indeed, the captain says that not less than $4 worth of gold dust is scooped up with every shovelful of dirt, and that applies to every piece of ground into which the shovel is dug. Salaries to miners are not less than $12 a day, and a man can get his provision and anstenance for $2.

"There is no trouble," said Mr. Weare, "that the mines are only partly uncovered. All my dispatches agree this is the continuation of the mother vein in this country. Von Humboldt, upon his visit to Butch Harbor, near Bristol bay, predicted that the mother vein would show itself in Alaska in a parallel line. Everything indicates the truth of this prophecy.

"Circle City and Fort Cudahy were the principal gold fields before the Clondyke fields were discovered last fall and the rush for those fields has continued since.

"Gold fields have also been discovered of great value in the vicinity of Nontak river, which is in British territory, but the travel has been and continues to be toward the Yukon fields. This year the number of miners in this territory has been increased by 3,000, to which must be added the 4,000 miners already situated there. Most of these miners come from the silver mines and pass through the wild country and over the mountains. In this way the distance is only 1,000 miles, while the water route covers 3,000 miles."

Mr. Weare has also news of a new discovery of gold fields, hitherto untouched, near the mouth of the Tanana river, which is the second largest river of Alaska, and enters the Yukon at the town of Weare.

GENERAL FEAR

Of a Repetition of the Bloody Riots of 1890 at Valparaiso.

NEW YORK, July 19.—A dispatch to the Herald from Valparaiso says:

There is a general fear here that a repetition of the bloody riots of 1890 when scores of rioters were shot down and killed by the police and militia, is at hand.

The situation is critical. It was brought abont by the action of the mayor of Valparaiso in ordering 1,000 workshops closed, thereby throwing thousands of men out of employment. Unless something is done immediately to provide for the idle thousands, serious trouble will result.

The authorities only quelled the riots of 1890 after a great loss of life. The rioters at that time looted many stores to obtain food and clothing, and the result was the police and militia were called out to put an end to the troubles. Scores of idle men were shot down and cut down in the streets.

Cadet Montgomery Heard From.

PORTLAND, Ore., July 19.—Russell Montgomery, a U. S. naval cadet who disappeared from Annapolis over a year ago, has been heard from in Alaska. He writes to his father, J. B. Montgomery, a well known capitalist of this city, that he has a claim in the Klondyke district and is now working it successfully. Young Montgomery failed in his examinations at Annapolis, which fact so humiliated him that he left Annapolis without leaving any word behind him, and although his father has used every effort to find his son, nothing has been heard of him until the letter from Alaska was received.

How They Came to London.

The following conversation took place between two gentlemen in a crowded London club room. They had been talking about the condition of things when they first came to London. Mr. Rawson said:

"When I first came to London, I had only a ragged coat, with a knife and a few marbles in my pocket."

"You were better off than I, then, for I had neither a coat nor a waistcoat, nor a knife, nor even marbles."

"Nonsense!" was the reply. "How could that be?"

"Well, I will tell you. When I came here I was a baby in long clothes."

The roar of laughter that arose could have been heard miles away.—Tit-Bits.

THE LARGEST SINGLE ORDER FOR CREAM SEPARATORS EVER GIVEN.

A Noted Iowa Creamery Operator Orders Five Hundred at One Time.

W. I. Moody, Iowa's greatest creamery operator, estimates that it costs an average of 10 cts. per 100 lbs. to haul the milk to a creamery and haul the skim milk away again.

He is going to save all this by placing with his patrons Dairy Separators, and have wagons call for the cream.

In this way the farmer will get the full advantage of the Separator and creamery systems, will have the warm fresh skim milk at home for stock feed and will not be at expense of cutting ice and caring for same.

Before ordering these 500 Separators, valued at over $50,000, the merits of all the different Dairy Separators on the market were very thoroughly considered and practical tests were made by Mr. Moody.

It was finally decided that the Sharples Separators, made at West Chester, Pa., were the most desirable and best made machines, and though costing a little more money, it was thought they were well worth the difference asked, and the order was given to that company.

It's Different, You Know.

It was during a controversy over the value of a bicycle.

"There are cases, mamma," explained the young woman, "when the proper use of a bicycle is almost imperative, and I'm sure that mine is one of them."

"Nonsense," returned the elder woman. "That's very nice talk from the point of view of a dealer in bicycles, but that is all. Now if you want exercise—"

"But I don't mamma," interrupted the young woman hastily. "It isn't exercise that I need, but recreation, and there's no recreation in doing the housework—none at all."—Chicago Post.

Real Warm Weather Rest and Comfort.

There is a powder to be shaken into the shoes called Allen's Foot-Ease, invented by Allen S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. It certainly will cure corns and bunions and relieve instantly sweating, hot or smarting feet. It costs only a quarter, and the inventor will send a sample free to any address.

BRIGHT PROSPECTS

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 15.—The prospect for a settlement of the great miners strike was brighter Wednesday night than at any time since the struggle began, and both sides are almost ready to count on a resumption of work in the near future.

The cheering announcement was made Wednesday night that W. P. Dearmit, president of the New York and Cleveland Gas Coal Co., whose 1,900 men have been constantly at work and without whose assistance the success of the movement would have been jeopardized, has agreed to join with the other operators in a plan for the settlement of the strike on a true uniformity basis. This result has been brought about through the efforts of the members of the joint arbitration commission who have been working assiduously to this end since meeting President Dearmit Tuesday. Wednesday afternoon the commission called upon Mr. Dearmit and submitted their plan to which he agreed. Then the commission met the miners' officials and the proposition also received their approval.

Under the terms of the agreement Mr. Dearmit consents to sign a contract which will bring about a condition of true uniformity in the Pittsburgh district according to the plan formulated, but which failed 18 months ago. The contracts provides that there shall be no company stores, honest weight, fair screens and the removal of other evils long complained of by the miners. He will sign such a contract provided 95 per cent. of the operators in the Pittsburgh district become parties to it. In agreeing to the terms, the miners' officials promised to use their influence to obtain the signatures of the operators to the contract, and they will begin Thursday morning on this work. They stipulated, however, that the proposed contract should have no immediate effect in calling off the present general suspension.

Gen. Little, of the Ohio board of arbitration, said Wednesday night that if the plan is carried out it will not only affect Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, but will be a barrier against recurring troubles in the Pittsburgh district.

The miners' officials admitted that even though they had won the present strike without arbitration, the victory would have been only temporary, as the absence of a contract such as has been agreed upon would have left the door open for new grievances that were bound to manifest themselves under the present mining laws and the new ones awaiting the signature of the governor. The prospect of a settlement of the mining troubles was received Wednesday night with a sense of great relief on all sides and the result of the efforts of the joint commission to secure the names of the necessary 95 per cent. of the operators to the agreement will be awaited with general interest.

The miners' officials claimed Wednesday night that the Canonsburg mines in the Pan Handle district, which has been in operation since the strike began, were shut down Wednesday, on account of the men joining the ranks of the strikers. This makes the suspension in the Pan Handle district absolute.

Coal sold Wednesday at $1.50 per ton for mixed and $1.20 for run of mine.

No disturbances of any kind occurred during the day, and quiet reigns in all parts of the district.

IMMENSE SHIPMENTS

Of Coal Are Being Made From West Virginia—Organizers at Work in the State.

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., July 15.—West Virginia continues to be the crisis in the coal strike. The mines are working at full blast, and organizers are coming into the state to attempt to get the men to quit. Many are on the way.

The Chesapeake & Ohio railroad and Norfolk & Western road are rushing an immense amount of coal out of the state. Figures Wednesday became known for the first time, and they show that the closing of the mines is of the utmost importance to the miners, if they intend to make their strike a success.

Their hope is to cause a coal famine, which would bring the aid of every business in the country to stop the strike.

In the last 24 hours the Chesapeake & Ohio railroad has shipped 1,470 cars, and the Norfolk & Western railroad has shipped out 1,100 cars in the same time. Seven more trains will be put on the Norfolk & Western Thursday.

COLUMBUS, O., July 14.—President Ratchford, of the United Mine workers, is preparing an address to the miners of the country more fully explaining the object of the strike and giving a resume of the contest up to this time. Its tone is encouraging and it will have an inspiring effect upon the miners.

Human Head Found on an Ash Dump.

NEW YORK, July 13.—A Negro working on an ash dump in Newton creek Wednesday morning found the severed head of a man among the refuse. He was so frightened at the discovery that he threw it from him into the creek. He discribed it as having a black moustache and the police believe it to be the missing head of Guldensuppe, the Turkish bath masseur, who is believed to have been murdered by Martin Thorne.

EXPORTS AND IMPORTS.

Exports of Merchandise the Highest in the History of the Country.

Exports of Gold for 1897 Amounted to $46,359,760—The Imports Were $63,-043,575—Minister Angell Sells Saturday—June Imports of Sugar.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—The monthly statement of the exports and imports of the United States, issued Thursday by the bureau of statistics, make the remarkable showing that never before in the history of the country has the exports of merchandise, which includes practically all the exports except gold and silver, reached so high a figure as during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1897, nor has the excess of exports over imports ever been so large. The only time these figures were approached was in 1892, when the United States was making heavy shipments of grain to feed Europe's suffering from a series of deficient harvests.

Exports of domestic merchandise, $1,032,998,880; increase over 1896, about $170,000,000.

Total exports of domestic and foreign merchandise, $1,051,987,021, as compared with $892,606,938 for 1896.

The total imports of merchandise during the fiscal year just closed amounted to $764,373,905, of which $381,932,695 was free of duty. The total imports were about $15,350,000 less than last year, and the excess of exports over imports for the year was $287,613,186. This is an excess of about $185,000,000 over last year, and an excess of about $23,000,000 over any previous year.

The figures for June also shows an important gain. The domestic exports of merchandise during that month amounted to $72,766,880, a gain over June, 1896, of $8,000,000. The imports of June amount to $84,825,110, as compared with $56,163,740 for June, 1896. The exports of gold, including ores, for the fiscal year 1897, amounted to $46,359,760, as compared with $112,409,947 for 1896. The imports of gold amounted to $65,045,575, an increase of about $31,500,000 over 1896. The exports of silver during 1897 amounted to $61,946,638 and the imports $20,533,227. The excess of gold import over exports therefore was $44,-053,795 and the excess of silver exported over imports $31,413,411. Never before has the silver movement, both export and import, reached so high a figure.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—Dr. Angell, United States minister to Turkey, has telegraphed the state department from his home at Ann Arbor, Mich., that he will sail from New York Saturday next without coming to Washington. He probably will meet Mr. Terrell, the retiring minister to Turkey, in Paris, for consultation.

The records of the treasury department show the imports of sugar during June, 1897, at the principal sugar ports, Baltimore, Boston, Galveston, New Orleans, New York, Philadelphia and San Francisco, at which about 90 per cent. of the whole importation is made, amount to 696,994,103 pounds, for all kinds, valued in the foreign markets at $13,560,125.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—Little credence is placed in official circles here in the statement that the Spanish and the Japanese governments have entered into an offensive alliance against the United States for the mutual protection of Cuba and Hawaii. Indeed, so far as could be learned Thursday night no intimation of such an agreement has even reached the state department. Secretary Sherman was indisposed when a reporter called at his house in regard to the matter but Mr. Day, the first assistant secretary, discredited the report and regarded it as too improbable to discuss. "The state department has no information concerning the probable alliance," he said, "and I don't believe there is any foundation for the statement that one has been entered into."

Both the Spanish and the Japanese ministers are away from the city.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—Chief Hazen of the secret service has given notice of the discovery of a new counterfeit ten dollar silver certificate. It is of the series of 1891, check letter D, with the small carmen seal, the portrait of Hendricks and the names of Messrs. Tillman and Morgan as register and treasurer respectively. The counterfeit is described as apparently a woodcut production very poorly executed, the seal being light pink instead of carmine, the numbering irregular and the printing and engraving bad.

MINERS WAGES.

President Ratchford Asks for Statements Regarding the Pay They Received.

COLUMBUS, O., July 16.—President Ratchford has mailed personal requests to miners throughout the country asking for statements regarding the wages they received, for publication for the benefit of the public. Thirty-nine miners in the Sanday Creek valley have been heard from. Since early in the spring the wages of these men for each two weeks has averaged $5.74 each. The total earnings was $223.86, and for the same period their indebtedness to the operators for rent, provisions, mining materials, etc., aggregated $619.29, leaving the miners in debt to their employers in the sum of $396.71.

Opposition to Prison Labor.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., July 16.—The Wholesale Saddlery association Thursday decided to protest against the competition of prison labor, especially in Illinois, where machine-made harness is turned out at ruinously low prices. A committee was named to formulate a protest.

Sale of Gold Bonds.

NEW YORK, July 16.—Controller Fitch Thursday made advertisement for the sale of gold bonds of the city of New York, amounting to $10,053,-017.27. The bonds will bear three per cent. interest.

A CONFERENCE

Between England and the United States May Be Arranged, With a View to Formulate Further Measures for Seal Protection.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—Ex-Secretary Foster is believed to be meeting with a large measure of success in his efforts to secure from the British government additional measures of protection for the seals in Behring sea. While he has not yet reported that the British have formally consented to participate in a conference with the object in view, unofficial advices indicate that this is about to be accomplished. The ex-secretary has secured powerful assistance from the great London skin dressers, who handle all of the sealskins taken in the North Pacific and Behring sea and prepare them for use in garments. These merchants are advised fully as to the prospects of each year's catch and the state of the sealeries, so it is regarded as strengthening Gen. Foster's case very much when, as he reports by cable to the state department, they affirm the correctness of the conclusions reached by the American expert Jordan, and by inference reject those of the Canadian expert Thompson. The issue between the experts, shortly stated, was whether or not the seals are being exterminated under existing regulations.

The American finding was in the affirmative. If Gen. Foster has paved the way for an international conference to protect the seals he has secured the most urgent of the demands made by our government, but there is still no evidence that the British government is willing to enter into a modus vivendi to save the seals while the interminable talking of such a conference is going on, and that was, it is said here, one of the most important objects of his mission.

At the Japanese legation here no credence is given to the report cabled from London that the Spanish and Japanese governments have entered into an alliance against the United States. It is point d out that the Spanish newspapers are nearly as bitter in their denunciations of the Japanese, whom they charge with giving material aid to the Philippine insurgents, as they are against this government for permitting arms and men to be sent to Cuba. It was stated in positive terms that there was absolutely no truth in the rumor, and it was explained that the presentation of the Chrysanthemum decoration to King Alfonso had no significance whatever, so far as the United States is concerned, and does not imply any change in the relations between Japan and Spain.

The state department has no information whatever of any alliance between Spain and Japan.

Friday night the conferees were no nearer an agreement on the sugar schedule, which continues to be the bone of contention, than they were when they began. Each side is standing out as firmly as ever for its own rates. The house conferees are convinced that they can win, supported as they are almost by the unanimous sentiment of their party in the house, and some of them talk with resignation of remaining here all summer rather than yield to the senate on this point. There were rumors during the day that the senate conferees were about to surrender on sugar, but they proved to be utterly without foundation. Believing that if the senate itself were permitted to vote on the question, it would recede from its rates on sugar, there was also talk during the day of forcing an expression on the subject from the senate in some way for its effect on the conferees, but this also, on investigation, proved to be little more than gossip.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—It is understood among senators interested that the president has determined upon the appointment of Mr. Terence V. Powderly, formerly grand master workman of the Knights of Labor to be commissioner-general of immigration, to succeed Mr. Stump and that the nomination probably will be sent to the senate within the next few days.

CITIZENS GATHER

OTTAWA, O., July 17.—Miss Smith, of Continental, who is only 14 years old and weighs but 50 pounds, together with her two younger sisters, went to the woods Thursday to gather berries. George Snyder followed them, it is alleged, and criminally assaulted the oldest of the sisters with the greatest brutality. The cries of the younger sisters caused Synder to take to the woods, but he came back to town and gave himself up about 10 o'clock in the evening and was locked up.

The citizens, wild with indignation, went to the city jail during the night to string him up, but were disappointed in not finding him, as the marshal, who had foreseen the trouble, had started with his prisoner for the county jail, where he landed him about 1 o'clock. He was taken back to Continental for trial Friday, but returned to jail here Friday evening, as citizens of Continental are still wild with a desire to lynch Snyder.

All is quiet here, and the sheriff fears no trouble from a mob. The girl's condition is critical.

HOUSE WINS.

Tariff Bill Will Be Submitted to Congress This Week.

It is Thought the Measure Will Become a Law by Saturday—There is No Disposition on the Part of the Democrats to Delay the Bill.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—The indications Sunday night were that the tariff bill, as agreed to by the republican conferees Saturday, probably will have passed both houses of congress and be a law at the end of the present week. Delays and complications, now unanticipated, might somewhat prolong the final struggle. The republican conferees have been working hard all day consulting and arranging the details of the report, which they now believe they will be able to submit to their democratic colleagues Monday morning. The bulk of this work has fallen upon the shoulders of Senator Allison and Gov. Dingley, who are preparing the statements of the effect of the changes made by the conferees which will be submitted to their respective houses. They have had a small army of clerks at work throughout the day in the room of the senate committee on finance, preparing the bill for the printer. If this task can be accomplished the printed bill can be laid before the democrats Monday morning, the debate will begin in the house Monday afternoon.

It is not believed that there will be any disposition on the part of the democratic members of the conference to delay the bill in full committee, but the democrats have had no meeting to determine their course of action on this point. Gov. Dingley expressed the opinion Sunday night that an hour would be sufficient time in which to explain the charges made by the conferees to their minority colleagues on the committee. One or two of the democrats are Sunday night inclined to insist upon a day for deliberations on the changes, but they of course realize that they are helpless if the majority desire to report the bill over their protest, and, in as much as the republican leaders of the house decided Sunday night to give two full days for the discussion of the report in the house, they probably will acquiesce in the decision of the majority to make the report Monday. All along the republican leaders have been disposed to allow but one day for debate in the house and, while they still believe one day would be sufficient, after discussing the question Sunday night, they decided, more to disarm the protests of the minority would be sure to make, and the possible criticism that the report was to be dragoned through the house to give two full days for debate. The report must, of course, be acted upon by the house before it is considered in the senate. The committee on rules will meet Monday morning and prepare a rule which will bring a vote on the report before the adjournment on Tuesday. The rules will be presented and adopted as soon as the conferees make their report, probably soon afternoon Monday. The debate will follow immediately. The South Carolina dispensary bill will be used to consume time until the report is brought in. It is not believed that a single republican vote in the house will be recorded against the report.

The programme in the senate is much more indefinite on account of the wide latitude allowed for debate and the absence of any preliminary method of bringing the report to a vote. The democratic senators, it is safe to presume from their talk Sunday, intend to assail the compromise on sugar, to which the conferees agreed and to make a pretty stiff fight against the restoration to the dutiable list of cotton bagging, cotton ties, burlaps, etc., which they succeeded with the aid of the populists and one or two republicans, in placing on the free list. They also will make strong opposition to the restoration of white pine to the house rate of $2.00 per thousand. Some of the democratic senators Sunday discussed the possibility of defeating the report in the senate on the presumption that they might be able to secure as many votes against the report as they did to place these articles on the free list. But no one imagines seriously that the report is in any danger in the senate when it comes to a final vote. And, moreover, the most prominent of the democratic senators freely expresses the opinion that the fight in the senate, though it may be spirited, will be brief. They believe a vote will be reached within three days in the senate.

Some of the opponents of the bill in the senate hold that a motion to recommit with instructions as to separate items would be in order before the vote is taken on accepting the report as an entirety, but the best parliamentarians in both branches say that the practice is well settled and that the vote must be taken first on the adoption or rejection of the report.

It was learned Sunday that there were some changes of verbiage in the sugar schedule and that the provision for the ratification of reciprocity treaties by the senate was retained in the modified reciprocity clause. Among the other things agreed to were the senate rates on steel tubing and hollow billets used in the manufacture of bicycle frames. The rate on cotton bagging is 7-10ths of a cent. The house rate was 12-10ths.

The Wheat Crop Good.

NOBLESVILLE, Ind., July 19.—The wheat crop that is now being threshed is turning out much better and is grading better than any crop since 1891. The piece of grain is gradually going up, the elevators paying 69 cents. In this city no man who wants work is out of employment. Several brick and gravel streets are being constructed, and also a large sewer, which gives all our laborers employment. Besides these public improvements there are several other large buildings being erected, which give labor to the mechanics of the city.

J. R. HINDMAN,

Of Adair County, Named for Clerk of the Court of Appeals by the Kentucky National Democratic Convention.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., July 18.—J. R. Hindman, of Adair county, was nominated Wednesday on the first ballot for clerk of the court of appeals by the Kentucky state national democratic convention. The convention adopted resolutions declaring for "a sound, stable and sufficient currency of gold and silver, interchangeable with each other at equal commercial value." Resolutions were adopted favoring a tariff for revenue only, applauding the administrative acts of Cleveland and Carlisle and denouncing free silver and mobs.

The convention reinsed to fuse with the republicans.

The national democratic party has, by Wednesday's presence in convention, evidenced its determination for a distinctive and independent existence. It is a minority party, at present pronounced by some, but it is a fixture. The developments of Wednesday's convention show plainly that the Kentucky democracy is hopelessly, irretrievably divided. Union or the anti-Carlisle elements would seem impossible within the ken of the present generation.

The convention assembled promptly, and at 2 o'clock Music hall was filled. Many ladies occupied seats on the stage and in the boxes among them Mrs. W. C. P. Breckinridge and Mrs. Henry Watterson.

The first of the distinguished delegates to arrive was United States Senator William Lindsay. His appearance was greeted by a burst of applause. Similar greeting was given ex-Secretary Carlisle and Mr. Henry Watterson as they entered by the stage door with a party of ladies, who took seats in the box to the right of the stage. As warm a welcome was given Hon. W. C. P. Breckinridge and ex-Gov. S. B. Buckner, who soon after appeared. Mr. Breckinridge was accompanied by Mrs. Breckinridge. A band placed in the rear of the balcony played national airs.

Hon. A. J. Carroll, of Louisville, secretary of the state executive committee, acting in the absence of Chairman Davis, called the convention to order. Rev. C. E. Craik, of Christ's cathedral, read a prayer from the Episcopal service.

Mr. Carroll formally launched proceedings in a well-delivered and well-received five-minute speech.

John W. Headman, of Louisville, was made secretary. Mr. Carroll introduced Hon. James C. Sims, of Warren county, the temporary chairman. Mr. Sims was received with a generous expression in the way of cheers and hand-clapping.

On a call of the districts the committees were named.

On resolutions—Henry Watterson, Louisville; W. C. P. Breckenridge, Lexington; R. T. Tyler, Fulton; J. D. Powers, Daviess; W. H. Yost, Muhlenburg; S. H. Buckner, Hart; John M. Atkinson, Christian; C. J. Helm, Campbell; William Lindsay, Franklin; R. T. Jacobs, Boyle; M. C. Swinfort, Harrison; D. R. Jonett, Clark; H. C. Baker, Adair.

Loud calls were made for Col. Breckinridge. He excused himself. He said he had a present duty to perform as a member of the committee on resolutions. After that he would speak if he still desired to hear him. He felt, though, that there was not the need for him to speak that existed last year, that Watterson was back from Europe, Carlisle was no longer secretary of the treasury, Lindsay had recovered his health, and they were all here.

This sally elicited laughter and applause. There were large calls for Watterson, Carlisle and Buckner. All except Mr. Carlisle were busy in committee work.

Hon. John W. Headman, as chairman of the committee on organization, reported the selection of Hon John G. Carlisle as permanent chairman and Mr. Ed. Pearce, of Lexington, as permanent secretary.

Mr. Carlisle was escorted to the stage, and his appearance was the signal for vociferous applause. The delegates arose to their feet, and three cheers were sent up as he stood, bowing and awaiting silence. When the expression of enthusiasm had exhausted its ardor Mr. Carlisle addressed the convention.

Mr. Carlisle spoke impressively, and his utterances were received with an enthusiasm that broke frequently into applause. When he closed the convention again arose en masse and gave three rousing cheers in his honor, and indorsement of the Cleveland administration.

United States Senator Lindsay was the next speaker, [illegible]

A call for counties was ordered, that names of candidates might be placed before the convention. Gov. S. B. Buckner named ex-Lieut. Gov. J. B. Hindman, of Adair county.

Hon. Paul Faulkner, of Pettis, presented the name of Prof. C. M. Alberti, of Lexington.

Judge Sam S. Savage, of Ashland, moved that Hindman be named by acclamation. He was ruled out of order. Prof. Alberti withdrew his name.

A call of the counties was proceeded with. Hindman received nearly all the votes cast. When Logan county was reached G. Orendorff in a graceful little speech, cast the vote of his county for Hindman, and moved to make his nomination unanimous. The motion was carried with applause.

Gov. Hindman was escorted to the singe by Gen. Buckner, who had placed his name before the convention, and he accepted in a speech much in the spirit of those that had gone before. Gov. Hindman is an excellent speaker.

FIFTY-FIFTH CONGRESS.

Extraordinary Session.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—SENATE.—A discussion of Union Pacific railroad affairs occupied the attention of the senate Monday. The deficiency appropriation bill was taken up early in the day, and Mr. Morgan proposed an amendment designed to prevent the consummation of an agreement made some time since for the settlement of the government's claims against the road. Mr. Morgan spoke throughout the day, severely arraigning the Pacific railroad managers. Late in the day the entire subject was disposed of by the withdrawal of the paragraph to which Mr. Morgan had offered his amendment. The deficiency appropriation bill was not completed up to the time of adjournment.

WASHINGTON, July 14.—SENATE.—The price to be paid for armor plate for the three new battleships now in course of construction was the theme of extended, and at times, lively debate in the senate Tuesday. Late in the day an amendment to the deficiency appropriation bill was agreed to, reducing the price of armor plate to $300 per ton, or $125 less than the amendment reported by the committee and recommended by the navy department as the minimum rate acceptable to the armor manufacturers. Another amendment inserted in the bill directs the secretary of the navy to investigate as to the establishment of a government armor factory, and to report to the next session of congress. The first vote was on an amendment limiting the cost of armor to $300 per ton. It was carried on a viva voce vote, Mr. Hale and one or two others being the only ones to vote in the negative. Mr. Butler offered an amendment authorizing the secretary of the navy to investigate and receive propositions for the establishment of a government armor factory and report to congress at its next session. It was agreed to. As amendment was adopted to pay balance of $2,000,000 due under the Spanish-American claims commission and then the deficiency bill was passed. Mr. Hale moved that the senate adjourn over Wednesday, but on a viva voce vote the motion was lost.

HOUSE.—The house was in session about three minutes and adjourned until Wednesday.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—SENATE.—The senate was in a deadlock for several hours Wednesday with business at a standstill while calls of the senate roll and other parliamentary expedients were resorted to. It was due to the effort to secure action on the resolution of Mr. Harris (Kan.) directing the return to the disposal of the government lien on the Union Pacific railroad under the terms of an alleged agreement. There were many roll calls on Mr. Harris' motion to consider the resolution, quorums appearing and disappearing and from 12 to 9 o'clock no final vote on the motion was secured. It finally went over until Thursday. Pending one of the roll calls a resolution was passed allowing the sculptor of the Sherman statue to erect a studio near the site of the statue. This led to a lively fusillade for some strictures by Mr. Morgan on the deadlock which had occurred.

HOUSE.—When the house resumed its session Wednesday after the recess Tuesday, Mr. Anderson (rep., Iowa) asked unanimous consent for the consideration of a joint resolution to permit the erection of a temporary studio on the terrace in front of the statue of Gen. Sherman, for the erection of which a contract has been made. There was no objection and the resolution was adopted. Mr. Cannon moved nonconcurrence in the senate amendments to the general deficiency bill, which came over from the senate Wednesday. The motion prevailed and Messrs. Cannon, Boutelle and Sayers were appointed conferees. Mr. Morris (rep., Minn.) asked unanimous consent for the consideration of a resolution to appropriate $10,000 of the unexpended balance of the appropriation for the Mississippi flood sufferers for the relief of those who have been rendered destitute by the recent floods near Aitken, Minn. Objection was made. At 12:30 the house adjourned until Thursday.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—SENATE.—Pacific railway affairs occupied the attention of the senate throughout the day, the only cessation relating to the pending judicial proceedings against the Union Pacific road finally went over until Friday. Early in the day Senators Stewart and White indulged in sharp personalities in connection with the contest over the San Pedro (Cal.) deep water harbor. The joint resolution was passed accepting the invitation of France to participate in the Paris exposition of 1900.

HOUSE.—No business was transacted by the house Thursday, immediately after the journal was approved a recess was taken on Mr. Cannon's motion until Friday. Mr. Cannon having given assurance to Mr. Bailey that in his opinion a report on or complete conference report on the deficiency bill would be ready by that time.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—SENATE.—The open session of the senate was brief throughout Friday. The Harries resolution relating to the Union Pacific railroad was further discussed. At 1:30 the senate went into executive session, remaining behind closed doors until 5 o'clock and then adjourned until Saturday.

HOUSE.—The house Friday agreed to the partial conference report on the general deficiency appropriation bill and then concurred in the senate amendment fixing the limit of cost of armor plate for the three battleships, now building, at $300 per ton. This was the main point in dispute between the two houses. A strong effort was made to induce the house to agree to a substitute proposition fixing the limit at $400, as recommended by the secretary of the navy, but after three hours' debate the house, by a vote of 142 to 45 concurred in the senate amendment. On motion of Mr. Broderick (rep., Kas.) the senate resolution directing the secretary of war to issue 1,000 tents for the use of the Grand Army encampment at Leavenworth, Kas., next October, was adopted. Mr. Cannon then smoothed up the conference report on the general deficiency bill which meantime had been agreed to by the senate. The house concurred in the senate amendment appropriating $2,000 for removing obstructions in the Kootenai river, Montana. Adjourned until Monday.

FINDLAY, O., July 19.—Ed Boyd, a wire drawer, was arrested Sunday morning charged with the complicity in the famous Binkesley robbery and murder which occurred several months ago. Boyd confessed to his girl that he was a member of the crowd. The latter told her brother, who swore out a warrant for his arrest. He stated to her that one of the gang was in California and three others were still in the city. The robbers secured $400 and so brutally beat John Binkesley that he died shortly after from the effects of his wounds.

MONTHLY SUFFERING.

Thousands of women are troubled at monthly intervals with pains in the head, back, breast, shoulders, sides hips and limbs. But they need not suffer.

These pains are symptoms of dangerous derangements that can be corrected. The menstrual function should operate painlessly.

McELREE'S

makes menstruation painless, and regular. It puts the delicate menstrual organs in condition to do their work properly. And that stops all this pain. Why will any woman suffer month after month when Wine of Cardui will relieve her? It costs $1.00 at the drug store. Why don't you get a bottle to-day?

For advice, in cases requiring special directions, address, giving symptoms, "The Ladies' Advisory Department," The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

Dr. J. T. Boulton, Cincinnati, O.

Dear Sir—I was taken with a severe cough the first of May; for two weeks I could not lie on my left side nor breathe through my left lung. I also had hemorrhages and my friends said I had consumption. I began taking Boulton's Cough Remedy and began to improve with the first dose, and within three weeks was entirely well. I can not say enough in favor of Boulton's Cough Remedy. Respectfully,

MRS. R. J. MARSHALL.

Ex-Governor Claud Mathews, of Indiana, will speak at Rising Sun, on the 30th of this month. He is one of Indiana's ablest Democratic orators, and being a native of Kentucky there is no doubt but what a large crowd of Boone county Democrats will go over to hear him expound democracy.

E. H. Howard, of Bullittsville, has sued the estate of J. S. Hudson in the Kenton Circuit Court, for $232 50. He claims that he had given to Mr. Hudson six puppies to raise, the agreement being that they were to share equally the proceeds of the sale of the dogs. The dogs were sold for $465, no part of which Howard has received.

H. W. Harrison, dentist, of Rising Sun, Ind., will be in Burlington on the first and third Monday in each month, to do work for those who wish anything in his line. He will be here two days on the visit. He is a son of the late R. F. Harrison, of Carrollton, and a graduate of the Pennsylvania College of Dentistry at Philadephia. He is highly recommended in his profession.

While at work out in the field, one day last week, R. S. Cowen, who lives just east of town, heard a noise which he supposed to be caused by a swarm of bees, but chinch bugs soon appeared about him, and upon looking up he discovered that they were so thick at intervals as to obscure the sky. He says that in 25 or 30 minutes enough of these pests to consume all the growing crops in the county, passed over him. They were going east.

Two river pirates, giving the names of Al. Shuck and Ben Tippett, were arrested on the Kentucky bar above town Tuesday afternoon by the marshal of Petersburg and taken to jail at Burlington. They are supposed to be the fellows who stole a rowboat and some other property at Bromley, Ky., Thursday night. The men had four shantyboats lashed together, but it is not known whether they had stolen them or not. Besides the men there were two women and two boys in the boats. Marshal Griffith and Policemen Rief and Genter, armed with four shotguns, went up the river on this side to head off the desperadoes in case they tried to escape from the Kentucky officer by coming over to this shore.—Lawrenceburg Press.

The officer and his prisoners have not been heard of at this place.

Mrs Hoover and Miss Ella Duncan will leave, to-morrow, for a visit of fifteen days' visit to Richmond, Va.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Ossman, of Beaver, were guests of County Clerk Adams and wife, last Saturday and Sunday.

J. L. Jones, of Utzinger, was in town, Saturday. John says he has a very fine crop of tobacco. He is an industrious and deserving young farmer, and it is a pleasure to know that fortune is smiling upon him.

W. T. Stott, the Jacksonian Democrat "war hoss" of Gray Gables, was in town, last Saturday. He is as full of political fight as ever, and says he has enlisted for during the war or until the free and unlimited coinage of silver is accomplished.

Col. J. M. Moody, from off the banks of that classic stream, Willoughby, was one of our early callers, Monday. The Colonel is living in fond anticipations of a late but abundant crop of watermelons, and a gay time at the Lawrenceburg fair next month.

John Furlong came home from Louisville, last Friday, to spend a few days with his sisters and friends before going to Bowling Green to take the superintendency of the Sunlight Life Insurance Company at that place. John has made a success in the business in which he is engaged, and he has many friends here who are glad to see him prospering.

Mr. A. G. Rice had a very narrow escape with his life as he was coming on from Washington, last week, to attend the funeral of his mother. As his train was coming through Virginia the engine left the track on a fill, and the car in which he was riding was badly wrecked, being cut in two and one-half of it missed into splinters. Three men were killed outright, them occupying a berth next Mr. Rice. Fortunately Mr. Rice escaped with a few slight bruises.

Mrs. Ernie F. Rice, wife of Mr. Moses S. Rice, died last Wednesday evening about seven o'clock, after a long and painful illness which she bore with true christian fortitude. The funeral services were conducted at the residence at 2 p. m., last Friday by Rev. J. A. Kirtley, after which the remains were interred in the family lot in the old cemetery at this place. Mrs. Rice was a daughter of Thomas W. and Susan E. L. Gray, of Elkton, Todd county, Ky., and was born July 26th, 1831, consequently she was in her 66th year. Her parents moved from Elkton to Rose Bank, near Louisville, where they both died in 1852. In 1845 she united with the Baptist church in Louisville, and about 1850 she came to Burlington to assist her brother, James W. Gray, who was conducting the school in Morgan Academy. It was here she met Mr. M. S. Rice, and returning to the home of her uncle, W. W. Fry, in Jefferson county, she and Mr. Rice were united in marriage, October 1st, 1852. Burlington becoming her home on February 19th, 1853, she united with the Baptist church here by letter from the Walnut Street Baptist church in Louisville. Mrs. Rice, at all times, took great interest in the affairs of her church, and was always in her pew, or instructing the young in the Bible at the Sunday School, until she was unable to attend.

The husband and three children, two sons and one daughter survive the deceased. The daughter, Miss Fanuie, and one son, Kirtley, are with their father. A. G. Rice, the other son, is employed in the Government service at Washington, D. C. While the entire community sympathizes with the bereaved family, especially do they condone with the daughter, whose devotion to her mother during her long period of illness is seldom equaled in this world. Her every thought was of her mother's comport, and she was constantly at her bedside to minister to her wants.

UNION, KENTUCKY.

FLORENCE, KY., July 15, 1897.

Mr. Gilbert and others:—

Gentlemen:—It gives me great pleasure to acknowledge to you how gratifying to me it was to receive from you so pointed a manifestation of your kind consideration and appreciation of me in your effort as patriotic Democratic Bimetallists to recommend to the Democratic voters of the county of Boone a suitable person (your humble servant) to represent them in the next General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Kentucky. I feel, my friends, it would be to me a great honor to tread in the foot-steps of the honorable gentlemen who served you so faithfully in the days that are past—men that have added much to the honor and dignity of the great county of Boone, who have broadened and elevated the general plans of legislative work, and by their intelligence and fidelity left an enduring ray of lustre upon their appreciating constituency.

Now, my friends, if I should accept your call and be elected as your next representative, I will say although with due humility, that I believe I do in an humble manner understand and appreciate the condition of affairs of our State and our country at the present time, and I must say in all candor that we, as a nation and as a people, are financially in a more deplorable condition than any nation upon the globe, and I regard this as to the liberties of the American people, and, as to the life of the American republic, the darkest hour of its history—with injudicious legislation each department of the government at the end of the year has a deficit. With its class legislation, its high protective tariff, our bright and fertile country is filled in its broad expanse from one end to the other with want and privations, and what was once the the finest and happiest country upon earth is fast becoming a land of paupers, and each hour of the day we hear the silent, measured tread of the American laborer as he searches in vain for work, and year after year thousands are added to our great army of tramps that infest our highways through the length and breadth of the land, and women and children stand by the wayside to beg a pittance of food to sustain their forms that are weakened and emaciated from want, who would joyously be self sustaining by their own industry under more auspicious circumstances, under a government more frugally and economically administered under a great mountain of debt, which is hourly increasing. We stand appalled at its gigantic proportions when we know its impossibility of ever being paied under our present circumstances; to the American farmer with ever falling prices of their farm productions it is an incubus of despair that leaves him without comfort at present or hope in the future, and for solution of the mystery of his undoing he appeals to metaphysics in vain and turns to philosophy without one ray of hope, and in our hopelessness we appeal to our country in its physical grandeur and beauty, and we find year after year its yields from its bowels and its surface ever encouraging stores of wealth, which yield no proper return to the great army of producers, who are held down and shackeled by the incorporate money power of the east, and Europe and the laborers of the great South and the great West who produce the all that makes us great as a nation, and he seemed happy and contented if a sufficiency of the product of the labor himself and family are meted out to him by the hands of his master barely sufficient to keep body and soul together, and raiment sufficient to protect them from the inclemency of the weather.

The Republican party tells us that over production—the John Sherman purchasing clause in his bill, and that we have too much money in circulation and it should be contracted, and that our present tariff law is responsible for our direct condition, and they also say that the two democratic administrations of Grover Cleveland are the fruitful source of all our evils. Well, I am willing to grant that they had much to do that kept us in the disastrous condition, but not all, and to sum up the catalogue of evils for which the only remedy they offer us is confidence.

For many long years we have waited patiently with unbounded confidence as no other people ever did, hoplug and praying that our Presidents and law makers would give us relief, but we have waited, hoped and prayed in vain—they fail to give us relief—they turn a deaf ear to the many appeals of the American farmer and laborer, and in the language of that great Virginian, when will it come? will it be to-day, to-morrow, next month or next year, or will it be when the patient and honest laborer is bound in chains, hand and foot, by the incorporate monopoly and trusts of the moneyed powers, until he loses all hope of freedom?

The Democratic party claims that the most important factor in all our trouble is our deplorable financial condition, and that all causes cited by the Republicans are but sounding brass and tinkling symbols, and we do say with the most profound justice and reason on our side that we can have no prosperity—we can have no confidence until Congress shall revise our present coinage law, when we can again see the two metals of our country with equal value and with equal privileges, with equal mintage and paying privileges as they had before the fatal year of 1873—then hope will drive out of the heart of the American people the despair and [illegible] of 16 to 1 with its bimetallic ring will open the silent factories and once more the American people will have work and to spare. God speed the day when this shall come. We will then shake off the shackles of bloody old England which is to-day the robber nation of earth, and whose rulers are the blackest waters to their species that the bright rays of God's sun ever shown upon. They have subverted more governments and enslaved more free and happy people than all the world through all the ages since Christ came to give life and liberty to the world.

In respect to the call. I am inclined to accept, and will make the race if there is no conflict between the Executive Committee and myself concerning the matter.

Yours Very Respectfully,
B. A. DULANEY.

SERMON TO CLERKS.

Cougars, Swindlers, Cheaters, Adulterators and Embezzlers,

All Will Go Down in the Avalanche of Destruction—The Honest Clerks Will Have Their Day in the Beautiful Realm Beyond the Sky.

Dr. Talmage's text Sunday was: Act xvii., 14: "And a certain woman named Lydia, a seller of purple, of the city of Thyatira, which worshiped God, heard us; whose heart the Lord opened." Prov. xxii., 29: "Seest thou a man diligent in his business? he shall stand before kings."

The first passage introduces to you Lydia, a Christian merchantess. Her business is to deal in purple cloths or silks. She is not a giggling nonentity, but a practical woman, not ashamed to work for her living. All the other women of Philippi and Thyatira have been forgotten, but God has made immortal in our text Lydia, the Christian saleswoman. The other text shows you a man with head, and hand, and heart, and foot all busy toiling on up until he gains a princely success. "Seest thou a man diligent in his business? He shall stand before kings."

Great encouragement in these two passages for men and women who will be busy, but no solace for those who are waiting for good luck to alight them, at the foot of the mountain, a casket of buried gold. It is folly for anybody in this world to wait for something to turn up. It will turn down. The law of thrift is as inexorable as the law of the tides. Fortune, the magician, may wave her wand in that direction until castles and palaces come, but she will, after a while, invert the same wand, and all the splendors will vanish into thin air.

There are certain styles of behavior which lead to usefulness, honor, and permanent success, and there are certain styles of behavior which lead to dust, dishonor, and moral default. I would like to fire the ambition of young people. I have no sympathy with those who would prepare young folks for life by whittling down their expectations. The man or woman will be worth nothing to church or state who begins life cowed down. The business of Christianity is not to quench, but to direct human ambition. There it is that I utter words of encouragement to those who are occupied as clerks in the stores, and shops, and banking houses of the country. They are not an exceptional class. They belong to a great company of tens of thousands who are in this country, amid circumstances which will either make or break them for time and eternity. Many of these people have already achieved a Christian manliness and a Christian womanliness which will be their passport to any position. I have seen their trials. I have watched their perplexities. There are evils abroad which need to be hunted down, and dragged out into the noonday light.

In the first place, I council clerks to remember that for the most part their clerkship is only a school from which they are to be graduated. It takes about eight years to get into one of the learned professions. It takes about eight years to get to be a merchant. Some of you will be clerks all your lives, but the vast majority of you are only in a transient position. After a while, some December day, the head man of the firm will call you into the back office, and they will say to you: "Now, you have done well by us; we are going to do well by you. We invite you to have an interest in our concern." You will be to that edict very gracefully Getting into a street car to go home, an old comrade will met you and say, "What makes you look so happy to-night?" "Oh," you will say, "nothing, nothing." But in a few days your name will blossom on the sign, either in the store or bank where you are now, or in some other store or bank, you will take a higher position than that which you now occupy. So I feel I am now addressing people who will yet have their hand on the helm of the world's commerce, and you will turn it this way or that; now clerks, but to be bankers, importers, insurance company directors, shippers, contractors, superintendents of railroads—your voice mighty "on 'change"—standing foremost in the great financial and religious enterprises of the day. For, though we who are in the professions may, on the platform, plead for the philanthropies, after all, the merchants must come forward with their millions to sustain the movement.

Be, therefore, patient and diligent in this transient position. You are now where you can learn things you can never learn in any other place. What you consider your disadvantages are your great opportunities. You see an affluent father some day come down a prominent street with his son who has just graduated from the university, and establishing him in business, putting $50,000 of capital in the store. Well, you are envious. You say: "Oh, if I only had a chance like that young man—if I only had a father to put $50,000 in a business for me, then I would have some chance in the world." Be not envious. You have advantages over that young man which he has not over you. As well might I come down to the docks when a vessel is about to sail for Valparaiso, and say, "Let me pilot this ship out to sea." Why, I would sink crew and cargo before I got out of the harbor, simply because I know nothing about pilotage. Wealthy sea captains put their sons before the mast for the reason that they know it is the only place where they can learn to be successful sailors.

It is only under drill that people get to understand pilotage and navigation, and I want you to understand that it takes no more skill to conduct the vessel out of the harbor and across the sea, than to steer a commercial establishment clear of the rocks. You see every day the folly of people going into a business they know nothing about. A man makes a fortune in one business, retires from it to another occupation more comfortable; goes into it and sinks all.

Many of the commercial establishments of our cities are giving their clerks a mercantile education as thorough as Yale, or Harvard, or Princeton are giving scientific attainment to the students matriculated. The reason there are so many men foundering in business from year to year is because their early mercantile education was neglected. Ask the men in high commercial circles, and they will tell you they thank God for this severe discipline of their early clerkship. You can afford to endure the wilderness march if it is going to end in the vineyards and orchards of the promised land.

But you say: "Will the womanly clerks in our stores have promotion?" Yes. Time is coming when women will be as well paid for their toil in mercantile circles as men are now paid for their toil. Time is coming when a woman will be allowed to do anything she can do well. It is only a little while ago when women knew nothing of telegraphy, and they were kept out of a great many commercial circles where they are now welcome; and the time will go on until the woman who at one counter in a store sells $5,000 worth of goods in a year will get as high a salary as the man who at the other counter of same store sells $5,000 worth of goods. All honor to Lydia, the Christian saleswoman.

The second counsel I have to give to clerks is that you seek out what are the lawful regulations of your establishments, and then submit to them. Every well ordered house has its usages. In military life, on ship's deck, in commercial life, there must be order and discipline. Those people who do not learn how to obey will never know how to command. I will tell you what young man will make ruin, financial and moral; it is the young man who thrusts his thumb into his vest and says: "Nobody shall dictate to me, I am my own master; I will not submit to the regulations of this house." Between an establishment in which all the employes are under thorough discipline and the establishment in which the employes do about as they choose is the difference between success and failure—between rapid accumulation and utter bankruptcy. Do not come to the store ten minutes after the time. Be there within two seconds, and let it be two seconds before instead of two seconds after. Do not think anything too insignificant to do well. Do not say, "It's only just once." From the most important transaction in commerce down to the particular style in which you tie a string around a bundle, obey orders. Do not get easily disgusted. While others in the store may lounge or fret, or complain, you go with ready hands, and cheerful face, and contented spirit, to your work. When the bugle sounds the good soldier asks no questions, but shoulders his knapsack, fills his canteen and listens for the command of "March!"

Do not get the idea that your interests and those of your employer are antagonistic. His success will be your honor. His embarrassment will be your dismay. Expose none of the frailities of the firm. Tell no store secrets. Do not blab. Rebuff those persons who come to find out from clerks what ought never to be known outside the store. Do not be among those young men who take on a mysterious air when something is said against the firm that employs them, as much as to say: "I could tell you something if I would, but I won't."

Again, I counsel clerks to search out what are the unlawful and dishonest demands of an establishment, and resist them. In the 6,000 years that have passed there has never been an occasion when it was one's duty to sin against God. It is never right to do wrong. If the head of the firm expects of you dishonesty, disappoint them. "Oh," you say, "I should lose my place then." Better lose your place than lose your soul. But you will not lose your place. Christian heroism is always honored. You go to the head man of your store and say: "Sir, I want to serve you; I want to oblige you; it is from no lack of fidelity on my part; but this thing seems to me to be wron, and it is a sin against my conscience, it is a sin against God, and I beg you, sir, to excuse me." He may flush up and swear, but he will cool down, and he will have more admiration for you than for those who submit to his evil dictation; and while they sink you will rise. Do not, because of seeming temporary advantage, give up your character, young man Under God that is the only thing you have to build on. Give up that, you give up everything. That employer asks a young man to hurt himself for time and for eternity, who expects him to make a wrong entry or change an invoice, or say goods cost so much when they cost less, or misrepresent a style of fabric. How dare he demand of you anything so insolent?

Again, I counsel all clerks to conquer the trials of their particular position. One great trial for clerks is the inconsideration of customers. There are people who are entirely polite everywhere else, but gruff and dictatorial and contemptible when they come into a store to buy anything. There are thousands of men and women who go from store to store to price things without any idea of purchase. They are not satisfied until every roll of goods is brought down and they have pointed out all the real or imaginary defects. They try on all kinds of kid gloves, and stretch them all ont of shape, and they put on all styles of cloaks and walk to the mirror to see how they look, and then they sail out of the store, saying, "I will not take it to-day," which means, "I don't want it at all," leaving the clerk amid a wreck of ribbons, and laces, and cloths, to smooth out a thousand dollars' worth of goods—not one cent of which did that man or woman buy or expect to buy. Now I call that a dishonesty on the part of the customer.

If a boy runs into a store and takes a roll of cloth off the counter, and sneaks out into the street, you all join in the cry pellmell: "Stop thief!" When I see you go into a store, not expecting to buy anything but to price things, stealing the time of the clerk, and stealing the time of the employer, I say too, "stop thief."

If I were asked which class of persons most need the grace of God amid their annoyances, I would say: "Dry goods clerks." All the indignation of customers about the high prices comes on the clerk. For instance: A great war comes. The manufactories are closed. The people go off to battle. The price of goods go up. A customer comes into a store. Goods have gone up. "How much is that worth?" "A dollar." Outrageous. A dollar." Why, who is to blame for that fact that it has got to be a dollar? Does that indignation go out to the manufacturers on the banks of the Merrimac, because they have closed up? No. Does the indignation go out toward the employer, who is out at his country seat? No. It comes on the clerk. He got up the war! He levied the taxes! He puts up the rental Of course, the clerk!

Then a great trial comes to clerks in the fact that they see the parsimonious side of human nature. You talk about lies behind the counter—there are just as many lies before the counter. Augustine speaks of a man who advertised that he would, on a certain occasion, tell the people what was in their hearts. A crowd assembled, and he stepped to the front and said: "I will tell you what is in your hearts: To buy cheap and sell dear." Oh, lay not aside your purity when you go into a store. Treat the clerks like gentlemen and ladies—proving yourself to be a gentleman or a lady. Remember, that if the prices are high and your purse is lean, that it is no fault of the clerks. And if you have a son or a daughter amid those perplexities of commercial life, and such a one comes home all worn out, be lenient, and know that the martyr at the stake no more certainty needs the grace of God than our young people amid the seven-times neated exasperations of a clerk's life.

Then there are all the trials which come to clerks from the treatment of inconsiderate employers. There are professed Christian men who have no more regard for their clerks than they have for the scales on which the sugars are weighed. A clerk is no more than so much store furniture. No consideration for their rights or interests. Not one word of encouragement from sunrise to sunset, nor from January to December. But when anything goes wrong—a streak of dust on the counter, or a box with the cover off—thundershowers of scolding. Men imperious, capricious, cranky toward their clerks—their whole manner as much as to say: "All the interest I have in you is to see what I can get out of you." Then there are all the trials of incompetent wages, not in such times as these, when if a man gets half a salary for his services he ought to be thankful; but I mean in prosperous times.

Some of you remember when the war broke out and all merchandise went up, and merchants made millionaires in six months by the simple rise in the value of goods. Did the clerks get advantage of that rise? Sometimes, not always. I saw states gathered in those times over which the curse of God has hung ever since. The cry of unpaid men and women in those stores reached the Lord of Sabaoth, and the indignation of God has been around those establishments ever since, flashing in the chandeliers, glowing from the crimson upholstery, rumbling in the long roll of the tenpin alley. Such men may build up palaces of merchandise Heaven high, but after awaile a disaster will come along, and will put one hand on this pillar, and another hand on that pillar, and throw itself forward until down will come the whole structure, crushing the worshipers as grapes are mashed in the wine-press.

Then, there are boys ruined by the lack of compensation. In how many prosperous stores it has been for the last 20 years that boys were given just enough money to teach them how to steal! Some were seized upon by the police. The vast majority of instances were not known. The head of the firm asked: "Where is George now?" "Oh, he isn't here any more." A lad might better starve to death on a blasted heath than take one farthing from his employer. Woe be to that employer who unnecessarily puts temptation in a boy's way. There have been great establishments in these cities, building marble palaces, their owners lying worth millions, and millions, and millions, who made a vast amount of their estate out of the blood, and muscle, and nerve of half-paid clerks. Such men are—well, I will not mention any name. But I mean men who have gathered up vast estates at the expense of the people who were ground under their heel. "Oh," say such merchants, "if you don't like it here, then go and get a better place." As much as to say: "I've got you in my grip, and I mean to hold you; you can't get any other place."

Oh, what a contrast between those men and Christian merchants who today are sympathetic with their clerks—when they pay the salary, acting in this way: "This salary that I give you is not all my interest in you. You are an immortal man; you are an immortal woman; I am interested in your present and your everlasting welfare; I want you to understand that, if I am a little higher in this store, I am beside you in Christian sympathy." Go back 40 or 50 years to Arthur Tappan's store, in New York—a man whose worst enemies never questioned his honesty. Every morning he brought all the clerks, and the accountants, and the weighers into a room for devotion. They sang. They prayed. They exhorted. On Monday morning the clerks were asked where they had attended church on the previous day, and what the sermons were about.

AN UNHAPPY DUCHESS.

Cecily of York, Mother of Two Kings of England.

"Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown." It lay uneasily in Shakespeare's time, and before his time, if history tells the truth; probably it lies uneasily even now. But it wasn't only the actual head which wore a crown that was uneasy in time past; the head which came too near to wearing a crown had its own sorrows. The Wars of the Roses wiped out most of the nobility of England, though the plain people suffered little; and many well-born mothers mourned husbands and sons slain in the wars. But few, if any of them, had such a succession of sorrows as one who might have seemed born only to enjoy the days of her life—Cecily, wife of Richard Plantagenet, duke of York, and leader of the White Rose.

Cecily Nevil was granddaughter of "Old John of Gaunt, time-honored Lancaster," and so great-granddaughter of King Edward III.; her father was Ralph Nevil, earl of Westmorland, her mother Joan Beaufort, the duke of Lancaster's daughter. Cecily Nevil married Richard Plantagenet when she was about 20 years old, in 1440; and they had four sons and two daughters, Edward, Edmund, George, Richard, Anne and Margaret. For 15 years no especial sorrows reached her; her sons were strong, her husband was the principal subject in the kingdom.

But in 1455 the Wars of the Roses began with the bloody battle of St. Albans, on May 23, and the earl of Stafford, the nephew of Duchess Cecily, was killed there. At Northampton, on July 10, 1460, her brother-in-law, Stafford, duke of Buckingham, was killed; and the terrible fight at Wakefield on December 30, 1460, robbed her at once of two nephews, a brother, a son and a husband. In the battle fell Sir Thomas Nevil and Sir Edmund Bourchier, nephews, and her husband, Richard. Immediately after the battle her brother Ralph, earl of Salisbury, was executed, and her son Edmund, earl of Rutland, only 12 years old, was murdered by John, Lord Clifford, in cold blood, in revenge for the death of his father in battle.

When sorrows came to Duchess Cecily, they did not come alone. Another nephew, Sir John Nevil, fell at Towton, March 29, 1461. Then came a breathing spell; but in 1469 Sir Henry Nevil was executed, and at Barnet, April 14, 1471, fell still other nephews—John Nevil, marquis of Montague, and Richard Nevil, earl of Warwick, famous as "the King Maker." On May 4, 1471, the battle of Tewkesbury was fought, and immediately afterward Edward, prince of Wales, who, though a Lancastrian, had married the duchess' niece, the King Maker's daughter Anne, was murdered by her sons, the dukes of Clarence and Gloucester. They kept the killing in the family, but it was killing just the same.

Two years later, so that the duchess should not get unaccustomed to grief, her son-in-law, Thomas Holland, duke of Exeter, who had had to beg his bread in exile, was found dead on the seashore at Dover, and in 1478 her son, George Duke of Clarence, was drowned in a butt of Malmsey, his wife Cecily having been poisoned previously; her son-in-law, Charles the Bold, duke of Burgundy, had been killed in battle in 1477. Then there was a little respite for the poor duchess. In 1483 died her son, Edward IV., only 41 years old, the first one of her descendants to die a natural death since 1455—28 years. In the same year her two grandsons, Edward V. and Richard, duke of York, were murdered by their uncle and her son, Richard, duke of Gloucester, who became king as Richard III., and in his turn was killed at Bosworth field on August 22, 1485, when only 35 years old. Her son-in-law, Sir Thomas St. Leger, was executed in 1483, and a grandnephew, a second Henry Stafford, duke of Buckingham, was executed in 1487.

Except for a few small deaths, such as two husbands of a niece, Catherine Nevil, and a grandson, John, earl of Lincoln, and a grandson, Edward, prince of Wales, the duchess lost no more relatives, and died peacefully in 1495. All but the prince of Wales, of these four, died by violence. Of her children, Margaret, duchess of Burgundy, was the only one who survived her. During the 46 years, 1455-95, she had seen 25 of her relatives die by violence and three by disease.

But she herself did not rest even after death. When Henry VIII. destroyed the monasteries, the Collegiate Church of Fotheringay was razed to the ground, and the bodies of Richard Plantagenet and Cecily Nevil, duke and duchess of York, were exposed to view in their graves. They lay so for several years, until Elizabeth, their great-great-granddaughter, queen of England in her own right, caused them to be reinterred, with the solemnities befitting the funeral of two such distinguished persons.

So Cecily Nevel, mother of two kings and grandmother of one king, having died, at last found rest.—N. Y. Sun.

His Point of View.

"After all, bloomers serve a very useful purpose," said the confirmed bachelor.

"I'm surprised to hear you admit it," returned the new woman.

"Not at all, not at all," answered the confirmed bachelor with all the courtesy he could assume. "I wish to be no more than just. Bloomers have frightened off a good many men who would otherwise have been married."—Chicago Post.

SUNCOING THE PEOPLE.

The Slippery Methods of McKinley and Hanna.

The McKinley organs are at their old tricks again. They are trying to fool the people into the belief that McKinley has a well-matured policy for revolutionizing the currency system and bringing order out of the financial chaos for which their party is alone responsible.

This time it is a commission into whose hands McKinley will place the task of "revising the currency." A few weeks ago he sent a "commission" to Europe to sound European governments on the question of international bimetallism. This is the policy to which his party is committed, in a half-hearted way, by its St. Louis platform. That same instrument also binds the party to maintain the single gold standard until Europe consents for us to go back to the financial system under which the United States grew rich and powerful and threatened soon to lead the procession of nations.

The congress of the United States alone has the power and authority to revise or in any way amend the nation's currency system. This power and authority McKinley would take from congress and invest in a commission of his own choosing. The purpose is two-fold. First, the McKinley plan is to obscure the currency issue in a fog of personal obligation in which he would not be directly involved, and, second, to save himself from the embarrassing situation in which he is sure to be placed by the next congress, that will be democratic and that will send to him, or to the senate, a bill for the remonetization of silver.

There is excellent ground for the suspicion, however, that the president's purpose is not as broad as either of these plans suggests. Behind his proposal to lay before congress, now just on the point of adjourning, a plan for the betterment of the country's fiscal system is a desire to help his friend Hanna. The boss of the republican party has a tremendous fight on his hands. He is running for election to the senate on a platform reaffirming the principles enunciated at St. Louis and commending the administration of President McKinley. The Ohio voters are asking Hanna not only about that promised prosperity, but also what McKinley is going to do for bimetallism. Six months of his administration have slipped by. No boom has made its appearance and the president has been silent as the tomb on the currency question. A "terse" message to congress now on that question, though it be clothed in terms whose ambiguity would bring hope and solace to the weak minded of both sides, would give Hanna some campaign material. This he sadly needs. The McKinley organs are to help in this game. Already they are indulging in surmises as to the strength of the message on the side of bimetallism. It is a petty piece of politics in keeping with McKinley's and Hanna's methods. Because they fooled the country once with those methods they will try the game again.—St. Louis Republic.

REFORMING THE CU[illegible]

Unfulfilled Promises of President McKinley.

The presidential horn-tooter who announced several days ago that a currency reform plan was to spring instanter from the head of Jove is explaining now why the spring has not been made. The president, it seems, does not lack courage, he is going to show this abundantly some time or other, but he doubts. "The whole problem of the present moment is one of expediency, looking to the future." To enforce the doctrine of expediency there are protests from the republicans in congress, one-half of whom are opposed to the issuance of a currency message.

It appears, moreover, that "the problem of the present moment" is "looking to the future" with such an intent gaze that the strain on the eye is terrific. It discerns that something is to be done, but is inclined to think that it will be nothing startling. Next winter the administration bill will be presented, but, saith the tooter:

"Mr. McKinley may not be radical enough on this question to please the extremists, and the administration bill will not be a radical or violent measure. But it will be sound and adequate, and will have the better chance for success if it is framed on conservative lines."

Translated out of the language of cant and hypocrisy, all this seems to mean that Old Resolute, the abundantly courageous, is pursuing the same policy now that he pursued before his nomination. It will be remembered that he was a silver man when silver was dominant. He was a follower of Bland and an advocate of the Sherman law. During the debate over the repeal of that law he shacked Presidents Cleveland, the pre-eminent champion of repeal, because he was an enemy of the white metal, and because the white metal was supposed to be good politics.

Later still, when the Ohio convention met in the spring of 1896, Mr McKinley continued to speculate on the political value of silver. The convention adopted the worst currency plank of the year, an ambiguous fiddle-faddle that was intended to "catch 'em a-coming and a-going." But severe pressure from the east prevented a compromise at St. Louis. Gold was in the ascendant and Old Resolute became a gold man.

Since the election there has been a reaction, and the president responds, quick as mercury, to the new atmospheric conditions. He is thinking of the elections next fall and the year after. He withholds his message now because he is sparring for time. Next winter he will do his level best to promote some sort of a compromise. He will not "please the extremists." Does this mean that he will revert to the position of the Ohio platform? Does it mean that the republican party is to get back to the plan of half-measures and vague promises under his bold leadership?—Chicago Journal.

DOUBLE-DEALING HANNA.

As Campaign Manager and Employer of Help.

As chairman of the republican national committee this Hanna conducted successfully a campaign which resulted in his creation as senator. In that campaign he promised unlimited prosperity. It was to come immediately upon his success in November. It was postponed conveniently until the inauguration of the successful candidate in March. And we have been assured by Mr. Hanna, who has attained the senatorship and has certainly secured prosperity for himself, that it is here with both hands and every foot.

But the coal miner Hanna, meeting demands for an increased wage from coal operatives, announces that nothing can be done toward the granting of the request at this time because business conditions—that is, general prosperity—does not authorize the granting of the petition.

Therefore, the Hanna who was the prophet of prosperity and its beneficiary is not the Hanna who is digging coal from the bowels of the earth and refuses an increase of wages to operatives.

Under the existing tariff bituminous coal is protected by a duty of 40 cents a ton. Senator Hanna, the necromancer of Ohio, the great medicine of the country, the rain-maker who compels fructifying clouds in the bending heavens, has succeeded in increasing that protective duty on bituminous coal from 40 cents per ton to 67 cents a ton. The bill in which this increase of tariff tax has been made has passed both houses and is now under consideration by committees of conference. They will speedily agree and the great tariff enactment, called by its friends a revenue producer, will go into operation. What will be its effect? We are told time and again by republican tariff makers that the tariff is levied in the interest of labor alone. It is designed to dignify, enrich and ennoble American labor. If the labor cost was not a factor republicans tell us they would not clamor for a protective tariff. Then the 27 cents a ton additional is not for revenue, but is for wage, designed to save American labor—that is, labor employed in America and admitted freely from European countries—from the competition of pauper labor of Nova Scotia, where alone the bituminous coal entering into competition with American-mined bituminous coal is found.

Why is it, then, that, the bill being practically perfected, American miners do not instantly receive the additional 27 cents per ton?

Because, according to Coal Miner Hanna, business conditions are such as not to authorize it. An appeal ought to lie from Philip drunk to Philip sober, from the coal-mining Hanna to the necromancer Hanna, from the capitalist who digs in the bowels of the earth to the senatorial tariff maker.

The tariff is laid primarily for the benefit of labor why is not the 27 cents a ton placed immediately at the disposal of coal miners?

We do not want an answer from Coal Miner Hanna; we do want an answer from Tariff Maker Hanna.—Chicago Chronicle.

—The whole tariff question has now seemingly degenerated to a high-handed game of "grab" between various interests, each striving to get as much as possible from the other and each seeking to shift the reasonable burden of taxation that belongs to it. HAY AND HOG RACK.

A Combination Structure Which Seems Hard to Beat.

A late number of the Canadian Farmers' Advocate contained the accompanying description and illustrations of a combined hay or sheep and cattle rack by one of its correspondents:

"The accompanying figures represent a combined hay and sheep rack which is easily detachable and convenient to store away under cover. Any ordinary strong wagon box will answer if clients are put on to hold the double end and center-boards. Fig. 1 represents the side of the box, 1½ inches thick and any desired width and length, with cleats on each end and in the center, nailed on with 3-inch wire nails to receive the cross pieces of the sides of the rack. Fig. 2 represens the front board, which is double. The lower portion of the figure is removed from its proper position to show how the sides are held in place. A is of 2x4-inch scantling. B is of 2x6-inch hard wood. The stake is to build the front of the load against and hold the lines while loading. These double boards are bolted or nailed with heavy wire nails, well clinched. C is of 1½x4-inch hard wood. The center and hind boards are made the same as Fig. 2 except that no stake is needed. Fig. 3 shows one of the sides held together with bolts or wire nails. A 7-foot rack requires side pieces 3 feet 7 inches long. Fig. 4 represents the hay rack complete. It is necessary to have a good, strong bottom. It is also well to have wagon rods having thumb nuts pass through the box across the center and ends to hold it firmly. A long rack should have four cross pieces. Fig. 5 shows how the sides are lifted off or placed in position. A boy can readily do this. The box is shown 13 inches deep, but 11 or 12 will answer. Fig. 6 represents the end boards for the sheep rack. Standards A are 2x4-inch scantling 3 feet 7 inches long. D is the double backboard 12 inches wide which holds the hind shelving or hurdle in place. B B are nailed to standards A on the outside. Fig. 7 shows the sheep rack. The end boards are placed in position, and the right-hand shelving is put on the left side of the box and the left on the right. The end uprights of the sides slip down between standards A of the end and the sides of the box. This holds the shelvings upright. The end boards slip up and down on C, Fig. 7. The rack is my own contrivance. I gave it a good trial last year and am well satisfied with it."

HINTS FOR STOCKMEN.

There is complaint against the work done by dehorning clippers and preference expressed for the saw. The clippers are all right if used according to directions.

The balky horse and the swearing driver are two nuisances where the horse should have the monopoly. Keep your temper and in some way get the horse to think of something else. As soon as you do he will go.

Hard roads bang up the feet of the horse, and it is a question if hard roads are not as wearing on the horse as soft roads are. But independent of that hard roads are desirable when they can be had without too much burden to the farmer.

The 1,200-pound hog—and one man claims to have one—is not desirable or profitable. We once saw a pen of ten hogs where aggregate weight was 10,000 pounds. Hogs to weigh must be kept until the second year, and that of itself is not advisable.

Secretary Wilson thinks that hog cholera can be "abolished" and will study the thing from A to Z. It has been studied already, but the more it is studied the worse it is. Feed less corn, breed from more mature stock and keep the hogs under health ful conditions are all the science there is to the subject.—Western Plowman.

Home Market the Best.

What would a farm be that did not contain a flock of hens? The eggs are considered adjuncts to the farm, and they enter into many of the household dishes. In estimating the profits from poultry the eggs and poultry consumed by the family should be given the same value as though such supplies were purchased. The "family" markets in the United States excel all others, and no farmer should sell his eggs and live on something less desirable, but enjoy the same luxuries as those who are willing to have the best in the cities. Supply the home market first.—Farm and Fireside.

Barometers on the Farm.

The farm is full of barometers, all more certain than the best almanacs ever concocted. Before the rain comes the dog is lazy and wants to sleep, the cat washes its face, and the horses are restless and easily frightened. The geese are noisy, the poultry seek their roosts, ants are in a hurry and skurry laying in supplies, spiders crowd together on the wall, toads and snails and slugs are on the garden paths and birds cry "weet, weet," the frogs croak, and peafowl become very excitable and talkative.

CULTIVATING GRASS.

No Crop Grown on the Average Farm Pays Better.

There is no part of farming at the present day so much neglected as the meadow, and there is no crop grown that pays better. The general idea of the farmer is that the meadow does not require any cultivation or care. "The meadow," he says, "is all right. I seeded this field three or five years ago; but I cannot see why I get so light a crop."

It is quite plain you have been robbing the land for three years and returning nothing. Worse than that; you have allowed the moss to creep in and smother the roots which you have robbed of their natural sustenance, without returning anything to them or driving off the moss from the root-bound grass. What kind of a corn crop would you get if you did not cultivate it? To insure a big crop of hay cultivate it. Haul, during the month of December, say from six to eight loads to the acre of barnyard manure and spread it while hauling as evenly as you can with a fork. Then as early as you can get on the meadow in March, or as soon as the frost is out and the ground dry enough to get on with a team, take a good harrow and drag it thoroughly, and then cross-harrow it. You will imagine you are going to ruin your meadow, but you are simply loosening the roots and giving them a chance; and when harvest time comes you will find you not only did not injure your meadow, but greatly increased your crop of grass, and also improved your ground. This matter of cultivating grass is not a mere "theory." It is a principle, proved to be correct by actual trial with profitable results. In 1882 Josiah Bagley, of Serena, from a six-acre meadow took 12 loads of hay, with no after-crop. The following season he manured and cultivated the same six acres substantially as outlined above. Some of his neighbors laughed at him; but about the 10th of July, 1883, he cut 19 loads of grass from these six acres, and in the last of September cut a second crop of nine loads. He says: "I am an advocate of cultivating grass."—J. E. Porter, in Prairie Farmer.

TREATMENT OF MANGE.

Recipe for a Salve Which Is Said to Produce Good Results.

Scurf or mange is sometimes difficult to cure. It is caused by a small mite that burrows in the skin, and to get rid of it the mite must be destroyed. The treatment mentioned has such a tendency, but as the application is most effective when applied locally there has been too much reliance upon the internal treatment. The sulphur internally is not harmful, but it will take too much time; the process is too slow, says Breeders' Gazette.

In the first place, the pens and sleeping quarters should be frequently disinfected with crude carbolic acid and lime. The surface affected should be treated with a salve made as follows: Four ounces of salicylic acid, the same amount of hyposulphite of sodium, eight ounces of cosmoline or lard; and if the lard is used a [illegible] beeswax should be added to make the mixture firm. The cosmoline or lard should be melted over a slow fire, and while it is warm enough still to remain a liquid stir in the other ingredients slowly until they are thoroughly mixed. When cold apply to the diseased skin of the hogs every day until a cure is effected. If many hogs are to be treated the amount should be doubled or quadrupled, as the necessities may require. In stirring in the salicylic acid care should be used to keep the face away from the mixture, or the person who does the work will have a violent case of sneezing. The salve mentioned is good for man or beast where there is a violent and persistent eruption of the skin. Do not forget to disinfect the pens and sleeping quarters of the animals. The crude carbolic acid is good, but when applied strong enough to be effective it is likely to make the animals sick.

FOR CUTTING STALKS.

A Homemade Contrivance That Does Its Work Well.

A cheap stalk-cutter is made by taking a sound log, A, about 4 feet long and 18 to 24 inches in diameter. Blades of steel, B, 3 feet long and 4 inches wide, edged as in sharpening a plow, are secured to the log as shown in the cut. The shanks that hold the blades should be set forward so that in revolving the edge will strike the ground perpendicularly. A common roller frame is put on and the tongue (C) is fastened behind a cart or wagon, and it is ready for operation. The number of blades to put on depends on the size of the log and the length pieces the stalks are to be cut into. For a log 18 inches in diameter 5 blades will suffice. The log must be heavy enough so that the weight will cut through the stalks.—G. W. Waters, in Ohio Farmer.

Our Wealth in Grass.

Mr. Scribner, of the department of agriculture, has recently collected some very interesting facts about American grasses. He says: "We have better grasses and a greater variety of them native to our soil than we can ever get from Europe." Of clovers we have no less than 60 species, all native to the country, and there is an equal number of different "blue grasses," besides 20 "grazing grasses" and a great variety of others. Yet, Mr. Scribner says, hardly more than a dozen of all these kinds of native grasses have been brought into cultivation.

AN APPEAL FOR FREEDOM.

The Cuban League of New York Asks for Financial Aid.

The Cuban league of New York, whose president is Ethan Allen, and vice presidents such men of national reputation and honor as Chauncey M. Depew, Roswell P. Flower, etc., has issued the following appeal asking for financial aid in its patriotic efforts in behalf of struggling Cuba:

"To the People of the United States: A brave and generous people will aid the oppressed. Cuba is under a brutal tyranny. Inspired by our history she freely bleeds for independence, and appeals to us for help. We must hear, and hearing, promptly act. An irrepressible conflict between republicanism and monarchy was inaugurated by Washington and his compatriots, and as trustees of the great political inheritance from them we must be in that conflict whether we will or not, whenever any intelligent people fires the opening gun for freedom. By an unparalleled career of courage and sacrifice the Cubans have proved their right to self-government. Our people, to keep untarnished the heroic crown of our fathers, which our government at Washington for three years has failed to do, must extend material support to the embattled heroes on Cuban soil. The passive policy of this administration, in emulation of the last, still repressed the nobler impulses of our people, while foul murder continues. To give now is more than to fight. He who supplies the weapon is brother in achievement to him who wields it.

"A plan for small subscriptions at local points, deposited there with banks or business firms, reaches all. Let those who will serve send addresses of themselves and bank to the Red, White and Blue League, New York.

DOCTORS AND PATIENTS.

Odd Tales of Physicians of the Old School in England.

A physician with a large practice sees strange sights—some humorous, some pitiful, and some irritating. Sir Benjamin W. Richardson, commenting on the fact that these singular sights tend to produce in the doctor's mind the feeling "All things are alike to all," says he once surprised a bishop by saying that the writer of Ecclesiastes must have been a doctor.

Once a woman who kept a fuel store brought her husband to Dr. Richardson in a little cart with his body covered with small coal, under the idea that by this means she was keeping him warm. Another woman, to whom he prescribed an ether mixture, therefore volatile, first made it warm, in order that it might be agreeable to take.

He was called in the early days of his London practice to visit a servant in a large house, and overheard the mistress ask the housekeeper: "What sort of a man is he, and how did he come? Did he drive?"

"I think you'll like him, ma'am," replied the housekeeper; "but, poor man! he is only a walking doctor yet."

People made a distinction between the walking and the driving doctor in former days. A physician with a large paying practice used to ride in a chariot which cost 300 guineas. Now people do not care if a doctor comes in a landau, or a brougham, or a cab, provided he comes quickly.

The old physician was known by everybody as a doctor. He wore a long, broad-tailed coat, knee breeches, Hessian boots, a frilled shirt with ruffles at the wrists, and a large white cravat of the finest lawn. He carried a cane with a perforated box at the top, which held camphor or some other smelling substance. When he was called to a consultation, he expected to find a table spread with wine glasses, a decanter of brandy and a bottle of wine.—Youth's Companion.

Popularity and a Slap.

One of the incidents that conduced to give the queen temporary popularity in Ireland was this: She and the prince, with the prince of Wales and Prince Alfred, were driven in their roomy carriage to Mr. Dargan's exhibition. The streets and windows were thronged. There were only bright faces, and the air was filled with cheers. She bowed very affably, the prince held his hat a little before his forehead, and hardly bowed. The prince of Wales took off a cap with a white band and held it rather gracefully, as if to show that he should have bowed were the queen not present. Prince Alfred looked a little sulky and kept his cap on his head. The queen did not appear to see him, but she did. She whipped the cap off his head with one hand, and with the other gave him such a slap in the face. It was done in an instant, and without any change of countenance. Thundering cheers marked the approval of the multitude.—Contemporary Review.

Did the Job Himself.

It is related of the late Duc d'Aumale that lack of decision is illustrated by the following incident: When about to enter a room at a reception in 1873 he was asked by the usher what name should be announced. "Gen. le Duc d'Aumale," he answered; and then, suddenly changing his mind, he said: "No; announce his royal highness, Duc d'Aumale." But, not feeling satisfied with this, he said: "Say merely Duc d'Aumale." Finally he said: "Say nothing," and walked in unannounced.—N. Y. Times.

TERSELY PUT.

ROPING IN GROOM AND BRIDE.

A Policeman Interferes with an Old Cheshire Wedding Custom.

Of the many marriage customs which still survive in many parts of rural England, the one peculiar to the county of Cheshire, of roping a wedding party, is certainly interesting, though it was the subject of magisterial investigation at Sandbach petty sessions the other day. Three men named Dodd, Duckworth and Burrows were summoned for obstructing the highway at Betchton, a village two miles from Sandbach. The other Saturday a rustic beauty was united to her faithful swain at that village, and the happy couple were driving away from the church, down Betchton hill, when the observance of the marriage custom peculiar to the neighborhood brought the carriage to a sudden stop. At the horse's head stood Duckworth and Burrows holding the ends of a rope across the road. While the liberal display of rice and old shoes enables the friends of brides and bridegrooms elsewhere to speed the newly-wedded couple in Cheshire it seems to be the custom to delay their departure till they pay their "footing." The driver was at no loss, for it was part of the custom not to proceed till those inside had given the rope-bearers a shilling each. Another villager named Dodd saw no reason for his exclusion from the benefits of the custom, since, after Duckworth and Burrows had received the coin, he promptly fixed up another wedding rope across the highway. Once more had the wedding carriage to stop, and the funds of the couple to defray the expenses of the honeymoon were the poorer by another shilling. Unfortunately, however, a police officer, who happened to be driving in the neighborhood, was a highly interested spectator of the proceedings. He caused Duckworth, Burrows and Dodd to be summoned, and they were fined, the two first named half a crown each and Dodd five shillings.—London News.

AN EASY WASHING METHOD.

To Lighten the Labor of Cleaning White Clothes.

When breakfast is cooking, or after, separate the white clothes from the colored, placing all the white clothes, cleanest on top, in a tub and cover with cold water. Before sitting down to breakfast cut up half a bar of soap in a small tin pail or crock—I keep one for that purpose—add one quart of water, or less will do, and place over fire; when hot add four tablespoonfuls of kerosene, let come to a boil and set off from fire.

Place the washboiler on the stove with sufficient water to scald the clothes, it can be heating while you are at breakfast. When ready to commence washing add about half, or more, of your boiled soap to the water in boiler, stirring well, then wring out your cleanest white clothes first, and put in boiler to scald, let them scald for 20 or 30 minutes.

When scalded, drain out of boiler into clear, warm water, turn all pieces wrong side out, suds well and put in rinse water.

If your boiler will not hold all at first add more boiled soap to each boiler of clothes.

No rubbing is necessary except dirtiest pieces. Your clothes will be white as snow, with no smell of oil about them. Wash colored clothes in suds, adding hot water from boiler as needed, wring out into warm suds and they are ready for rinse and the line.

This recipe is for soft water, we use soft cistern water.—Washington Home Magazine.

Table Decorations.

Table decorations for the warm months are, of course, as light and as cool in appearance as possible. The cloth may be adorned with trailing flowers or vines; hops are lovely for this purpose, or any other pale green foliage. For the table-center a block of ice is effectively used, set upon a flat stand of silver. It is a high, narrow cake surrounded by a light wire frame from which floral decorations of any desired character may be arranged. Even delicate wild flowers and creepers will "keep" for a long time if thus cooled.—N. Y. Post.

Pertinent Questions.

Why Will a Woman Throw Away Her Good Looks and Comfort?

Why will a woman drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence and miss three-quarters of the joy of living, when she has health almost within her grasp? If she does not value her good looks, does she not value her comfort?

Why, my sister, will you suffer that dull pain in the small of your back, those bearing-down, dragging sensations in the loins, that terrible fullness in the lower bowel, caused by constipation proceeding from the womb lying over and pressing on the rectum? Do you know that these are signs of displacement, and that you will never be well while that lasts?

What a woman needs who is thus affected is to strengthen the ligaments so they will keep her organs in place. There is nothing better for this purpose than Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The great volume of testimony which is constantly rolling in, proves that the Compound is constantly curing thousands of just such cases.

The following letter from Mrs. Marlow is only one of many thousands which Mrs. Pinkham has received this year from those she has relieved—surely such testimony is convincing:

"My trouble commenced after the birth of my last child. I did not know what was the matter with me. My husband went to our family physician and described my symptoms, and he said I had displacement and falling of the womb. He sent me some medicine, but it did little good. I let it go on about two years, and every time I did any hard work my womb would come down. Finally a lady friend advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which I did. The first bottle helped me so much, I continued to take it right along. My back was almost the same as no back. I could not lift scarcely any weight. My life was just a drag to me. To-day I am well of my womb trouble, and have a good, strong back, thanks to Mrs. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. L. Marlow, Milford, Ill.

At Last Kentucky has raised a wheat crop from which the best quality of flour can be made. Our millers are delighted as it has been impossible to make good flour from the wheat grown last year. The grain grown this season in this vicinity averages from sixty to sixty-three pounds to the bushel and is extra good—Cynthiana Times.

Tol. Stone, the negro rapist of Glasgow, who was given seven years for his crime, should have been hanged by law or otherwise. Geo. Dinning, negro at Franklin who killed one of the leaders of a mob that visited his house to order him out of the country, should have been acquitted. He was given the same sentence as the rape fiend. One violated no law in defending his home. The other the moment he became a ravisher, forfeited his right to live in a civilized community. Such creatures should be exterminated like mad dogs.—Hopkinsville Kentuckian.

Kentucky river in Mercer county is said to be lined with dead fish—principally buffalo, while perch and cat—the game fish seeming to escape the destroyer, says the Harrodsburg Sayings. The gentleman with whom we talked didn't seem to think that the dynamiters were responsible for the destruction; but that the slaughter should be laid at the door of a very muddy, slow rise that stirred up the old, rotten black mud at the bottom of the stream, which is actually declining the finny tribe. He said that the water looks black, a phenomenon never noticed before.

While some workmen were excavating for the foundation of a tenement house on the ground of the widow of Col. L. T. Moore, at Cattlettsburg, human bones of four persons were unearthed. Without doubt the bones are those of Horatio Catlett, the founder and orginal owner of the town site, together with those of his father and two daughters. The graves were known to be thereabouts, but the exact location was unknown until this find. The Catlett family settled at the mouth of Big Sandy river in 1799, and maintained their hold in part by possession, and in part by purchase of interests in the Capt. Savage, Virginia, military grant, which was surveyed out by George Washington, himself, about ten years before the Revolutionary war.

The biggest money ever paid for a field crop was the $1 50 per pound received by the Cuban Tobacco Growers' Co., for the crop of 1,000 pounds of cured leaf per acre, grown in Southern Florida last fall, from imported Havanna seed. The crop on 90 acres sold for $138,000.

The duty imposed by the new tariff on imported cattle will have a prohibitory effect as far as Mexico is concerned. During the last 25 months in theneighborhood of 500,-000 head of cattle have been imported into this country from Mexico, paying to this Government about $750,000.

The chinch bugs are playing havoc with some corn fields in Crittenden, says the Press. From almost every neighborhood come reports of the devastation of these little bugs, and there seems to be no way to head them off. Since the wheat has been cut they have deserted the wheat fields and growing corn is the objective point of the vast army.

A Washington correspondent says. Over 20,000,000 packages of vegetables, flower and field seed have been distributed by the department of agriculture during the past spring. This distribution has given to each member of congress 40,000 packages of seed, at a total cost of $130,000. Over 1,000,000 of these packages were flower seed and nearly 300,000 field seed the balance being a great variety of vegetables. In the entire distribution nearly every variety of vegetable known to the agriculturists were distributed. There were 32 varieties of beans, 10 varieties of beets, 23 varieties of cabbage, 19 varieties of sweet corn, 18 kinds of cucumbers, 30 kinds of lettuce, 17 kinds of watermelons, 11 varieties of carrots,and 15 varieties of onions. The entire amount of seeds distributed were sufficient to plant an area of 345 square miles, or about six times the size of the district of Columbia.

The Stanford Journal says: David Thompson tells of a lot of cattle which he bought last November, some of which have characteristics very much like some politicians. He says when he bought them there was one long-faced, thin steer that looked like a free silver Democrat after the election. He did not believe that he would do any good, but now he has great cakes of fat all over his body and is one of the most valuable animals in the lot. Another he calls a free turnpike steer, because he tears down fences and goes where he pleases; he has hair in his forehead six inches long, and will make a tough piece of beef. He has one he calls "John G.," which he always had to pet and bire and feed with dainty meals. On one occasion he got in with 82 other cattle and was dotailed, when he returned to his lot and agreed to eat any kind of food. Another steer which he calls "Boilvar," is the most noted steer in the bunch. When he bought them he was a good looking animal, but Thompson always said there was something wrong with him. When purchased he weighed 940 pounds, but with the best treatment he has lost flesh until he only weighs 730 pounds. An investigation revealed the fact that he chews his cud two ways.

About noon last Thursday Lew Malcomb was shot by Allie Frazier at New Liberty. The weapon used was a 38 caliber Smith & Wesson pistol, the ball entering under the left arm and penetrating the lung on that side. To this Frazier interposed some objection and some words were passed between the two, with the result as stated.

A distressing and fatal accident occurred in the edge of Gallatin county last Sunday in which Reuben Morris, the 18 year old son of "Bud" Morris, of Carson, lost his life. He, in company with George Satchwell, were at Johnson's Mill about two miles from Bramlett church, when Morris was exhibiting to Stachwell his pistol, a 38 calibre, and in doing so the pistol was discharged, the ball taking affec under the lower rib and passing through the liver. Mr. Johnson hurried to him at once, when young Morris remarked to him: "My race is run." He was taken to his home and lived about four hours, the accident occuring at about 2 o'clock and he breathed his last shortly after six.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXII. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, JULY 28, 1897. NO. 40.

THE members of the Boone county Democratic Executive Committee are hereby notified that a meeting of said committee will be held in my office in Burlington at 2 p. m., on Monday the 2d day of August, and each member is earnestly requested to be in attendance.

D. E. CASTLEMAN, Chairman.

Speaker Reed and Senator Hanna have adjoured.

THEY are having a warm campaign in the fourth Congressional district in Indiana—Holmans district.

THE Courier-Journal is now engaged in the hardest job it has ever undertaken. It is trying to convince somebody that it has always occupied its present position on the money question.

SENATOR HANNA has very little use for the colored voters since the election, and now threatens to have them thrown out of his office when they call to see how much longer he intends to keep them out of a job.

WHAT assurance has Mr. Hindman that those men who gave him the nomination for Clerk of the Court of Appeals will vote for him at the November election? Their record shows that they will not do to depend on at the polls.

AN Indiana Judge has decided that the law of that State prohibiting the sale of convict made goods is unconstitutional. An agent for the Kentucky penitentiary was arrested in Indiana, and his was made a test case, with the result above stated.

THE report of the conference committee on the Dingley tariff bill did not worry the chair-warmers in the House. Speaker Reed favored its adoption practically as it came to him, which virtually disposed of it, and the vote taken was only a formality.

AT Vevay, Indiana, a father bought two cow-hides and gave his two daughters, and then, with pistol in hand, stood by and witnessed the terrible whipping they gave a young man who had insulted them It is said the young fellow will have to eat and sleep standing up for several days.

THE colored Republicans escaped nominations at the Louisville city convention, last week, as easily as they are in the habit of doing. Of course they will indulge in their usual denunciations of such treatment by the party, the success of which depends on their votes, but they will walk meekly up at the November election and take their medicine.

EVERYTHING the Democrats do in Kentucky is violent and vindictive in the eyes of the Louisville Post. The Democrats are proceeding about their own business without asking any advice or assistance from the Post, and for that reason it continues to heap abuse upon them, at the same time having the effrontery to suggest to them how they should conduct their own affairs.

IT seems that the A. P. A's dominated the Republican city convention in Louisville, last Wednesday. The convention hall was flooded with a circular making war on the priesthood, and calling upon the voters to rally to the opposition of Catholicism. The circular started by saying that the battle royal between Americanism and Romanism will be fought in that city and county at the November election of 1897.

SENATOR LINDSAY charges the Democrats with the responsibility of the Dingley tariff bill, but then Lindsay has gotten himself into a position that renders him liable to charge anything. Why should he be scoring the Dingley bill when he assisted to put in power the party that has always been pledged to high tariff? When a fellow allows himself to be used as a cat's paw he ought not to complain of the burn he receives.

THE Western Argus gives W. C. P. Breckinridge this center shot: "A man that appeared as a delegate before the State Democracy in Lexington last year, and inside of two months thereafter appeared as a delegate to the sound-money convention which assembled in Indianapolis, and then within two months after that appeared under the Republican device as a candidate for pie, is a man dangerous to behold much less to follow."

KALAMAZOO, July 23, 1897.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

I solicit a small portion of your space in which to promulgate a few thoughts relative to the legislative mill to be pulled off in this county in the next few weeks.

There is a very large proportion of our able local statesmen who have elevated their legislative lightning rods, and are patiently awaiting a stroke by the nominating bolt. They have not openly avowed their candidacy—they are what are known as "receptive" candidates; in other words each is exceedingly anxious for the nomination to come his way, but he does not desire to stir up any strife in the party ranks.

Sizing Judge Botts up by that voluminous call, I thought I saw in him a sure winner. The boom his home people started for him was decidedly formidable, and I thought it would so intimidate all aspirants as to remove them from the race, and you can imagine my surprise, when, in a day or two, I learned that the Judge's boom had received a serious puncture, the charge being made that not many years since the Judge, with others, signed and published a protest against the election of the regular Democratic nominee for Congress, in this district, and that he refused to vote for and scratched the Democratic nominee for Congress at the regular election. Such a charge as this will place the Judge at a great disadvantage in a canvass, but being a man of very considerable ability it remains to be seen how successfully he may be able to controvert the accusation or justify the act.

I was not only entertained but very much edified by B. A. Dulaney's article in the last number of the RECORDER. The sentiment expressed by the first part of the article thrilled me with delight. The principles enunciated are democratic, pure and simple, and the article, as a whole, bore the ear-marks of a student, and could have been evolved only by a master mind that had delved deep into political economy while the lamp consumed midnight oil. I was fascinated with Doc's style of dealing with intricate governmental problems of the day, and had concluded that he would make an ideal representative; but along about the conclusion of the sixth "stanza" I began to become confused, and, for my life, could not determine whether Doc intended to declare himself a candidate for the legislature or to declare war on bloody old "Hengland." But there are two things that stand out in his article as clear as a noonday sun, viz: that he is for 16 to 1 and against old England, two pretty good planks to have in a platform.

I hope Doc and the Executive Committee will come to an amicable understanding so he can enter the race without being required to carry any weight. I don't believe the committee will interpose any objection to his being a candidate.

I see that the Bullittsville admirers of "Uncle Reuben," the blue-eyed child of destiny, are anxious that he enter the halls of legislation once more, and to that end they have called upon him to become a candidate for representative. Uncle Reuben is a man of great legislative experience—sound in democracy, and an eloquent and forcible speaker. He has devoted considerable time to politics, and is a hard man to down when he sets his heart on an office. Those wanting to represent Boone in the next General Assembly had better keep an eye on the willy Reuben Conner. He has struck very few snags in his political career, and it is said he is a terror when he dons his campaigning costume and goes forth among "the good people." He and Judge Botts both hailing from Walton precinct would make things sultry in that corner of the county.

B. L. Rice has some warm friends who have done considerable prospecting in his interest as a candidate, but what conclusion they have drawn as to his availability is not known to outsiders. Mr. Rice has been a prominent figure in the politics of this county for several years. He is thoroughly in accord with his party, but for all that there are those who say he is handicapped, but surely it is not because of any defect in his Democracy. Boone could go further and do worse than to elect B. L. Rice.

Time forbids the mention of other stars in the political constellation that are of no less magnitude than those above referred to, and before the flag drops several of them may receive the encouragement necessary to convince them that they can win easily, and prove their faith by entering the contest.

A clear field, a free ballot and a fair count, and may the devil take the hindmost is a good motto for the coming race, and is suggested by HOHO.

It is said that Charles Schramm will be a candidate for Representative from Boone county, Ky. Well, our neighbors across the river could not possibly do better than by nominating Charley for that position.—He possesses all the qualities for a good representative—is social, energetic, of correct deportment, has excellent business habits, is a good talker, and withal composed of splendid timber for a legislator. Let the good people of Boone county elect Mr. Schramm and his many friends in this city will rapturously rejoice over the victory won by one who is deserving of their confidence. —Lawrenceburg Register.

Friend Schramm is as popular in Lawrenceburg as he is on this side of the river, and if he enters the race the man who wins out ahead of him will have a hard race. Charley is a man who can not be outclassed at anything you choose to put him.

The politicians who is in politics for spoils only can no more comprehend the motives that animated the large part of the participants in that splendid Louisville convention last week than a hoodlum can the character of a true gentleman.—Owingsville Outlook.

Very well can the leading spirits of that convention afford to lay off awhile, especially when it is enforced. They have been chronic office-seekers, and have drawn their support from the public crib for many years. There was Mr. Carlisle, who has been in office nearly all his life; C. J. Helm, who was a chronic officeseeker and is Judge of the Campbell Circuit Court; W. W. Stephenson, who has been chasing every office from State Senator to constable; Wm. Lindsay, United States Senator, who commenced holding office as Sheriff and let very few escape him from there to his present position; W. C. P. Breckinridge, who the Democrats kicked out of office for immorality; and—pshaw! why name more when a large majority of the delegates were defunct officeholders, and stale politicians?

The duty on bituminous coal is left at 67 cents a ton in the conference tariff bill. This is more than the wages paid to our miners per ton. Whom does protection protect?—New York World.

Mr. Hanna is mistaken in saying that the people expect too much. The fact is that many of them expected just about what they are getting, and that's what's the matter. —San Francisco Examiner.

Those men who are rushing off to Alaska will miss the great and good times we are going to have right here at home. Mr. Dingley's remarks yesterday ought to ease the rush for the gold fields.—Washington Post.

McKinley is the man who ought to do the kicking it any is to be done about the report that Mark Hanna has taken up his quarters at the White House, though it seems that Mark Hanna has McKinley bound so that he cannot kick at anything.—Louisville Dispatch.

Col. Breckinridge, through the Lexington Herald, criticised the action of Judge Falconer in acquitting Harris for shooting Merritt, the despoiler of his home. What the Colonel has to say along this line is not as weighty as it might be. He is not a model by any means.—Owen Herald.

Mr. Hanna emphatically, indignantly and profanely denies that he is sleeping at the White House. His landlady should be more discreet and not jump at conclusions and start such stories every time she discovers that the honored Senator's bed has not been slept in.—Denver Post.

By the way, what has become of the suffering Cubans, who, when Cleveland was President, caused the Republicans such sorrow, but now that McKinley and Hanna are Presidents, seem to have ceased from suffering, and to have become an unknown people to the powers that be?—Louisville Post.

Senator Hanna will be asked at every stage of this year's campaign to produce the long-promised wave of prosperity. Perhaps he has it concealed about his person, but doesn't want to "spring it" till after the election. After so long a period of distress and calamity the shock of a sudden return to business health might be more than the people could stand.—Enquirer.

Ten years ago it was not considered respectable to be a Republican in Kentucky. Now it really isn't respectable to be a Republican of the kind that is running party affairs here and in Washington. They used to call it the "nigger party" now the negroes are about the only decent ones left who affiliate with the gang headed by Hunter, Deboe, Todd, Taylor, Franks, Sapp, Erdman and their tribe. And the negro suffers in reputation by the association.—Capital.

NEW TARIFF BILL

Changes That Have Been Agreed Upon by Conference Committee.

The Differences Between the House and Senate Are Very Clearly Explained.

Mr. Dingley States the Amount of Revenue That Is Expected to Be Realized.

The Conference Bill as Passed by the House and Sent to the Senate.

Washington, July 20.—The tariff bill was pushed through the conference stage yesterday after two hours' discussion before the full conference committee—democrats and republicans. The democratic \ conferees offered amendments to the report, but were met with the statement that it would merely consume time to urge amendments, as they would be rejected.

Mr. Wheeler (dem., Ala.) offered amendments placing cotton bagging and cotton ties on the free list; also a substitute proposition for rebates on these articles. These and other amendments were withdrawn, however, as there was no prospect of favorable action on them.

Revenue Expected.

As to the question of revenue to be raised by the bill, Mr. Dingley, in his speech, pointed out the difficulty resulting from the large anticipatory importations. Until next year, he calculated, would raise $225,000,000, $75,000,000 more than the present law. Over $40,000,000 had been lost in this year's revenues by the importations of wool and sugar and other things, the duty on which was raised in the bill, so that he calculated that the bill this year would raise $185,000,000.

New Sugar Schedule.

The full text of the sugar schedule as finally agreed upon by the house and senate conferees is as follows:

"Sugar not above No. 16 Dutch standard in color tank bottoms, sirups of cane juice, melada, concentrated melada, concrete, and concentrated molasses, testing by the polariscope not above 75 degrees, 36 per pound, and for every additional degree shown by the polariscope test .035 of one cent per pound additional, and fractions of a degree in proportion; and on sugars above No. 16 Dutch standard in color, and on all sugar which has gone through a process of refining, 1.95 cents per pound; molasses testing above 40 degrees and not above 56 degrees, 3 cents per gallon; testing 56 degrees and above, 6 cents per gallon; sugar drainings and sugar sweepings shall be subject to duty as molasses or sugar, as the case may be, according to polariscope test. Provided, that nothing herein contained shall be so construed as to abrogate or in any way affect the terms and provisions of the treaty of commercial reciprocity concluded between the United States and the king of the Hawaiian islands on January 30, 1875, or the provisions of any act of congress heretofore passed for the execution of the same."

Duty on Sugar Cane.

The conference restored the house rate of 20 per cent on sugar cane. Saccharine is made $1.50 per pound and 10 per cent. ad valorem.

The confectionery paragraph is changed to read as follows:

"Sugar candy and all confectionery not specially provided for in this act, valued at 15 cents per pound or less, and on sugars after having refined when tinctured, colored, or in any way adulterated, 4 cents per pound and 15 per cent. ad valorem; valued at more than 15 cents per pound, 50 per cent. ad valorem. The weight and the value of the immediate coverings, other than the outer packing case or other covering, shall be included in the dutiable weight and the value of the merchandise."

The republican conferees also made public a statement concerning the conference report in which they set forth the changes made. Of sugar the statement says:

"The house differential between raw and refined sugars and the general features of the house schedule are preserved, and the senate amendments increasing the differential to one-fifth and providing for a reduction of one-tenth of the duty on raw sugars not above 87 degrees, which would have given a duty of 1.39 on 88 degree sugar and only 1.26 on 87 degree sugar, are not adopted.

Beet Sugar.

"In deference to the wishes of those interested in beet sugar production, that the senate rate of 1.95 cents on refined sugar might be retained as an inducement to encouragement to this industry, the duty on raw sugars is increased .075 cents, so as to make the increase on them the same as the increase on refined sugar, and thus leave the differential between raw sugar and refined the same as in the house bill. And to meet the objection which has been urged that the house rates on low grade raw sugar show a higher ad valorem than those on the higher grades the duty on 75 degree sugar is reduced .05 cent and then the duty per degree increased regularly from .03 cent (as proposed in the house bill) to .03½ cent, in order to raise the duty on raw sugars the same as on refined.

"By this arrangement the duty on raw sugars of 100 degrees purity is raised from 2.75 cents (as proposed originally by the house) to 2.82½ cents, and the duty on refined sugar is raised from 1.87½ cents (as proposed originally by the house) to 1.95 cents, thus giving the same differential of .12½ cent between raw and refined sugar at this point as was originally given by the house.

"As this arrangement will increase the revenue over $2,000,000 and at the same time give additional encouragement to the production of sugar in this country, it is thought to be a desirable consummation."

Wool.

The changes in the wool schedule made in conference leave the duties on disputed items as follows:

Paragraph 354—The duty on wools of the first class, which shall be imported washed, shall be twice the amount of the duty to which they would be subjected if imported unwashed; and the duty on wools of the first and second classes which shall be imported scoured shall be three times the duty to which they would be subjected if imported unwashed. The duty on wools of the third class, if imported in condition for use in carding or spinning into yarns, or which shall not contain more than eight per cent. of dirt or other foreign substance, shall be three times the duty to which they would otherwise be subjected. The conference restored the house rates on first and second class wool.

Paragraph 356—On wools of the third-class and on camel's hair of the third class, the value whereof shall be 12 cents or less per pound, the duty shall be four cents per pound.

Paragraph 359—On wools of the third class and on camel's hair of the third class the value whereof shall exceed 12 cents per pound the duty shall be seven cents per pound.

Paragraph 362—Shoddy, 25 cents per pound; mungo, flock extract, yarn waste, thread waste, and all other waste, composed wholly or in part of wool, and not specially provided for in this act, 30 cents per pound.

Paragraph 363—On yarns made wholly or in part of wool valued at not more than 30 cents per pound the duty per pound shall be 2½ times the duty imposed by this act on one pound of unwashed wool of the first class; and in addition thereto, upon all the foregoing, 40 per cent. ad valorem.

Paragraph 367—On blankets and flannels for underwear, composed wholly or in part of wool valued at no more than 40 cents per pound the duty per pound shall be the same as the duty imposed by this act on five pounds of unwashed wool of the first class and in addition thereto 30 per cent. ad valorem; valued at more than 40 cents and not more than 90 cents per pound, the duty per pound shall be three times the duty imposed by this act on one pound of unwashed wool of the first class and in addition thereto 35 per cent. ad valorem.

On blankets composed wholly or in part of wool valued et more than 50 cents per pound the duty per pound shall be three times the duty imposed by this act on one pound of unwashed wool of the first class and in addition thereto 40 per cent. ad valorem. Flannels, composed wholly or in part of wool valued at above 60 cents per pound shell be classified and pay the same duty as women's and children's dress goods, coatings, linings, Italian cloths, and goods of similar character and description provided in this act: provided, that on blankets over three yards in length the same duties shall be paid as on cloths.

Paragraph 370—On clothing, ready made, and articles of wearing apparel of every description, including shawls, whether knitted or woven, and knitted articles of every description made up or manufactured wholly or in part, felts not woven and not specially provided for in this act, composed wholly or in part of wool, the duty per pound shall be four times the duty imposed by this act on one pound of unwashed wool of the first class and in addition thereto 40 per cent. ad valorem.

Schedule on Carpets.

Paragraph 372 — Aubusson, Axminster, Moquette and Chenille carpets, figured or plain, and all carpets or carpeting of like character or description, 60 cents per square yard, and in addition thereto, 40 per cent. ad valorem.

Paragraph 373—Saxony, Wilton and Tournay velvet carpets, figured or plain, and all carpets or carpeting of like character or description, 60 cents per square yard, and, in addition thereto, 40 per cent. ad valorem.

Paragraph 374—Brussels carpets, figured or plain, and all carpets or carpeting of like character or description, 44 cents per square yard, and, in addition thereto, 40 per cent. ad valorem.

Paragraph 375—Velvet and tapestry velvet carpets, figured or plain, printed on the warp or otherwise, and all carpets or carpeting of like character or description, 30 cents per square yard, and, in addition thereto, 40 per cent. ad valorem.

Paragraph 376—Tapestry Brussels carpet, figured or plain, and all carpets or carpetings of like character or description printed on the warp or otherwise, 28 cents per square yard, and, in addition thereto, 40 per cent. ad valorem.

Paragraph 377—Treble ingrain, three-ply, and all chain Venetian carpets, 22 cents per square yard, and, in addition thereto, 40 per cent. ed valorem.

Paragraph 378—Duich wool and two-ply carpets, 18 cents per square yard, and, in addition thereto, 40 per cent. ad valorem.

Wood.

The following was substituted for the paragraph on hewn timber:

"Timber hewn, sided, or squared (not less than 6 inches square), and round timber used for spars or in building wharves, one cent per cubic foot."

The paragraph relating to sawed boards and planks was amended by striking out the words "white pine" et $1 per 1,000 feet and by restoring the house rate on all the other items of the schedule, making the rates 50 cents per 1,000 feet for each side planed or finished, $1 for tongued or grooved, and $1.50 if planed on two sides and tongued and grooved. The legislative provision to this paragraph inserted by the senate was changed so as to read as follows: "That if any country or any dependency shall impose an export duty upon saw logs, round manufactured timber, steve bolts, shingle bolts, or heading bolts, exported in the United States, or a discriminating charge upon boomsticks or chains used by American citizens in towing logs, the amount of such export duty, tax, or other charge, as the case may be, shall be added as an additional duty to the duties imposed upon the articles mentioned in this paragraph when imported from such country or dependency."

Fence posts are reduced from 20 to 10 per cent. ad valorem. The house rate of 30 per cent. ad valorem is restored on casks and barrels, sugar box shooks, etc.

The house rate of two cents per thousand and 15 per cent. ad valorem is restored on toothpicks, as is the house rate of 40 cents per thousand upon hunters' skewers.

Tobacco.

The conference accepted the senate rate and language on wrapper and filler tobacco, except that the rate on wrapper tobacco was made $1.85 per pound instead of $1.75. The house rate on imported cigars, cigarettes, etc., of $4.50 per pound and 25 per cent. ad valorem was restored.

The senate made the rate $4 per pound and 25 per cent. ad valorem. There were no other changes in the schedule on imported tobacco.

Silk.

The conference accepted paragraph 386 as amended by the senate with the addition of the words "or plush" before ribbons in the first line, making plush ribbons dutiable at $1.50 per pound, and 15 per cent. ad valorem.

Paragraph 387, relating to woven silk fabrics, was accepted as amended by the senate, except that the rate on cloth other than black dyed in the thread or yarn and weighted in the dyeing so as to exceed the original weight of the yarn with the rate ranging from $2.25 per pound to $2.50 per pound, and that on cloth dyed or printed in the piece from $3.25 to $3.50.

Cotton.

Paragraph 391, relating to manufactures of silk, is changed so as to modify the description of jacquard figured goods by providing that they shall be "made on looms," and that they should be "dyed in the yarn and contain two or more colors in the filling." The rate is left at 50 per cent ad valorem.

Paragraph 392, in relation to cotton thread and carded yarn, was amended by the conference so as to provide that thread colored, bleached, combed, etc., so as to be advanced beyond the condition of singles by grouping or twisting of two or more single yarns, on all numbers exceeding 20, and up to 80, are made dutiable at one-quarter of a cent per pound per pound, and on threads of the same class numbering 80 and above, three-tenths of a cent per pound per number. In the original house bill there was no division as to numbers, all being made dutiable at the rate of three-tenths of a cent per number per pound. The senate left the house rate of three-tenths of a cent on the first division, and provided an ad valorem of 60 per cent. on the second.

A portion of the last part of paragraph 392 relating to plushes, velvets, etc., which was stricken out by the senate, was inserted, though in changed form. The insertion is a proviso to the effect "that no ordinary composed of cotton or other vegetable fiber weighing seven ounces or over per square yard shall pay a less duty than 7 cents per square yard and 25 per cent. ad valorem."

In paragraph 320 the senate amendments are all accepted, except that reducing the rate on cotton suspenders and braces from 45 to 40 per cent. ad valorem. The paragraph inserted by the senate (29½¢) providing for an additional duty of 10 per cent. ad valorem on cotton yarns finer than No. 10 single and on all manufactures made of such yarns, was stricken out by the conference.

Agricultural.

Raw cotton, which the senate made dutiable at the rate of 20 per cent. ad valorem, was restored to the free list.

Paragraph 218, relating to cattle, as it passed the senate, was changed somewhat as to rates, $3.75 being fixed as the rate on cattle valued at not more than $14 per head, instead of $3.50, while a rate of 27½ per cent. ad valorem was fixed on cattle of a greater value, instead of 25 per cent. in the senate amendment.

The difference between the two houses on beans was compromised, being made 45 cents per bushel.

The duty on seeds not specially provided for was made 30 per cent., the senate rate being 25 and the house rate 40 per cent.

The paragraph in regard to packed fish was amended as passed by the senate, so as to be made to apply specially to fish in packages.

Paragraph 261 was amended so as to specifically provide that dressed, split, pickled or salmon should be dutiable at the rate of one cent per pound, as well as the pickled or salted article.

Fruits.

Paragraph 262 in regard to apples, etc., was amended so as to omit currants, and the house rate of 2 cents per pound on such dried fruits as apples, peaches, pears, and berries prepared in any manner was restored.

The grape paragraph was altered so as to require the payment of 2½ cents per cubic foot "of the capacity of the barrels or packages."

Orange and lemon peels preserved and cocoanut meat are restored to the house rate of 2 cents per pound.

On pineapples the senate rate was retained.

On unshelled filberts and walnuts the house rate of 3 cents per pound prevailed, while on shelled filberts and walnuts the senate rate of 5 cents per pound was sustained.

The conference struck out the senate amendment providing for a duty of 2 cents per pound on dead game and game meats.

Paragraph 282, relating to cocoa, was amended by leaving out cocoanut oil.

Spirits and Wines.

The conference made but one change in the schedule relating to spirits, wines, etc., proper.

The senate rate of 30 cents per gallon on still wines containing less than 14 per cent. of absolute alcohol in packages was changed to 40 cents per gallon. The house rate was 60 cents.

The rates on mineral waters were compromised, being made 20 cents per dozen on pint bottles, 30 cents per dozen on quart bottles. House rate of 40 cents and the senate rate of 24 cents.

Chemicals.

The conference struck out the senate rate paragraph relating to carbonate of soda and potash and partly refined argols and restored the house paragraph.

There was a compromise on white lead at 2¾ cents per pound.

The house paragraph in regard to oxide of zinc and white paint was restored.

There was a general change of rates on lead, white acetate of lead being fixed at 3¼ cents per pound, brown, gray, or yellow at 2½ cents, nitrate at 2½, and litharge at 2¾ cents per pound. There were generally compromises between the rates of the two houses.

Phosphorus was compromised at 18 cents per pound.

The house rate on sulphur was restored. The senate made an amendment to the sulphur paragraph allowing crude brimstone to come in at 50 cents per ton. The conference struck this out, including this article in the $8 rate, as originally fixed by the house.

Paper.

On mechanically ground wood pulp the house rate of one-twelfth of one cent per pound, dry weight, was restored.

The paragraph in regard to printing paper was entirely rewritten. As amended it is as follows:

"Printing paper, unsized, sized, or glued, suitable for books and newspapers, valued at not above two cents per pound, three-tenths of a cent per pound; valued above two cents and not above two and a half cents per pound, four-tenths of one cent per pound; valued between two and a half and three cents per pound, five-tenths of a cent; valued between three and four cents, six-tenths of a cent; valued between four and five cents, eight-tenths of a cent; valued above five cents, 13 per cent. ad valorem."

There is also a proviso exacting an additional duty of one-tenth of a cent per pound for each dollar per hundred duty per cord imposed by any country exporting wood pulp to the United States.

Lithographic Prints.

There are some changes in the paragraph relating to lithographic prints. The rates on such prints on paper not exceeding $-1,000 of an inch in thickness is reduced from the senate rate of 25 cents per pound to 20 cents.

The next classification covers paper ranging from 35 to 400 square inches, fixing the rate at 35 cents per pound. Paper exceeding 400 square inches a rate of 35 per cent. ad valorem is fixed. The senate rate on prints is reduced from 10 to 9 cents and on lithographic from 9 to 8 cents.

"Books for children's use containing illuminated lithographic prints not exceeding in weight 24 pounds each, and all booklets and fashion magazines or periodicals, printed in whole or in part by lithographic process or decorated by hand, 8 cents per pound."

The senate rate of 20 cents per pack and 20 per cent. ad valorem fixed on playing cards was fixed at 10 cents per pack and 20 per cent. ad valorem.

Internal Revenue.

The internal revenue tax amendment relating to cigars and cigarettes made by the senate was changed to read as follows:

"On cigars of all descriptions weighing more than three pounds per 1,000, $3 per 1,000; on cigars made of tobacco or any substitute weighing not more than three pounds per 1,000, $1 per 1,000; on cigarettes made of tobacco or any substitute weighing more than three pounds per 1,000, $3 per 1,000; on cigarettes weighing not more than three pounds per 1,000, $1 per thousand."

The senate amendment providing for a tax on stocks and bonds was stricken out.

Metals.

The house rate of 8-10th of a cent per pound was restored on round iron of less than 7-16 of an inch in diameter and bars or shapes of iron or hammered iron not specially provided for.

The house rate on iron in slabs, blooms, etc., less finished than iron in bars and more advanced than pig iron was also restored.

The rate on iron bars, billets, etc., in the manufacture of which charcoal is used as fuel, was made uniformly 9 cents per ton.

In paragraph 127 the senate rate of 1 2-10 cents per pound on iron or steel anchors was increased to 1½ cents per pound, the house rate. Other amendments to the paragraph made by the senate were accepted.

Paragraph 129 reads as follows:

"Hoop or band iron, or hoop or band steel, cut to lengths or wholly or partly manufactured into hoops or ties, coated or not coated with paint or any other preparation, with or without buckles or fastenings, for bailing cotton or any other commodity, 5-10 of a cent per pound."

Steel Rails.

On railway bars, T rails, and punched iron or steel flat rail the conference restored the house rate of 7-20 of a cent. On railway fishplates the senate rate of 4-10 of one cent per pound stands.

Paragraph 132 providing for an extra duty of 2-10 of a cent per pound on iron and steel sheets or plates, galvanised or coated, was allowed to stand, but was made to apply only to "zinc spelter or other metals, or any alley of these metals."

The house rate of 2 cents per pound was restored on polished or planished sheets of iron or steel. On taggers' iron or steel, tinplates and terne plates the house rate of 1¼ cents per pound was restored. The house receded from its proviso that the benefit of the drawback provision in section 24 shall not apply to articles manufactured in this country from imported tinplates, etc.

The conference amended the proviso to paragraph 136 reteting to wire rods so as to make it read as follows:

"That all wire or steel rods which have been tempered or treated in any manner or partly manufactured shall pay an additional duty of one-half of one cent per pound."

There were several changes in the paragraph relating to iron and steel wire.

Changes in Cutlery.

In the paragraph relating to cutlery there was but one change from the senate schedule.

The conference made material changes from both the senate and house rates on shotguns, both in classification and rates of duty.

On barrels for railway purposes a compromise makes the duty 1½ cents per pound and 1¼ cents on ingots, blooms, etc. Aluminum, in crude form, was made dutiable at 8 cents and in plates at 13 cents per pound.

The rate on Dutch metal was made 6 cents per package of 100 leaves.

The language and rates of the senate amendments of the paragraph in relation to lead ore were accepted without change, but lead in pigs was made dutiable at 2½ cents per pound, instead of 2 cents, as fixed by the house, and 2¼ cents as fixed by the senate.

The senate rates on mica were advanced, those on the unmanufactured article being fixed at 6 cents per pound and 20 per cent. ad valorem, those on cut mica at 12 cents per pound and 20 per cent. ad valorem.

The rate of 6 cents a pound on nickel, as provided by the house, was restored.

Earthenware.

The senate language in paragraph 88, relating to tiles, is retained, except that the requirements that the tiles shall be for floors and walls is stricken out. The house rates were restored on Portland, Roman and other cements.

Paragraph 91, relating to gypsum, was amended so as to read as follows:

"Plaster rock or gypsum, crude, 50 cents per ton; if ground or calcined, $2.50 per ton; pearl hardening for papermakers' use 20 per cent. ad valorem."

The paragraph relating to pumice stone was only changed, the rate being made $6 per ton on the manufactured article and 15 per cantum ad valorem on the unmanufactured.

The house paragraph relating to clays and earths was adopted, and the house rates on dried asphaltum and bitumen. On pulled cork the rate was fixed at 11.50 per ton on the unmanufactured article and $3 per ton on that which has been manufactured.

The house rate on undecorated rockingham earthenware, paragraph 94, was restored.

In the next paragraph, relating to china, the house provision including china cups, with or without movements, was restored, making the duty 60 per centum ad valorem.

The senate receded from its amendments to the rates on plain bottles, jars, etc.

Glass.

The paragraph (100) in regard to cut or ornamented glass bottles was not changed as to rates.

The conference restored the house rates and language on unpolished cylinder, crown and common window glass, but retained the senate rates and language on polished cylinder and crown glass.

In the paragraph (103) relating to fluted, rolled, ribbed, or rough plate glass the senate rates and language were retained except the house proviso to the effect "that all the above plate glass when ground, smoothed, or otherwise obscured shall be subjected to the same rate of duty as cast polished plate glass unsilvered."

The senate rates were retained on cast polished plate glass, both unsilvered and silvered, as provided in paragraphs 104 and 105.

The house rate of 10 per cent. ad valorem, in addition to other rates chargeable on window, crown, cylinder, or plate glasses where those glasses are bent, ground, frosted, etc., is reduced to 5 per cent.

The two houses compromised the rate on freestone, granite, sandstone, unmanufactured or undressed, making it 12 cents per cubic foot.

Flax.

The thread paragraph (330) is a compromise between the two houses, making a duty of 17 cents per pound on threads made from yarn not finer than five lea or number, and three-fourths cent per pound additional for each lea or number in excess of five made from yarn finer than five lea or number.

There is also a change in the next paragraph, relating to single yarns in the gray, reducing the senate rate on yarns not finer than 80 lea or number to 40 per cent. ad valorem, which is a compromise between the two houses.

Floor mattings, which are taken from the free list, where they were placed by the senate, are made dutiable at 3 cents per square yard where their value does not exceed 10 cents per square yard, and at 7 cents per square yard and 25 per cent. ad valorem where their value exceeds 10 cents per square yard.

Bags or sacks made from plain woven fabrics and bagging for cotton, gunny cloth and similar fabrics were taken from the free list and the language of the house practically restored in both instances. On bags the rate was made seven-eighths cent per pound and 15 per cent. ad valorem.

The senate rate on handkerchiefs was accepted.

Sundries.

There were comparatively few changes in the sundries schedule. The senate amendment on bituminous coals fixing the rate of 67 cents per ton was accepted without change.

The house rate of one cent per thousand on loose matches was restored.

The house rates on haircloth were restored.

The senate rates on jewelry were retained.

The house provision in regard to diamonds and other precious stones was restored.

Paintings, drawings and statuary were also made dutiable at 20 per cent. ad valorem.

Free List.

The following changes were made in the free list:

The provision allowing cattle, horses, sheep, or other domestic animals, straying or driven across the boundary line of another country for pasturage purposes, to be brought back free of duty is modified so as to continue this privilege for the special time of six months.

The conference restored to the free list the house paragraph on books and drawings imported by authority of the United States for the library of congress.

The paragraph relating to the free introduction of books, libraries and personable furniture of persons from foreign countries was altered so as to provide that where they were not introduced for sale they were to be allowed free entrance when they had not been so used for less than one year.

The following is the paragraph agreed upon on anthracite coal in the free list:

Anthracite Coal.

"Coal, anthracite, now especially provided for in the law, and coal stores of American vessels, but none shall be unloaded."

Following is the paragraph agreed upon on coal tar in the free list:

"Coal tar, crude pitch of coal tar, and products of coal tar known as dead or creosote oil, benzol, etc."

The conference restored raw cotton to the free list.

The paragraph in regard to the free admission of fish caught by American fishermen was amended so as to include salmon on the free list, which were especially excepted by the senate bill, and as agreed upon reads as follows:

"Fresh fish, frozen or packed in ice, caught in the great lakes or other fresh waters by citizens of the United States."

The house cuttings the house paragraph was restored.

Manganese ore was restored to the free list, as was cocoanut oil.

The house phraseology of the paragraph in regard to ores of gold, silver, etc., was restored, which has the effect of making free nickel and nickel matte.

The senate amendment making free paintings, drawings and statuary was also stricken out.

Reciprocity.

The reciprocity provision, as agreed to by the conference, contains some of the features of both the senate and the house bills on this subject.

It also contains some retaliatory measures. It sets forth its purpose to be that of "equalising the trade of the United States with foreign countries exparting to this country the following articles:

"Argols, or crude tartars, or wine lees crude; brandies or other spirits manufactured wholly from grain or other materials; champagne or all other sparkling wines; still wines and vermuth; paintings and statuary."

The president is authorized to enter into negotiations or commercial agreements in which reciprocal concessions may be secured in favor of the products of the United States, or to suspend by proclamation the duties upon these articles whenever equivalent concessions may be obtained, as follows:

"Argols, 5 per cent. ad valorem."

Brandies or other grain spirits, $1.75 per gallon.

Champagne and other bottles containing quart, $3 per dozen; containing one pint, $1.50 per dozen; containing one-half pint, $1.50 per dozen; containing more than one quart, in addition to the $6 rate, $1.90 per gallon.

Still wines and vermuth, 35 cents per gallon, and other rates in proportion where the goods are bottled.

Paintings, etc., 15 per cent. ad valorem.

The president is empowered to revoke the concession when satisfied that the agreement is not adhered to in good faith by any other country with which an agreement shall have been made.

Retaliatory Clause.

What may be termed the retaliatory clause of the provision is that which empowers the president to suspend by proclamation the provisions of the act providing for the free introduction of coffee, tea, Tonquin, or tonka beans, and vanilla beans coming from any country which imposes duties upon the products of the United States he may deem to be reciprocally unequal and unreasonable. The rates which he is thus empowered to fix are:

On coffee, 5 cents per pound; on tea, 10 cents per pound; on tonka beans, 50 cents per pound; on vanilla beans, $2 per pound; on cuts, $1.

The president is required to act within two years in securing these reciprocal trade treaties, and they are to be submitted to the senate for its ratification. Articles are to be reduced to the extent of 20 per cent. in these treatiee, and the president is specifically authorized to enter into negotiations which will place certain articles upon the free list for a specified period of time.

WAS A "LEEMISH" CAR.

The Owl-Car Passengers Finally Found Out.

He seemed painfully conscious of the ludicrous figure he cut as he burst through the wildly flapping curtains of a north-bound, all-night car and scraped himself into a seat which had been neglected by the other occupants on account of the sea of moisture which it contained. His face was belligerently red and his widely-staring eyes, anticipating with maniacal vigilance any tendency to laughter which his appearance might provoke, blazed forth a challenge to the entire car and successfully dispelled the rising spirit of jocundity.

The night was the most tempestuous of the present season, and in order to escape the gusts of wind and water that assailed the car from every direction some of the "owls" had gathered in the aisle, while others had perched upon the backs of seats, and some had opened up their umbrellas. The conductor, with an air of intrepidity born of a familiarity with situations of the kind, passed to and fro among the passengers collecting nickels. He was an ideal "owl" conductor, bristling with a sense of his importance, and ostentatiously indifferent to the comfort and convenience of his guests.

"Ez ish leemish ghar?" asked the late wild-eyed arrival as the despot jolted past.

The unintelligible gibberish met with no response. Another block was passed before the street car magnate came forward.

"Ez ish leemish ghar?" was repeated somewhat petulantly by the Swede—for he was now discovered.

Everyone but the autocrat seemed buried in an effort to translate the jargon, and some even ventured so far as to turn an inquiring eye upon the speaker. But the glances were quickly withdrawn, for the glitter of implacable hostility in those wild eyes had become intensified. Several more blocks elapsed.

"Ez ish leemish ghar?"

And this time the potentate had stopped close by to take a fare.

"What?" snarled the latter, with scornful intonation.

"Ez ish leemish ghar?"

For a moment there was a reflective pause—his majesty was thinking.

"Limits car? Yes."

"Vell, vy don't you say so? I ask you tray or four times."—Chicago Journal.

FIFTY-FIFTH CONGRESS.

Extraordinary Session.

WASHINGTON, July 20.—SENATE.—Monday in the senate was principally devoted to a discussion on Mr. Harris' resolution relating to the Union Pacific railroad. Mr. Morgan, of Alabama, concluded his remarks in favor of the resolution and Mr. Stewart spoke in opposition to it. Mr. Thurston of Nebraska was speaking in opposition when at 5 o'clock the senate went into executive session and shortly afterward adjourned.

HOUSE.—The conference report on the tariff bill was adopted by the house shortly after midnight Tuesday morning by a vote of 180 to 118, and at noon Tuesday the report was up to the senate for action there. This eclipses all previous records. The result was accomplished after 18 hours of continuous debate. But two speeches were made by the republicans, one by Gov. Dingley in opening the debate and one by Mr. Payne (N. Y.) in closing. The democrats were thus forced to put forth speaker after speaker. In all ten democrats and one populist speeches were made. Messrs. Wheeler (Ala.), Swanson (Va.), Bell, Latimer and Bailey (Tex.), Kelly (N. D.), Fleming (Ga.), Handy (Del.), McDowell (O.), Berry (Ky.) and McMillan (Tenn.) being the speakers. The sugar conference report was the main point of assault but the most interesting feature of the debate occurred when Mr. Bailey and Mr. McMillan the two rival democratic leaders, crossed swords on the question of the validity of the numerical doctrine, the former opposing and the latter championing it.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—SENATE.—The tariff conference report was presented to the senate Tuesday, but little progress was made on it beyond the formal reading of about two-thirds of the report. There was no indication of when the final vote would be reached. During the day Mr. Tillman (dem., S. C.) openly threatened a filibuster until next December if cotton bagging and cotton ties were not restored to the free list. But the threat was regarded as somewhat facetous. The sugar amendments occasioned a long debate, during which Mr. Allison stated that the conference rates were a fair average of the senate, and largely a concession to the house. Senators Vest, Jones, Berry and White questioned this statement, urging that the sugar rates secured larger benefits than the conference schedule than from any previously offered. The lumber amendment also brought animated criticism from Senators Teller and Stewart, of Nevada. Early in the day the senate passed a joint resolution authorizing and requesting the president to take all necessary steps for the release of the Competitor prisoners from prison in Havana.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—SENATE.—The senate concluded the formal reading of the tariff conference report Wednesday. The debate was spiritless in the main. Early in the day Mr. Jones (Ark.) made a speech against the conference committee on the ground that it had exceeded its authority in so amending the paragraph relating to printing paper as to place a retaliatory duty that the countries paying an export bounty on wood pulp. His point of order was debated at much length, and finally overruled by Vice President Hobart. This removed the only obstacle thus far encountered by the report. The reciprocity amendment, and the amendment of the stamp tax on bonds and stocks, developed much criticism.

HOUSE.—When the house met Wednesday Mr. Evans (rep., Ky.), from the committee on ways and means, reported a joint resolution requesting the president to make such investigation as he will deem sufficient in reference to the restrictions put upon the sale of American tobacco in foreign countries under what are known as the "regie" or government contracts. It also authorizes the president to enter into negotiations with governments of those countries with a view to obtaining a modification or removal of these restrictions. Passed.

WASHINGTON, July 23.—SENATE.—Shortly before the senate adjourned Thursday Senator Allison, in charge of the tariff bill, made a strong effort to have a time fixed for the final vote on the tariff conference report. Failing in this, Mr. Allison gave notice that the session Friday would be prorracted with a view to securing a vote. It was the first definite movement made thus far toward bringing the debate to a close. Mr. Allison's first proposition was for a vote at 4 o'clock Friday, but this was objected to by Mr. Pettus (Ala). Then he proposed a vote some time before adjournment Friday, which was objected to by Mr Morgan. The suggestion of 5 o'clock met with like objection from Mr. Morgan.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—SENATE.—The final vote on the tariff conferees report will be taken up in the senate at 3 p. m. Saturday. An unanimous agreement to that effect was reached in the senate late Friday afternoon after an exciting and dramatic debate. The proposition for the final vote came most unexpectedly from democratic source, the senior senator from Alabama, Mr. Morgan, presenting it. It was greeted with shouts of "good, good," from senators on the republican side, who for the first time saw the path clear for the final enactment of the tariff bill. Mr. Morgan's proposition was coupled with one that the senate meet at 10 a. m. Saturday in order that speeches may be heard before the vote is taken. This was accepted as a whole and the agreement was formally announced. Mr. Morgan expressed profound reluctance in submitting the proposition, but said he recognized the right of the majority to register their will. The agreement was preceded by the most heated personal colloquy that has occurred during the consideration of the tariff bill.

HOUSE.—The house Friday recessed until 3 p. m. When the house resumed its session it took another recess until 8 o'clock and by assurance of Mr. Dingley that it was likely the senate would reach a vote Friday night. Mr. McMillin insisted that this was not likely.

WASHINGTON, July 26.—SENATE.—The Dingley bill is now a law. The senate adjourned sine die. By a vote of 40 to 30 the senate at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon agreed to the conference report on the disagreement between the senate and house on the amendments, and an hour later the president, with a pen provided for the purpose by Mr. Dingley, whose name the bill bears, affixed his signature thereto. At 4:30 p. m. this act on the part of the chief executive was communicated to the house, in which the bill originated, and the announcement was received with a great applause. The senate was in session up to 3 p. m., the hour agreed upon Friday night for a vote, was taken up almost entirely with speeches against concurrence on the conference report. Allen, Caffery and others, including Morgan, were speakers, and, curiously enough, the debate was closed by Mr. Stewart, who declared that the bill would not give the country prosperity; in fact, from his standpoint, nothing would but free and unlimited coinage of silver. And that he will vote for the bill, having refrained from casting his vote on the measure when before the senate for passage, July 7.

HOUSE.—The house, assembling at noon, had taken a recess until 3:30 p. m., and before it reassembled the announcement that the senate was in waiting to communicate the action of the senate upon the conference report. As soon as the body was called to order the announcement was made, and the announcement was received with applause, renewed a moment later when the "great white czar" was observed attaching his signature to the bill, and became boisterous when he made known that he had signed it.

Express Office in Dawson City.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 26.—There is every probability that Wells, Fargo & Co. will establish an office in Dawson City during the coming spring. Lon Rowell, assistant manager of the company, said Saturday that nothing would be gained by establishing an office earlier than that. The present rate of transportation for gold from Seattle to San Francisco is three dollars a thousand and five dollars from Seattle to Philadelphia. It an office is established in the Klondyke district the rate per thousand, including insurance, will be $8.40.

BLACK EAGLE.

The John A. Logan Statue Unveiled on the Lake Front, Chicago.

His Five-year-Old Grandson Pulls the Veil From St. Gaudet's Great Work—Big Parade and Naval Display—City Decorated in Its Honor.

was dedicated with much pomp Thursday afternoon. A few minutes past 1 o'clock John A. Logan III., the five year-old grandson of the "Black Eagle," pulled the silken cord which parted the veils concealing the magnificent likeness of the great commander as he rallied the broken ranks of the federal troops and led them on to victory before the city of Atlanta, July 22, 1864.

Crowds began to assemble along Michigan avenue at an early hour Thursday morning, anticipating the crush which was to follow, and proceeded to establish themselves in position for a day of sightseeing. Reviewing stands lined the broad thoroughfare facing the monument. Window space was at a premium. As one o'clock, the hour set for the unveiling, drew near, the jam became almost unbearable, but police precautions were timely and the crowd goodnatured.

The work of the committees in charge of the dedication was perfect. The immense body of troops was handled without a hitch. President McKinley was unable to leave Washington but the government was well represented by Secretary of War Russell A. Alger.

Shortly before one o'clock the review wing stand at the monument began filling with distinguished personages. Seats were provided for 5,000.

Gov. Tanner and suite, of Illinois; Gov. Scofield and suite, of Wisconsin; Gov. Mount and suite, of Indiana; Gov.

JOHN A. LOGAN, THE THIRD.

Geo. W. Atkinson and staff, of West Virginia, and Gov. Holcomb and staff, of Nebraska, were among the first to enter, following immediately after the presentation committee. Secretary of War Alger and judges of the supreme and circuit courts came next, escorted by Chairman W. H. Harper, of the executive committee, and Geo. R. Peck, the orator of the day. Sculptor St. Gaudens followed. The Logan family —Mrs. John A. Logan, Maj. and Mrs. Wm. F. Tucker, Capt. and Mrs. John A. Logan—were almost the last to enter the stand.

The boom of cannon on board the revenue cutters Gresham, Fessenden and Calumet, anchored in the bay, announced the hour of one.

Rev. Dr. Arthur Edwards arose and in an eloquent prayer opened the ceremonies.

Henry W. Blodgett, chairman of the presentation, on behalf of the commissioners, presented the monument to the state, and amidst the rattle of artillery "Little Jack III." tugged at the silken cord, the veils fell from the statue and the thousands applauded. Again the artillery salute rent the air as the United States band struck up the stirring "Battle Scenes of the War."

Gov. John R. Tanner, in a short speech, accepted the monument on behalf of Illinois and gave way to the orator of the day, Geo. R. Peck. Mr. Peck paid an eloquent tribute to the soldier-statesman, with whom he served as a comrade-in-arms.

The programme was completed shortly after 2 o'clock. The parade and review followed. The troops, falling in line in Twelfth street, at the command of Grand Marshal Gen. Brooke, of the department of Missouri, marched north on Michigan past the reviewing stand. Over 20,000 men were in line, headed by a squad of police on foot. The survivors of Gen. Logan's old regiment, the Thirty-first Illinois volunteers, led the van, proudly bearing the old regimental flag, tattered and torn by 200 confederate bullets. Then came the grizzled veterans of the G. A. R., with bared heads in honor of their first and idolized commander-in-chief. With the veterans marched the ex-confederates 200 strong. The appearance of the veterans of the gray was a touching tribute to the man they met in battle on the bloody field of Atlanta. Behind the southerners marched with easy swing 2,500 regulars, the largest number seen together in the west since the civil war. Every branch of the service was represented, including eight troops of cavalry. The governors of states with their staffs followed and then came the Illinois national guard, 7,000 strong, under commander of Gov. Tanner as commander in chief. Knights Templar and Knights of Pythias followed to the number of 1,500. The rear was brought up by 1,200 Chicago mail carriers and 3,200 uniformed detachments of various civic societies not bearing arms.

The parade was over two hours in passing the reviewing stand.

The pageant on land was supplemented by the finest marine display ever seen on Lake Michigan. Grouped around the revenue cutters Gresham, Fessenden and Calumet, which were anchored just off the monument, were nearly 200 vessels of the merchant marine and private yachts all gaily decorated for the occasion.

Thursday evening a public reception was held at the Coliseum for Mrs. Logan and other distinguished guests. The reception was preceded by a gorgeous display of fire works in the Coliseum gardens.

LOGAN MONUMENT.

Anxiety Over a Wild Animal.

JEFFERSONVILLE, Ind., July 23.—Farmers residing along the Utica pike and Middle road are experiencing considerable anxiety on account of the appearance in the neighborhood of a wild animal, in size between the largest wildcat and a panther, somewhat resembling both in form and color. The animal visited George Lusher's barn recently and his dogs were almost torn to pieces in a fight with it. It has been seen at a half dozen different places.

"Terrible Pete" Hanged.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., July 23.—Peter Wassel, alias "Terrible Pete," was hanged in the county jail yard Thursday. The drop fell at 10:30 and at 10:35 he was pronounced dead. — Wassel's crime was the killing of Joseph Kupersavage in Georgetown in 1897. Wassel shot at another man but missed him and killed Kupersavage who was standing outside the window.

THE DINGLEY REMEDY.

A Republican Dose for Declining Industry.

Mr. McKinley's celebrated republican remedy for hard times—the Dingley tariff plaster—will soon be ready to be spread on the epidermis of the country. Mr. McKinley's front-porch speeches show that he expects great results from the Dingley tariff plaster, and the medicine men of the senate are now adding to it all the ingredients that go with a republican dose which is intended to take effect promptly.

The whole process is simple, and it is as old as the invention of cupping and blistering. The theory is that of counter-irritation. The medicine, when a patient has a case of cramps, a mustard poultice is applied to his abdomen. In other cases a fly plaster is applied. The effects of counter-irritation are well known in medicine, but what is to be the result when the theory is applied to the condition of the people?

Mr. McKinley declared from his front porch that the scheme would work. When he said that a tariff tax would open the mills, increase wages and restore prosperity, he meant that the doctrine of counter-irritation would prove efficacious in trade and business. That is to say, he meant (if words meun anything) that a man who has no money to buy goods at present low prices would be benefited by being compelled to pay a higher price for the same goods.

That is the whole scheme in a nutshell. Mr. McKinley's method of making the people prosperous is to increase the cost of the necessaries as well as the luxuries of life. As the people are not now able to buy these necessaries and luxuries except in the most pinched and pinching way, it will be interesting to watch the effect of the tariff plaster and thus get an idea of the process by which the public at large is to be made prosperous as the result of higher taxes.

Stripped naked, this proposition partakes of the nature of a lunatic delusion, but Mr. McKinley took care to array it in a good many small clothes, with ruffles, frills and furbelows. He lifted his eyebrows and lowered them, and his voice grew pathetic as he described the beauties of higher taxation levied upon a population already brought to the verge of pauperism.

But at last the whole business is to be put to the actual test. There is nothing in the way to confuse the public mind. Business men, manufacturers and their employes, farmers, the whole population in short, will have an admirable opportunity of beholding the true inwardness of the republican tariff fraud. We have no doubt that Mr. McKinley really believes what he says about high protection. He has made it his hobby until he is stricken with fanatical fervor when he discusses the subject publicly.

But there are other republicans, cold-blooded and long-headed, who know that protection is simply a private snap for a monopolistic cabal composed of the millionaire manufacturers. There are some of the long-headed men in the senate, and they do not hesitate to say in private that the expectations which have been raised in the public mind as to the effect of the new tariff are doomed to disappointment. Some of these men would be glad of an excuse to delay the bill in the senate; but they know that the fortunes of the republican party have been tied to the tariff cart, and they dare not make a public disavowal of their fears and desires.

Even Mr. McKinley seems to have a vague idea that the tariff fraud is about to be exposed, and he is credited with a desire to take public attention off the new measure by sending in a message on the currency question. He has already committed himself to the retirement of the greenbacks, and he desires to commit his party to that scheme. This programme is so doubtful in its nature that the republicans in congress, especially in the house, do not care to injure their chances for reelection next year by promoting it.

Meanwhile the tariff delusion will soon be on exhibition.—Atlanta Constitution.

Worse Than a War Tariff.

The new tariff bill will be worse than the McKinley law, as that was a "worse-than-war-tariff." The war tariff in 1862 averaged about 32 per cent. The average McKinley duty was about 49 per cent. The Dingley house bill averaged 58 per cent., and the senate bill averages nearly 54. That is to say, 35 years after the war tariff was enacted our "infant industries" are to be given protection more than 20 points higher. And in a revision pledged to "moderation" the outrageous McKinley tariff, twice condemned by the people, is overtopped from six to eight points. Not only so, but nearly two-thirds of the duties imposed are practically prohibitive. And this in a measure ostensibly undertaken to raise revenue to stop the deficit! It is fortunate for the untaught republican bourbons that there is not a new congress to elect this year.—N. Y. World.

A Blighting Influence.

The exports of the United States for the fiscal year just ended were the largest ever known in the history of this nation. Under such conditions one would naturally expect that the people would be enjoying the highest degree of prosperity ever known. Something must be radically wrong when, with the balance of trade in favor of this country, her people are suffering great business depression. The explanation is not far to seek. The United States exports agricultural products, which, under the blighting influence of a monometallic gold currency, bring minimum prices, while the imports are chiefly manufactured articles, the prices of which are artificially enhanced by means of the tariff.—Chicago Dispatch.

Mr. McKinley was so far ahead of prosperity that the show seems to have lost itself in the wilderness.—Atlanta Constitution.

A REPUBLICAN HOORAH.

Over the Non-Fulfillment of Campaign Promises.

An over-zealous Iowa republican comes forward with the suggestion for republicans everywhere to lay aside business cares the day the Dingley bill goes into effect and celebrate the event "in every hamlet, village and city in the United States with parades and speaking, to bring before the people the fact that a republican congress and a republican president are fulfilling republican pledges."

The suggestion is logical, though nobody thought that the republican party had a follower who was foolish enough to make it. When the Dingley bill becomes a law it will be a fact that a republican congress and a republican president are fulfilling republican pledges." The whole substance of democratic contention is that the McKinley administration, backed by a republican congress, is carrying out the pledges made as conditions precedent to success in the last campaign.

The Dingley iniquity is a fulfillment of only one of these pledges. It is true that some of the far-sighted republican leaders are now trying to save their party from the wreck and ruin sure to be wrought by the measure, but they have started too late to check the heedless fury of the short-sighted bosses who enmeshed the organization in such a network of promises to favored trusts and combines for the corrupt aid which these concerns extended to the party last fall.

Speaker Reed, for example, who had little or no influence in the party councils during the campaign, is now attempting to bring his party to a realizing sense of its own danger in following blindly the behests of the sugar trust, which will wring $25,000,000 from the American people as a reward for its assistance to McKinley if the senate amendments to the Dingley bill are permitted to stand. Even should he succeed in forcing the sugar trust to yield some of its immense profits given in the bill, the principle of shameful bargaining remains.

The party is keeping its promises not alone in the matter of tariff bounties to trusts. It also pledged itself to maintain the gold standard until European creditor nations consented for the United States to run their financial affairs to suit themselves. This pledge is being kept to the letter. The president and his advisers are indulging in much talk about "commissions" to inquire into the currency question, thereby hoping to involve the issue in an impenetrable mist of obscurity until the favored few who are profiting by present financial conditions are rewarded in accordance with ante-election pledges, and to this extent only are they exhibiting the slightest inclination to forswear promises.

One pledge, and only one, they have not lived up to is the hastening of the return of prosperity. Probably the over-zealous Iowa republican imagines himself in the full flood of returning prosperity, and can celebrate the fulfillment of this promise, too. If he can, he is the luckiest citizen in the United States to-day.—St. Louis Republic.

COMMENTS OF THE PRESS.

—The goldite press continues to exclaim against the ingratitude of the starving masses in the coal mines and the factory cities of the east.—Illinois State Register.

—For blind and reckless courage there is no parallel to that displayed by the League of Republican clubs in passing those resolutions concerning prosperity.—Chicago Chronicle.

—If the country wants a tariff to suppress trade, minimize revenue and promote trusts, then President McKinley's special session is giving it the kind of tariff it wants.—N. Y. World.

—Strikes and disasters characterized the Harrison administration, and the present federal regime appears to have started out under promise of a similar cataclysm.—Binghamton (N. Y.) Leader.

—Gage is explaining to a wondering public how he began on five dollars a week. The wondering public's turn will come when it relates to him how it is trying to get along on five dollars a month.—Illinois State Register.

Hereafter we may have sufficient revenue for the needs of the government, or we may not, but however that may be the revenue of the farmer is not going to be helped by anything that the administration or congress has done.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

—It is no excuse for the president's cowardly shuffling on the currency question that his message would have been ignored had he sent it in. That might have been an excuse for postponing the matter until the regular session. But to discuss the message formally with the cabinet, to prepare it, to announce to the country that it would be sent to congress the next day, and then, under pressure from Allison and Quay, to abandon it indefinitely, was a course utterly unjustifiable. It has sadly shaken the confidence of the conservative portion of the republic in Mr. McKinley.—N. Y. Times.

—President McKinley is having a hard time in paying some of Chairman Hanna's political debts. None of the before-election pledges has cost him more wry faces or greater hesitation than that of making Terrence V. Powderly commissioner of immigration. But he had to shut his eyes and take the dose at last, and recently he sent Powderly's name to the senate. Powderly is singularly unfit for the place. He is a scheming demagogue, not a rectful, clear-headed man of executive ability, and he is likely to spend a good deal more time chasing phantoms of one sort or another than in a careful and effective performance of the duties of his office. The appointment is a bad one, viewed from any aspect, and one that is likely to bring the administration no end of discredit and annoyance.—Philadelphia Times.

The running time of the train is so arranged that it will make 80 hours to Chicago, 30 to Cincinnati, 30 to Cleveland, 34 to Columbus, 18 to Dallas, Tex., 50 to Detroit, 98 to Duluth, Minn., 37 to Indianapolis, 78 to Kansas City, 75 to Memphis, 50 to Louisville, 74 to Milwaukee, 83 to Minneapolis, 61 to Peoria, Ill., 20 to Pittsburgh, 50 to St. Louis, 81 to St. Paul, 39 to Sandusky, 231 to San Francisco, 44 to Toledo, and correspondingly quick time to other western and southern points.

The Freight Department expects to make 95 as popular and reliable a train as 97, which makes the run from New York to Chicago and St. Louis in 60 hours.

South Dakota Pays Off Its Debts.

Sioux Falls, S. D., July 13.—[Special.]—"The people of South Dakota have, in the last four years, paid off $50,000,000 of their debts," said one of the best known loan agents of the State, "and they are now paying off at a very rapid rate. As things are now going the people of the State, and especially the farmers, will soon be well out of debt. The large crops of the last few years, coupled with the close times, have had the effect of giving the people an appetite for getting out of debt, and fortunately has also given them the ability to do so."

Another agent who represents a loan company which has several million dollars loaned on farm property in South Dakota, adds his testimony, but the agent complains that he cannot find takers for one-third of the amount he would like to loan.

"Our company has 1,500 loans in this State on farm lands," said the agent above referred to, "and we have not had over fifty foreclosures in seven years. The company does not own a foot of land in the State and never lost a cent on a loan."—(Chicago Tribune, July 14, 1897.)

That portion of South Dakota which is traversed by the lines of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway is the finest agricultural and stock growing section of the western country. For "Letters from Farmers," printed in pamphlet form, finely illustrated, and descriptions of farm lands, address Geo. H. Heafford, General Passenger Agent, Old Colony Building, Chicago, Ill. Now is the time to look for homes in South Dakota, where land is cheap and good.

Thunder-Like Tones.

"I really couldn't afford to let you board with me this summer," said an old farmer to a city man with a very deep bass voice.

"Why not?" queried the base-profunde in tones that rattled the dried squashes in the rafters.

Queen & Crescent.

During the Tennessee Centennial and International Exposition at Nashville, Tenn., a low rate special tariff has been established for the sale of tickets from Cincinnati and other terminal points on the Queen & Crescent Route.

Tickets are on sale daily until further notice to Chattanooga at $6.75 one way or $7.20 round trip from Cincinnati, the round trip tickets being good seven days to return; other tickets, with longer return limit, at $9.90 and at $13.50 for the round trip.

These rates enable the public to visit Nashville and other southern points at rates never before offered. Vestibuled trains of the finest class are at the disposal of the passenger, affording a most pleasant trip, and enabling one to visit the very interesting scenery and important battle grounds in and about Chattanooga, Lookout Mountain and Chickamauga National Military Park. Tickets to Nashville to visit the Centennial can be repurchased at Chattanooga for $3.40 round trip. Ask your ticket agent for tickets via Cincinnati and the Q. & C. Route South, or write to W. C. The Pill that Will.

"'The pill that will," implies the pills that won't. Their name is legion. The name of "the pill that will" is Ayer's Cathartic Pill. It is a pill to rely on. Properly used it will cure constipation, biliousness, sick headache, and the other ills that result from torpid liver. Ayer's pills are not designed to spur the liver into a momentary activity, leaving it in yet more incapable condition after the immediate effect is past. They are compounded with the purpose of toning up the entire system, removing the obstructing conditions, and putting the liver into proper relations with the rest of the organs for natural co-operation. The record of Ayer's Pills during the half century they have been in public use establishes their great and permanent value in all liver affections.

The crowd, 10 or 12 in number, left Hebron in a 2-horse spring wagon, about 1:30 p. m. and reached their destination a few minutes after six, having driven 35 miles in about four hours. The generous host, Prof. G. S. Hann, had prepared quite a programme for the evening. Among those on the programme were Miss Carrie Freeman, of Miamitown; Miss Grace Helmsderfer, of Cincinnati; Miss May Reinhart, of New Haven; Miss Mabel Heist, of Bromley, Ky.; Miss Katie Clayton and Miss Clara Hoesman, of Hebron; Miss Hallie Broesy, of Harrison, Ohio, and many others from different points. The interesting programme was carried out to the letter, after which the young people, about 50 in number, repared to the lawn and spent the remainder of the evening in playing games. At a late hour most of the guests left for home, wishing that Prof. Hann would entertain once a week. The others of the company, including the Kentucky guests, remained until Sunday. About 3:30 p. m. Mr. Aylor's crowd started homeward, bringing the Professor with them. After a few hours' ride the party arrived home in time for church. Some of the boys of the party were so favorably impressed with the Hamilton county girls that they contemplate a similar trip on the 31st, on which occasion the New Haven, Ohio, Epworth League will hold a social at the pleasant home of Mr. Hann.

Two of our most popular young men, Hubert Walton and Scott Chambers, will become citizens of Burlington in a few days. They are young and timid but, in all probability, they will hold their own in the capital city.

Some politicians are trying to work the rabbits foot on Nathan; they know he is popular and hard to down.

A monster wild beast has made its appearance in this vicinity, and is giving the farmers a great deal of uneasiness. E. P. Walton heard its hideous screams, after evening about dark, and his stock all came running to the house for safety, and one old mule, in particular, when put in the stable went to the window and looked in the direction of the sound and snorted and pawed the ground like he was frantic. The skeletons of several calves and sheep have been found in the vicinity of his home.

Just before night, Saturday the 17th inst., the team of mules belonging to J. J. Ferris, driven by Wm. Hensley, ran away with a self-binder, but were checked before any damage was done more than the breaking of the tripple tree.

A fine rain fell here Friday night and Saturday morning, which put a check to the hay-making business, but more than compensated the farmers by the untold benefits to the corn and tobacco crops.

Dick McWethy took an outing of several days, during which he, in company with Tom Cowen, of Frankfort, took in some of the rugged sights and scenes of Wolf county including the famous Natural Bridge. He thinks the scenery along the Kentucky river unspeakably grand.

Bro. Barker was called to conduct the funeral of Mrs. Hass at the home of Mr. Alfred Chambers, last Sunday, at 2½ o'clock p. m. She was Mr. Chambers' sister and was the widow of Levi Scott before her last marriage. After the funeral services the body was laid to rest in the old family grave yard near where her father lived many years ago.

Revs T. L. Utz and Johnnie McAtee attended a meeting at the Woolper school house, last Sunday at 4 p. m. The Riverside rolling mills have closed, preparatory to putting in tin mills. The stoppage has thrown several of our citizens out of employment.

We have frequent debates between the men and women on religion. I do not see why the men think they can out talk the women. That is contrary to nature.

There seems to be plenty of blackberries this season, for we have heard several talking most enthusiastically about them. One fellow, whose name I will not call, made the assertion that he could beat the living man picking. If you don't believe this ask John Prather or Harry England.

The six months' old child of Charles Peno died on the 21st inst. The writer was present during most of the little one's illness, and can vouch that it did not lack for medical treatment and home care, and although motherless no mother could have been more attentive than were its loving relatives and friends. Remember, dear friends, that it was God's will to demand the little flower. However so appreciated and beautiful, yet, in His wisdom, He saw fit to take it to His arms, where it will be free from all suffering and care, which are sure to attend the life of man. Again we should remember that its happiness in the future is certain, while ours is so uncertain. May God help you to live as to meet the dear little one in its eternal home, as that is your only hope of ever again having the pleasure of impressing the so much desired kiss upon its beautiful, innocent brow. Again I will insist that you think of this sad bereavement as only the transplanting of God's so much loved flowers from this sinful world to a garden where all is happiness, love and peace.

We are still bothered with city folks on their two wheel machines. They call us country trash and gaze on our little town and its inhabitants as though they are far superior to them intellectually and financially. That may be, and I am sure you will think so when I give you a description of them. They are either 7 feet 10 inches tall and weigh 97 pounds, or 3 feet 3 inches tall and weigh 350 pounds, representatives of distilleries and breweries. To prove their intellect they ask if the large building on the Ohio river hill is school house. One very brilliant fellow came into the drugstore, and called for a linen cap to match his bicycle suit; another called for two pneumatic tires, as he had ruined his; another called for a pair of tooth picks for shoes. The druggist had on sale some ice cream and a spider-legged city dude and his lady friend came to a halt on their bicycle made for two, and had it put safely away, and after bathing their countenances, called for a five cent saucer of ice cream with two spoons. They said they were very fond of cream.

Something Different.

The average trip to the sea shore or northern resort is much like all other summer trips in many particulars, but a trip to the South in the heated season in search of a cool place is something different altogether. Different in its lack of hot noon-days (they don't have sun-strokes in the South). Different in that it is comparatively inexpensive. Different in the absence of perspiring crowds of humanity everywhere about one. Different in altitude—you can go up thousands instead of hundreds of feet above sea-level and get the bracing air which brings you home again invigorated.

$5.00 is the round-trip rate for a delightful trip to that famous Southern mountain resort—Asheville, the summer home of the Queen & Crescent Route, and the Southern R'y from Cincinnati, Saturday, August 7th. Tickets at this rate are good ten days to return. Sixteen hours ride through the Blue Grass, across High Bridge, down the Emory and through the mountains of East Tennessee to the French Broad river and for some 40 miles along that beautiful mountain stream. The Asheville altitude is 2,500 feet, with protecting peaks double that height, giving that peculiar beauty and dryness for which it is noted throughout the world. Sunshine for 300 days a year; perfect hotel service; the most elaborate private residence and domain in America, at Biltmore; scenery unsurpassed on a scale of actual grandeur. Write to us for books describing Asheville, will send them free.

The shanty boat people are annoying the farmers along the river again. The proper way to treat them is that adopted by Jacob Stahl, of the Taylosport neighborhood. A monster of the briny deep is on exhibition at Aurora, where it will remain until next Tuesday, when it will go to Petersburg for a stay of several days. This monster is a whale which measures 65 feet in length. It weighed, when captured, 75 tons and was supposed to be 500 years old. Its tongue weighed 3,500 pounds and made 100 gallons of oil. Its mouth has been fitted up for a reception room and makes a grand sight. This whale is transferred from point to point along the river on a Lake Erie canal boat, which is of itself a considerable show. You should go and take your children to see this whale. They will show the harpoons, lances, &c., used in capturing whales, and a valuable lesson will be taught them—one they will never forget. They may never have another opportunity to see one of these animals. Admission, 15 cents; children 10 cents.

The greatest game of ball of the season was that played at the Burlington park, last Saturday afternoon. A game between the Burlington and Petersburg teams was advertised for that afternoon, but the uncertain condition of the weather kept the Petersburg team at home, and that the people should not be disappointed a picked nine was mustard and for four innings it held the score in its favor by a very small margin, but in the fifth inning disaster overtook the crowd. When the inning closed Capt. Kirkpatrick's boys had won the game and gone with it. Up to the fatal fifth Beall had pitched good ball, but his curves had been solved and the batters hit him when and where they pleased from that time on. Some of the pickedt nine, Jim Lassing and Harry Blyth, especially, made some great plays, and had it not been for their brilliant fielding there is no telling how many runs their opponents would have made.

Here is the score by innings:

Burlington	0	0	2	1	8	0	1	0	x	—11
Hasbeens	1	0	0	0	1	0	1	1	8	—7

Struck outb—Beall, 2; Clutterbuck, 12.
Hits—Hasbeens, 8; Burlington, 15.
Condition of players—Redhot.
Earned runs—Hard to tell.
Umpire—Hall.
Kicks on decisions—Six on one side and half a dozen on the other.
Attendance—Less than 16,340.
Time of game—From early dinner to late supper.
Condition of weather—90 on the ice house steps.

F. P. WALTON,
Burlington, Ky.

WALTON, KY., July 21th, 1897.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

Having been called upon by a large number of the Democratic voters of Boone county to submit my name as a candidate to represent them in the next legislature, I take this opportunity, through the columns of your paper, to thank the many friends for this unmerited and pointed exhibition of their confidence in me as a citizen and Democrat, able and worthy to represent Boone county in the next General Assembly of the Commonwealth.

While I have been an adherent to the principles of democracy since entering upon the threshhold of manhood, and while I have lived among the people of Boone county for nearly 20 years, and my interests are identified with its people and their interests, I am constrained to the belief that there are others in the ranks of the democracy of the county who could more ably represent them than I. With feelings of a deep sense of the honor you would confer upon me, would say that, while I have neither the time to spare nor the means necessary to make a canvass for the office to which you have called me, yet, when called upon to serve party or country I have ever deemed it the duty of the patriotic citizen to obey and serve the call of his people whenever it can be done without too great sacrifice of his personal interests.

Should I be called upon by the united democracy of Boone county to accept the nomination to be their representative, which nomination I regard as equivalent to an election, whatever ability I may possess shall be given unto a faithful and conscientious discharge of the duties pertaining to the office in upholding their interests.

Again thanking you, my friends, for this unsought and unmerited recognition of your confidence and kindness,

I am Respectfully Yours.
J. E. BOTTS.

A CLOUDBURST.

Great Damage to Property and Many Lives Supposed to Be Lost.

Catholic Church at Niles, O., Struck by Lightning and Nearly Destroyed—Tailor Killed by the Electric Fluid—Large Washouts on Railroads.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., July 23.—At seven o'clock Thursday night a terrific cloudburst struck this town, flooding the entire valley and causing great damage to property, both in the city and along the railway lines. Many people are supposed to be drowned. The entire county east and west for 20 miles was flooded and the damage will be enormous, the railroads being the heaviest losers. The Erie railroad, west of Warren 15 miles, and north of Sharon the same distance, was entirely flooded out, and orders were issued to discontinue all trains. Many residences here were flooded out, and the occupants were taken away by the police and fire departments. The Mahoning Valley electric lines were flooded out and all the bridges washed away. The Catholic church at Niles was struck by lightning at the same hour and nearly destroyed by fire, while business houses and manufacturing concerns were flooded out. Henry Myers, a tailor, while standing at his residence on Mill street, was struck by lightning and killed instantly. He leaves a family. The excursion trains which left here Thursday morning for lake Erie are all side-tracked 30 miles out and will probably not reach the city Thursday night. On every railroad leading into the city comes reports of extensive washouts and bridges swept away and railroad officials say the loss will be the heaviest they have ever known.

At 10:30 Thursday night came the first tangible information of the damage done by the storm. Along Crab creek, running into the city in the northwest along the Erie and Lake Shore railroads, and emptying into the Mahoning river near the Lake Shore depot, a cloudburst occurred about ten miles out, and the water did not begin to rise much in the city until after nine o'clock. At about ten o'clock the water came down the valley into the city and formed into a flood, sweeping everything that was not fastened down before it. The bed of the creek was not more than from 20 feet wide and the flood spread out to a width of about 2,000 feet. It rose quickly and in less than 30 minutes the water was up to the second story of all the dwelling houses in the flooded districts and was still rising. It is a certainty at 11 o'clock that some of the people escaped from the houses. The whole district was covered with darkness except one small place where a lone electric light shone. Firemen, police and others were on hand quickly, but were powerless to rescue anybody, as not a boat of any kind was to be had in that portion of the city. The cries of the people in the houses were heart-rending to those who stood at the water's edge and were forced to retreat slowly on account of the gradually rising water. It is almost a certainty that many people were drowned, one whole family was heard crying for help from upstairs windows when suddenly there was a grinding noise as if the house was being moved from its foundation and soon the cries from that place ceased. The intense darkness made it impossible to see what was going on, but it supposed the house and its occupants went down in the flood. People at the waters heard a man crying for help who was apparently being carried down in the flood. The voice grew fainter, and it is supposed the unfortunate perished. Pitiful cries for help were heard continually, but the crowd on the shore could do nothing in the way of giving aid. Police and firemen went at once to another part of the city after boats.

It was midnight before boats were gotten to the flooded Crab creek district and the work of rescue could be started. The boats were manned by firemen, who went to work with a will, but could not make rapid progress on account of the swift and dangerous current. Nine families were taken out of second-story windows within a half hour and many people were picked up clinging to debris. Nothing definite will be known as to the loss of life till morning or even the names of people that are in the flood, and perhaps not then, as there were several thoroughfares through the flooded district on which there are usually people at all hours of the night. At midnight the water commenced to recede rapidly, and the creek will likely be back in its natural course by morning. The Erie and Lake Shore trains, including passenger and excursion trains, were stopped where they were caught and will not likely be moved before daybreak, as the officials refuse to take chances of loss of life. Loaded cars have been placed on bridges with the hope of keeping them up, as the Mahoning river is high and rising rapidly.

KLONDYKE BASIN.

Out-Time Miner's Report of the Country—No Ordinary Man Can Stand the Hardships.

GREAT FALLS, Mont., July 24.—Frank Moss, an old time miner in this section, who four years ago was one of a party of Americans to first visit the Klondyke country, returned Friday and tells a story of horrors and starvation seldom equaled even in modern novels. He describes Klondyke as a placer camp seven miles long and 18 miles wide, located in a sink and walled in by boulders of rocks 8,000 feet high. Gold, he says abounds, but no ordinary man can stand the hardships of the uncivilized region. When Moss left here four years ago he was a sturdy fellow over six feet tall. From hardships and privation he is a cripple for life and badly broken in health. In three years he saw over 2,000 graves made in the Klondyke basin, a large majority dying from starvation. The steamship companies bring in all food and allow no private importation. Consequently it is not uncommon to go for weeks with but a scant supply, and for days entirely without food. The gold brought in last week to Seattle, Moss says, does not represent the findings of individual shippers, but a large proportion was confiscated from the effects of those 2,000 miners who fell a prey to the hardships. At the death of a man possessed of dust his body was buried without a coffin and the dust divided among those who care for him. With proper reliefs established by the government Moss says gold can be taken out at the rate of $2,000,000 a month.

MAP OF ALASKA.

The richest strike has been made by a 21-year-old boy named George Hornblower, of Indianapolis. In the heart of a barren waste, known as Boulder field, he found a nugget, for which the transportation company gave him $5,700. He located his claim at the find and in four months took out over $100,000.

The richest section of Alaska, Moss says, is yet undeveloped. It is 100 miles from Klondyke, and known as Black Hole of Calcutta. It is inhabited by ex-convicts of Bohemia, and murders and riots take the place of law and order.

A few months ago Klondyke organized a justice committee and its law prevails their now.

With the great crowds preparing to go to the scene now, Moss says hunger and suffering will be great when added to other hardships to be overcome by those who survive. Moss returned with $6,000 in dust and leaves Saturday for his old home at Dubuque, Ia., where he will spend the balance of his years.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 23.—Among the arrivals from Alaska on the steamer Bertha was Dr. C. F. Dickerson, of Kodiak island, which lies just at the head of Cook's inlet. He says the gold excitement all over the territory of Alaska is something unprecedented, and people are flocking to the Klondyke in a way that threatens to depopulate many of the trading posts and coast towns.

"When I left Kodiak two weeks ago," said Mr. Dickerson, "the people were leaving all that section of country and flocking in the direction of Klondyke. In a way the situation is appalling, for many of the industries are left practically without the means of operation. Mines that are paying handsomely at Cook's Inlet have been deserted. In my opinion there are just as good placer diggings to be found at Cook's Inlet as in the Klondyke region. There is not a foot of ground in all that country that does not contain gold in more or less appreciable quantities. The great trouble has been that people have not had either the courage or opportunity. I do not know which, to thoroughly prospect the country. I think that in another month the country about Cook's Inlet will be practically deserted. There is room there for thousands of men, and there is certainly no better place in the world for a poor man."

One Hundred and Twenty People Drowned.

LONDON, July 24.—A dispatch from Singapore says that the Chinese steamer Sribengann, bound from Singapore for Malacca with 190 passengers, was wrecked in a squall off Malacca on June 19. One hundred and twenty persons, including the captain of the steamer, were drowned. The remainder of the ship's company were rescued by a passing steamer.

SHARON, Pa., July 24.—Mercer county miners have gained a victory in their strike and the operators have conceded to their demands. The men were out about three weeks and will now return to work at once. The operators will pay them 48 cents for run of the mine coal. About 1,200 miners are effected.

THE MINER'S STRIKE.

If the West Virginia Diggers Are Not Out by Tuesday Morning

They Never Will Come Out in the Opinion of Senator Camden—President Ratchford Receives Encouragement From Other Labor Organizations.

FAIRMONT, W. Va., July 26.—Monday morning will be the deciding point in the great mining contest, "If they are not out by Tuesday they will never come out," said Senator Camden, who was called here Friday night from Parkersburg by the seriousness of the situation. Senator Camden is president of the Monongah Co. Saturday is pay day, and it will be the supreme effort of the organizers to get all of the men to decide not again to enter the mines, and to cast their lots with the strikers. Before leaving early Saturday morning, Ratchford received several telegrams from the leaders of other labor organizations assuring him that they were with him. "I am very hopeful," were his last words at the Fairmont depot. Saturday morning there was no change in the situation, no new men being out. Friday, Ilis, the operator, was arrested for drawing a gun on one of the miners, and has been held till next Friday for a hearing. The speakers all made quite a point out of this Friday night, saying the first man in the strike that broke the law was an operator. Vice President Rae, of the Brotherhood of Painters and Decorators, arrived Saturday morning. He and Debs go to Clarksburg Saturday afternoon. W. J. Lunn, editor of the Labor Cloke, is in town, and says that after a careful study of the situation he thinks the men in this district will be out Monday noon. He thinks Dearmit's men can not be gotten out if the Fairmont district do come out.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 26.—If the plans as outlined do not fail, the majority of the coal operators of the Pittsburgh district will get together at the courthouse in this city next Tuesday at 11 o'clock a. m. The call was sent out Saturday and enough signatures were attached to it to make the meeting a very interesting one. The names are: W. P. De Armit, of the New York Cleveland Gas Coal Co.; Frances L. Robbins; M. A. Hanna and Co.; Col. W. P. Rend, J. B. Zerbe; Eclipse Coal Co.; George Lysle & Sons; D. M. Andrews; Imperial Coal Co.; Bower Hill Mining Co.; Moon Run Coal Co.; Blithe Coal Co.; Slope Mine Coal Co.; Federal Coal Co.; E. W. Bowers; J. F. Hosack; Elia Coal Co.; J. A. Oneil; Joseph Walton & Co.; Essen Coal Co.

The meeting will be the first held by the operators separately from the miners since early in 1890, when the uniformity question was before them in all its vigor.

If Gen. Little, of the arbitration board, can have his way, nothing of the past will be referred to. Neither will the present strike be discussed. The point at issue will be the fitness of the old agreement to cover the situation as it now exists. All the operators who have signified their willingness to be present at the meeting are in favor of the re-establishment of uniformity, and their signatures will go a long way toward making up the require 95 per cent. of the operators in the Pittsburgh district, as outlined by Mr. Dearmit.

The action of W. P. Dearmit in the proceedings has given confidence to many operators.

Gen. Little intimated Saturday that the conflicting elements for the first step should have been eliminated. Owing to his position he said it would not be policy at the present time to go into details. He was satisfied, however, and was in the best of humor over the prospects. It is very probable that the commissioners from other states will be notified to be in Pittsburgh Tuesday. They will bring with them other signatures, and it is expected that whatever action will be taken will at least be binding on those that attend the preliminary meeting.

As near as can be learned, the object of the first meeting is to determine what grievances the various operators have.

Narrowly Escaped Lynching.

CHICAGO, Ill., July 26.—James O'Donnell, who lives the life of a recluse, shot into a crowd of small boys who were playing ball near his home Sunday afternoon. Thomas Good, aged 12, and Frank Spears, aged 8, colored, were badly wounded. Spears will probably die. As soon as the shooting became known, an angry mob of neighbors surrounded O'Donnell's home, where he was hidden. The timely arrival of a patrol wagon saved his life, but by a narrow margin, as the mob surrounded the wagon and the officers were forced to fight to protect their prisoner. O'Donnell said the boys annoyed him with their noise.

Three Men Drowned at Detroit.

DETROIT, Mich., July 26.—Three Detroit young men were drowned Sunday afternoon by the capsizing of a row boat off Sugar island, near the mouth of the Detroit river. The drowned are William W. Shier, Frank E. Russell, jr. and Edwin Stubensky. Young Russell's father and brother, who were also in the boat which upset, swam ashore but narrowly escaped from going under.

Man's Two Best Friends.

Man's two best friends are said to be a gun and a dog. It is easy to get a good dog, but hard to get a good gun. The guns made by the Winchester Repeating Arms Co., New Haven, Ct., are not only always good, but they are acknowledged the best made in the world. For years the Winchester has been the standard of the world, and to any one who has studied or examined its many points of superiority its popularity is not hard to understand. The repeating rifles and shot guns made by the Winchesters are in demand all over the world. Although they cost comparatively little, they are better than the highest priced hand made guns in every way. Winchester ammunition is of the same high grade as Winchester guns and can always be relied upon. Send for a large illustrated catalogue free.

GREEDY MEN.

They Are Responsible for the Woes of Hard Times.

"Wherefore Doth a Living Man Complain?" Wrote Jeremiah—People Should Brace Up, Put Their Trust in the Lord and Not Fret if Things Go Wrong.

This discourse of Dr. Talmage shows how all may help in the restoration of good times and is most appropriate. Text: Lamentations iii., 39: "Wherefore doth a living man complain?"

A cheerful interrogatory in the most melancholy book of the Bible! Jeremiah wrote so many sad things that we have a word named after him, and when anything is surcharged with grief and complaint we call it Jeremiad. But in my text Jeremiah, as by a sudden jolt, wakens us to a thankful spirit.

Our blessings are so much more numerous than our deserts that he is surprised that anybody should ever find fault. Having life, and with it a thousand blessings, it ought to hush into perpetual silence everything like criticism of the dealings of God. "Wherefore doth a living man complain?"

While everything in our national finances is brightening, for the last few years the land has been set to the tune of "Naomi." There has been here and there a cheerful soloist, but the grand chorus has been one of lamentation, accompanied by dirges over prostrated commerce, silent manufactories, unemployed mechanism, and all those disorders described by the two short words "hard times." The fact is that we have been paying for the bloody luxury of war, more than 30 years ago. There were great national differences, and we had not enough Christian character to settle them by arbitration and treaty, and so we went into battle, expending life and treasure, and well nigh swamping the national finances; and north and south, east and west, have ever since been paying for those four years' indulgence in barbarism. But the time has come when this depression ought to end—yea, when it will end—if the people are willing to do two or three things by way of financial medicament, for the people as well as congress must join in the work of reconperation. The best political economists tell us that there is no good reason for continued prostration. Plenty of money awaiting investment. The national health with never so strong an arm or so clear a brain. Yet we go on groaning, groaning, groaning, as though God had put this nation upon gruel, and allowed us but one decent breakfast in six months. The fact is the habit of complaining has become chronic in this country, and after all these years of whimper and wailing and objurgation we are under such a momentum of snivel that we can not stop.

There are three prescriptions by which I believe that our individual and national finances may be cured of their present depression. The first is cheerful conversation and behavior. I have noticed that the people who are most vociferous against the day in which we live are those who are in comfortable circumstances. I have made inquiry of those persons who are violent in their jeremiads against these times, and I have asked them: "Now, after all, are you not making a living?" After some hesitation and coughing and clearing their throats three or four times, they say, stammeringly: "Y-e-s." So that with a great multitude of people it is not a question of getting a livelihood, but they are dissatisfied because they can not make as much money as they would like to make. They have only $2,000 in the bank, where they would like to have $4,000. They can clear in a year only $3,000, when they would like to clear $10,000, or things come out just even, or in their trade they get $3 a day when they wish they could make $4 or $5. "Oh!" says some one, "are you not aware of the fact that there is a great population out of employment, and that there are hundreds of the good families of this country who are at their wits' end, not knowing which way to turn?" Yes, I know it better than any man in private life can know that sad fact, for it comes constantly to my eye and ear. But who is responsible for this state of things?

Much of that responsibility I put upon men in comfortable circumstances, who, by an everlasting growling, keep public confidence depressed and new enterprises from starting out and new houses from being built. You know very well that one despondent man can talk 50 men into despondency, while one cheerful physician can wake up intoexhilaration a whole asylum of hypochondriacs. It is no kindness to the poor or the unemployed for you to join in this deploration. If you have not the wit and the common sense to think of something cheerful to say, then keep silent. There is no man that can be independent of depressed conversation. The medical journals are ever illustrating it. I was reading of five men who resolved that they would make an experiment and see what they could do in the way of depressing a stout, healthy man, and they resolved to meet him at different points in his journey; and as he stepped out of his house in the morning in robust health, one of the five men met him and said: "Why, you look very sick to-day. What is the matter?" He said: "I am in excellent health; there is nothing the matter." But passing down the street he began to examine his symptoms, and the second of the five men met him and said: "Why, how bad you do look!" "Well," he replied, "I don't feel very well!" After awhile the third man met him, and the fourth man met him, and the fifth man came up and said: "Why, you look as if you had had the typhoid fever for six weeks. What is the matter with you?" And the man against whom the stratagem had been laid went home and died. And if you meet a man with perpetual talk about hard times and bankruptcy and dreadful winters that are to come you break down his courage. A few autumns ago, as the winter was coming on, people said: "We shall have a terrible winter. The poor will be frozen out this winter." There was something in the large store of acorns that the squirrels had gathered, and something in the phases of the moon, and something in other portents that made you certain we were going to have a hard winter. Winter came. It was the mildest one within my memory and within yours. All that winter long I do not think there was an icicle that hung through the day from the eaves of the house. So you prophesied falsely. Last winter was coming, and the people said: "We shall have unparalleled suffering among the poor. It will be a dreadful winter." Sure enough, it was a cold winter; but there were more large-hearted charities than ever before poured out on the country; better provision made for the poor, so that there have been scores of winters when the poor had a harder time than they did last winter. Weather prophets say we will have frosts this summer which will kill the harvests. Now, let me tell you, you have lied twice about the weather, and I believe you are lying this time!

Some people are so overborne with the dolorousness of the times that they say we shall have communistic outrages in this country, such as they had in France. I do not believe it. The parallel does not run. They have no Sabbath, no Bible, no God, in France. We have all these defenses for our American people, and public opinion is such that if the people in this country attempts a cutthroat expedition they will land in Sing Sing or from the gallows go up on tight rope. I do not believe the people of this country will ever commit outrages and riot and murder for the sake of getting bread. But all this lugubriosity of tone and face keeps people down. Now, I will make a contract. If the people of the United States for one week will talk cheerfully I will open all the manufactories, I will give employment to all the unoccupied men and women, I will make a lively market for your real estate that is eating you up with taxes, I will stop the long procession on the way to the poorhouse and penitentiary, and I will spread a plentiful table from Maine to California and from Oregon to Sandy Hook, and the whole land shall carol and thunder with national jubilee.

But says some one: "I will take that contract; but we can't affect the whole nation." My hearers and readers, representing as you do all professions, all trades and all occupations, if you should resolve never again to utter a dolorous word about the money market, but by manner and by voice and by wit and caricature, and above all by faith in God, to try to scatter this national gloom, do you not believe the influence would be instantaneous and wide-spread? The effect would be felt around the world. For God's sake, and for the sake of the poor, and for the sake of the employed, quit growling. Depend upon it, if you men in comfortable circumstances do not stop complaining, God will blast your harvests, and see how you will get along without a corn crop; and He will sweep you with floods; and He will devour you with grasshoppers; and He will burn your city. If you men in comfortable circumstances kept on complaining, God will give you something to complain about. Mark that!

The second prescription for the alleviation of financial distress is proper Christian investment. God demands of every individual state and nation a certain proportion of their income. We are parsimonious! We keep back from God that which belongs to Him, and when we keep back anything from God, He takes what He kept back, and He takes more. He takes it by storm, by sickness, by bankruptcy, by any one of the ten thousand ways which He can employ. The reason many of you are cramped in business is because you have never learned the lesson of Christian generosity. You employ an agent. You give him a reasonable salary; and, lo! you find out that he is appropriating your funds besides the salary. What do you do? Discharge him. Well, we are God's agents. He puts in our hands certain moneys. Part are to be ours; part are to be His. Suppose we take all, what then? He will discharge us; He will turn us over to financial disaster and take the trust away from us. The reason great multitudes are not prospered in business is simply because they have been withholding from God that which belongs to Him. The rule is, give and you will receive; administer liberally and you shall have more to administer. I am in full sympathy with the man who was to be baptized by immersion, and some one said: "You had better leave your pocketbook out, it will get wet." "No," said he, "I want to go down under the wave with everything. I want to consecrate my property and all to God." And so he was baptized. What we want in this country is more baptized pocketbooks.

I had a relative whose business seemed to be failing. Here a loss, and there a loss, and everything was bothering, perplexing and annoying him. He sat down one day and said: "God must have a controversy with me about something. I believe I haven't given enough to the cause of Christ." and there and then he took out his check book and wrote a large check for a missionary society. He told me: "That was the turning point in my business. Ever since then I have been prosperous. From that very day, aye, from that very hour, I saw the change." And, sure enough, he went on and he gathered a fortune. The only safe investment that a man can make in this world is in the cause of Christ. If a man give from a superabundance, God may or He may not respond with a blessing; but if a man give until he feels it, if a man give until it fetches the blood, if a man give until his selfishness cringes and twists and cowers under it, he will get not only spiritual profit, but he will get paid back in hard cash or in convertible securities. We often see men who are tight-fisted who seem to get along with their investments profitably, notwithstanding all their parsimony. But wait. Suddenly in that man's history everything goes wrong. His health fails, or his reason is dethroned, or a domestic curse smites him, or a midnight shadow of some kind drops upon his soul and up on his business. What is the matter? God is punishing him for his smallheartedness. He tried to cheat God, and God worsted him. So that one of the recipes for the cure of individual and national finances is more generosity. Where you bestowed one dollar on the cause of Christ, give two. God loves to be trusted, and He is very apt to trust back again. He says: "That man knows how to handle money; he shall have more money to handle;" and very soon the property that was on the market for a great while gets a purchaser, and the bond that was not worth more than 50 cents or a dollar goes to par, and the opening of a new street doubles the value of his house, or in any way of a million God blesses him.

Once the man finds out that secret and he goes on to fortune. There are men whom I have known who for ten years have been trying to pay God $1,000. They have never been able to get it paid, for just as they were taking out from one fold of their pocketbook a bill, mysteriously somehow in some other fold of their pocketbook there came a larger bill. You tell me that Christian generosity pays in the world to come. I tell you it pays now, pays in hard cash, pays in government securities. You do not believe it? Ah, that is what keeps you back. I know you did not believe it. The whole world and Christendom is to be reconstructed on this subject, and as you are a part of Christendom let the work begin in your own soul. "But," says some one, "I don't believe in that theory; because I have been generous, and I have been losing money for ten years." Then God prepaid you, that is all. What became of the money you made in other days? You say you spent it. Now, I will give you $500 every year as long as you live." After awhile you say: "Well, my son, you prove yourself so worthy of my confidence I will just give you $20,000 in a single lump." And you give it to him and he starts off. In two or three years he does not complain against you: "Father is not taking care of me. I ought to have $500 a year." You prepaid your son, and he does not complain. There are thousands of us now who can this year get just enough to supply our wants; but did not God provide for us in the past, and has He not again and again and again paid us in advance? In other words, has He led you all along—trusted you more than you had a right to ask? Strike, then, a balance for God. Economize in anything rather than in your Christian charities. There is not more than one out of three hundred of you who ever give enough to do you any good, and when some cause of Christianity—some missionary society or Bible society or church organization comes along and gets anything from you what do you say? You say, "I have been bled," and the never was a more significant figure of speech than that used in common parlance. Yes, you have been bled, and you are spiritually emaciated, when if you had been courageous enough to go through your property and say: "That belongs to God and this belongs to God, and the other things belong to God," and no more dared to appropriate it to your own use than something that belonged to your neighbor, instead of being bled to death by charities you would have been reinvigorated and recuperated. God will keep many of you cramped in money matters until the day of your death unless you swing out into larger generosities.

People quote as a joke what is a divine promise: "Cast thy bread upon the waters and it will return to thee after many days." What did God mean by that? There is an illusion there. In Egypt, when they sow the corn, it is at a time when the Nile is overflowing its banks and they sow the seed corn on the waters, and as the Nile begins to recede this seed corn strikes in the earth and comes up a harvest, and that is the allusion. It seems as if they are throwing the corn away on the waters, but after awhile they gather it up in a harvest. Now says God in his word: "Cast thy bread upon the waters, and it shall come back to thee after many days." It may seem to you that you are throwing it away on charities, but it will yield a harvest of green and gold—a harvest on earth and a harvest in Heaven. If men could appreciate that and act on that we would have no more trouble about individual or national finances.

Some astonishing changes in the physical type of races as a result of intercourse with foreigners have been pointed out by M. Albert Gauttard to the French Ethnographic society. The Japanese, who, since the revolution of 1868, have been rapidly adopting European modes of life, are losing the eccentricity of their eyes and the prominence of their cheek bones, while recently born children had less flattened noses than their ancestors, with a skin not so yellow. Europeans settling in Japan, on the other hand, gradually lose the rosy color of their skin and tend to acquire an eccentricity in the eye.

Among the early Greeks suicide was uncommon until they became contaminated by Roman influence, says a writer in Lippincott's Magazine. Their religious teaching, unlike that of their Asiatic contemporaries, was strongly opposed to self-destruction. While a pure and manly nation, they regarded it as a heinous crime, and laws existed which heaped indignity upon the body of the suicide. By an Athenian law the corpse was not buried until after sunset, and the hand which had done the deed—presumably the right hand —was cut off and buried separately, as having been a traitor to its owner.

THE CAPITAL.

Rights of Foreign Vessels to Traverse the Upper Ukon River.

A Heavy Run on Internal Revenue Collectors for Beer Stamps—Preparations Being Made to Put the Tariff Act Into Operation at Once.

WASHINGTON, July 23.—Senator Carter, from the committee on territories, Thursday reported favorably a joint resolution authorizing the construction of toll roads in Alaska. The resolution authorizes the secretary of the interior to grant right of way 200 feet wide. Franchises are to be limited to 90 years. The rates of toll are to be approved by the secretary of the interior, and the roads are to be otherwise under the supervision of the secretary. The resolution applies to trails, wagon roads and other highways.

A question has arisen in the treasury department as to the rights of foreign vessels to carry passengers and freight on the Upper Ynkon river to the Klondyke gold fields. A request has been received from the owners of the Canadian steamer Islander for permission to carry passengers and freight to Dyea. The matter has been referred to the solicitor of the department for an opinion, but it is believed that under existing laws the Islander can not proceed beyond Juneau, and that the trip to Dyea must be completed in an American vessel. The Islander will clear from Victoria.

WASHINGTON, July 23.—There has been a heavy run on collectors of internal revenue in all of the larger cities of the country by brewers who are purchasing beer stamps in large quantities at the 7½ cents discount allowed under existing law, in anticipation of the final passage of the tariff bill, which repeals the discount now allowed. The question of whether the beer stamps purchased now can be affixed to barrels of beer after the passage of the tariff bill in payment of tax of $1 per barrel flat has been presented to the commissioner of internal revenue, but that officer has declined to render any decision upon the hypothetical question, stating that the matter will be passed upon only when an actual case is presented for his consideration.

The requisitions received from collectors Wednesday were the largest in the history of the bureau, aggregating over $1,200,000, and Thursday those figures have been largely exceeded, the requisitions aggregating $1,600,000. The policy of the bureau has been to order stamps of all kinds only as fast as they were required to meet the requisitions and maintain a proper supply in the vaults, and no steps were taken to prepare for any such run as has developed. In consequence, the supply of stamps in vaults is running very low, and it has been found necessary to cut down the requisitions from collectors so that sufficient stamps might be kept on hand to meet the legitimate demands of the trade.

WASHINGTON, July 23.—The treasury officials have made preparations to put the tariff act into operation immediately upon its receiving the signature of the president. Copies of the bill have been sent to customs officers throughout the country in anticipation of its passage, and it is expected that all will have reached their destination by the time the bill becomes a law. Collectors also have been instructed to make the change from the old law to the new, upon receipt of trustworthy information, official or otherwise, that the bill has received the president's approval. Officials who have given the pending bill careful scrutiny state that it is exceptionally free from ambiguities and inconsistencies, and little trouble is anticipated in formulating regulations governing its administration.

WASHINGTON, July 23.—Representative C. W. Stone, of Pennsylvania, who was chairman of the committee on coinage, weights and measures of the last house, Thursday introduced in the house a bill to authorize the appointment of a monetary commission and to provide for its expenses.

WASHINGTON, July 23.—It was understood at the capitol Thursday that the president will send in his currency commission message immediately after the tariff bill is signed.

WASHINGTON, July 23.—The senate Thursday continued consideration of the tariff conference report. Chilton, of Texas, and Jones, of Arkansas, made extended speeches against it. Thomas B. Turley, of Tennessee, was sworn in as Harris' successor.

Desperate Husband and Father.

CHICAGO, July 23.—Dewitt Compton, a peddler, who had lived unhappily with his wife, attempted to shoot her Thursday night. His revolver would not work, and he pounded her on the head with the butt of the weapon until he believed her dead. He then went into the room where his two-year-old boy was sleeping, and putting a handkerchief around the little one's neck, twisted it until life was extinct. He then attempted to cut his throat with a razor. It is likely that both Compton and his wife will recover.

ADMIRAL MILLER.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—Congress probably will adjourn its extra session Saturday night. This opinion is held by most congressmen, and unless an unexpected obstacle presents itself the opinion will be verified. It is intended that the house shall first adopt the final adjournment resolution, and, though some objection may arise in the senate to its immediate consideration, this is not expected to be prolonged. Speaker Reed will announce his committees Saturday. With the tariff bill disposed of shortly after 3 p. m., an adjournment could follow within the next two hours.

Orders were issued by the secretary of the navy Friday detaching Adm. Miller from duty with the Brooklyn on the 27th instant, and ordering him to take command of the Pacific station, leaving San Francisco for Honolulu on the 5th proximo. He will be accompanied by Lieut. T. S. Rodgers and Lieut. P. Andrews. Orders were also issued Friday detaching Rr. Adm. L. A. Beardslee from command of the Pacific station on the reporting of his relief in August, and ordering him to Washington, D. C., for duty as president of the naval examining board.

The largest number of appointments of fourth-class postmasters ever made on a single day was scored Friday with an aggregate of 163. The best previous record was 157, made June 11.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—Harry A. Rucker, who was Friday nominated for internal revenue collector for Georgia, is a colored man residing in Atlanta. He has but recently come into the contest for the place and the Georgia senators had only brief notice of his probable appointment. Neither of them had met Mr. Rucker until a day or two ago and they expressed themselves as unprepared to say whether they will favor or oppose his confirmation. They state, however, that so far as they are informed Rucker is a man of good character.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—The senate has agreed to vote on the tariff bill Saturday at 3 p. m.

CHARLES A. KETCHUM,

Well Known Forger and Confidence Man Dies in the Michigan City Penitentiary.

CHICAGO, July 24.—News is received here of the death of Charles A. Ketchum, alias Kalston, alias Dick Wilson, in the Michigan City, Ind., penitentiary, by the bursting of a blood vessel. Ketchum was well known in this city as a forger and confidence man. He was only 14 years old when he commenced his criminal career in Louisville.

In 1892 he was engaged as an express messenger by the Adams Express Co., his run being from Cincinnati to Nashville. In November he is said to have robbed the company of $25,000 by substituting brown paper for money.

Returning to Chicago he committed many forgeries in the Maxwell street police district and the police of that station still carry warrants for him passing bogus checks on various retail dealers. When he learned detectives were searching for him he left Chicago and went to Indianapolis where he robbed a jeweler of a tray of diamonds. For this he was sentenced to five years in the Michigan City, Ind., penitentiary. Before Ketchum died he is said to have made a complete confession of his criminal career to Deputy Warden A. W. Sutton.

DR. M'LEAN,

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., July 24.—Dr. Donald MacLean, dean of the California Medical college, was shot and seriously wounded Friday afternoon by Patrick Walsh, a janitor, who subsequently committed suicide.

Dr. MacLean was walking homeward from the college when he encountered Walsh, who taxed the doctor with having failed to fulfill a promise made some months ago, to aid him in securing the position of janitor at the college. The doctor denied that he was under any obligations to him, whereupon Walsh drew a pistol and shot him three times, producing serious wounds. Walsh then ran with a crowd in pursuit. After running for several blocks, Walsh put the pistol to his head and blew out his own brains. At the morgue it was found that he had written a statement to the effect that the doctor had lied to him and thereby driven the nails into his own coffin.

Hail Stones as Large as Hen Eggs.

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., July 24.—At 5:45 o'clock Friday evening a hail and wind storm passed over this section, causing immense damage. No reports can be received from the districts south of here, as all wire are down. Many small buildings were blown down and corn crops are completely ruined. Window panes an eighth of an inch thick were broken here by the hail. The streets were white for 20 minutes, and some hail stones were as large as hen eggs.

Slowly Dying of Suffocation.

FRANKLIN, Ind., July 24.—While shelling corn to feed her chickens, a grain flew into the mouth of Mrs. Jacob Nichols, of Mt. Auburn, and down her windpipe. Efforts to dislodge it have been unsuccessful, as was an operation performed by the doctors, and she is slowly dying of suffocation.

CONGRESS ADJOURNS.

The Tariff Bill Passed, Signed and is Now the Law of the Land.

President McKinley, Previous to Adjournment, Sent to Both Houses His Currency Commission Message—It Was Referred to Finance Committee.

WASHINGTON, July 26.—One of the longest extra sessions of congress in recent years came to an end Saturday night when, at nine o'clock, according to previous agreement by joint resolution, the speaker of the house at the one end and the vice president of the senate at the other, declared their respective houses adjourned without day.

The day in the senate proceeded without interruption until 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon, beginning at 10 Saturday morning. Just before the hour for taking the vote the chamber filled to overflowing with members of the house, who came over to witness the final consummation of the passage of a tariff bill through both houses of congress. The vote was over within ten minutes, and greatly to the surprise of some senators it was found that the majority for the bill was exactly the same as that by which the bill was originally passed.

There had been rumors that some who remained silent on the original vote would vote against the conference report, but these rumors were found when the result was announced to be without foundation. The majority still remained at 10, the populists and silver republicans declining to vote as on the previous occasion. The result was received with demonstrations of applause in the senate both on the floor and in the galleries.

The bill, which had been previously engrossed, was then rushed over to the house, where the announcement of the agreement to the conference report was the signal for another outburst. The speaker affixed his name, and it was then rushed back to the senate, where the vice president performed the same duty. The committee on enrolled bills had a carriage waiting and drove rapidly to the white house with the precious document. The president had been advised of its coming and was waiting, ready to sign his name to the bill, which was the last act in making a statute of the United States.

Meanwhile the currency commission message had been sent to both houses. Mr. Pruden carried it to the capitol and waited in the chamber for the vote to be taken. Before the result had been footed up he made his appearance in the aisle, and as soon as the vote was announced delivered the message from the president. Meanwhile there was a good deal of cross firing over the resolution for the final adjournment, but that was finally disposed of and the message was referred to the committee on finance.

"To the Congress of the United States: In my message convening the congress in extraordinary session I called attention to a single subject—that of providing revenue adequate to meet the reasonable and proper expenses of the government. I believed that to be the most pressing subject for settlement then. A bill to provide the necessary revenues for the government has already passed the house of representatives and the senate and awaits executive action.

"Another question of very great importance is that of the establishment of our currency and banking system on a better basis, which I commented upon in my inaugural address in the following words:

"'Our financial system needs some revision: our money is all good now, but its value must not further be impaired. Our circulation must be put upon an enduring basis, not subject to easy attack, nor its stability to doubt or dispute. The strength of our paper money, offered in my judgment a constant embarrassment to the government and imperil a safe balance in the treasury.

"'Nothing was settled more clearly at the late national election than the determination upon the part of the people to keep their currency staple in value and equal to that of the most advanced nation of the world.'

"The soundness of our currency is not here questioned. No loss can occur to its holders. It is the system which should be simplified and strengthened, keeping our money just as good as it is now with less expense to the government and the people.

"The sentiment of the country is strongly in favor of early action by congress in this direction, to revise our currency laws and remove them from partisan contention. A notable assembly of business men, with delegates from 29 states and territories, was held at Indianapolis in January of this year. The financial situation commanded their earnest attention, and after a two days' session the convention resolved to request congress the appointment of a monetary commission.

"I commend this report to the consideration of congress. The authors of the report recommend a careful and thorough investigation of the monetary affairs and needs of this country in all relations and aspects, and to make proper suggestions as to any evils found to exist and the remedies therefor.

"This subject should receive the attention of congress at its special session. It ought not to be postponed until the regular session.

"I therefore recommend that a special commission be created, non-partisan in its character, to be com posed of well-informed citizens of different parties who will command the confidence of congress and the country because of their special fitness for the work, whose duty it shall be to make recommendations of whatever changes in our present banking and currency laws may be found necessary and expedient, and to report their conclusions on or before the first day of November next, in order that the same may be transmitted by me to congress early for its consideration at its first regular session.

"It is hoped that the report thus made will be so comprehensive and sound as to receive the support of all parties and the favorable action of congress. At all events, such a report can not fail to be of value to the executive branch of the government, as well as to those charged with public legislation, and to greatly assist in the establishment of an improved system of finance.

Many Bourbon county farmers have sold their wheat crops at 58 and 60 cents a bushel.

Growing tobacco crop not promising in Scott county. Corn is good color and growing nicely.

Jos. Hall, of Bourbon county, sold his crop of tobacco, 15,600 pounds, to W. T. Overby at 11 cts., all round.

The Liverpool market during the month has, on the whole, been very quiet, and chief attention has been central in Western tobaccos.

The Woodford Sun says that J. A. Cohen bought a number of lots of export cattle at 4½ to 5 cts. They run in weight from 1,400 to 1,500 pounds.

Covington, Arnold & Bro., have already bought 32,000 bushels of Madison county wheat for which they paid 57 and 60 cents. They are still buying.—Richmond Paragraph.

In Jessamine county M. Young sold his crop of wheat some time ago to be delivered in January, 1898, at 90c. Robert McAllister sold his crop of wheat for 60c. to be delivered at threshing time.

Texas will put her enormous corn crop into beef and bacon. If she were to put it into whisky she would keep the world drunk for a year to come. Beef, and not booze, is the Texas program at present.—Dallas News.

The most remarkable wheat crop ever known is now being harvested throughout East Tennessee. The season has been a perfect one, and the farmers had planted an unusually large crop. The output will be enormous.—Farmers Home Jouenal.

Seventy-five thousand bushels of blue grass seed have been harvested within a radius of five miles of town. Figure this up at 35 and 40 cents per bushel, and you can readily see the good effect it will have when converted into cash.—Winchester Democrat.

Our friend, Squire S. M. Tinsley, on Saturday last, sold thirty-four head of cattle to J. W. Biles, of Richmond, for the foreign market, at $4.55 per hundred pounds. The thirty-four head produced the sum of $2,239,94 and was a cash transaction.—Argus.

Good milch cows were never so scarce as now. The reason is attributable chiefly to the fact that hundreds of calves from three to six weeks old are shipped from this point every month to be used in veal. A good cow is now worth more than a horse.—Hancock Clarion.

A small worm of greenish color is doing great damage to the growing corn in the Big Sandy Valley. It fastens itself upon the plant just above the root, and sucks the sap. The corn, which had looked exceptionally well, is now almost ruined. Acre after acre appears of a brownish color.

Consul Taney writes from Belfast, Ireland, of a public sale there of 29 superior American geldings and mares, mostly imported from Kentucky. Two geldings sold for $775 and $862 respectively. The lowest price brought was $304, and others ranged from $510 to $388, $429 and $386. Three match teams were sold for $894, $817 and $894.

H. G. Moody, of Eminence, sold last week, to Wisconsin parties the bay gelding Philadare, by Chester Dare, for $500. Mr. Moody sold a few weeks ago another gelding for $550, and in the past few years has bought, trained and sold two geldings and two mares by Chester Dare for the aggregate price of $3,300—an average of $825 per head.

The following is a synopsis of the July report of European crops:

Great Britain.—June has been very favorable to crops, and the yield of wheat, though below average, will be better than was anticipated at the beginning of the month. The hay crop has been gathered under good conditions, and Great Britain will probably not have to import hay this year.

France.—The month has been favorable, but short sowings in the spring and adverse climatic conditions up to June give a pessimistic color to reports. It may be taken as certain that the wheat crop will not equal last year's, but reports are conflicting as to the probable amount of the shortage.

Germany.—Severe storms have "laid" the wheat in limited areas, but, according to general report, growing crops throughout the entire country are in fine condition.

Belgium, Holland, and Denmark.—The fine, weather of the month has much advanced the condition of growing crops.

Spain—Growing crops in good condition, and a better harvest than last year's confidently expected.

Italy—Some excess of moisture is complained of in the north, but the average condition of growing crops is good.

Austria-Hungary—Climatic conditions favorable during June, but an average crop not expected, owing to short spring seedings. The Hungarian wheat crop is not likely to exceed 120,000,000 bushels.

Russia.—In the southern districts there has been great excess of rain, the north drought has materially affected the prospects over wide areas. Reports are good from the Caucasus, and those from Poland are more favorable than a month ago.

The prospect for a tobacco crop is the poorest we have had in this section for many a year, and it would be a high estimate that fifty per cent. of a crop will be housed in this quarter. Similar reports come from nearly all the tobacco growing districts and it is safe to assume that there will be a good and profitable market for what tobacco is raised, and farmers should remember that the best quality, made so by cultivation and proper handling, is the only kind that brings fancy prices.

The quiet little town of Warsaw was the scene of a murder last Saturday night that was unprovoked, and has aroused the severe condemnation of the good citizens who desire to keep down every sentiment leading to bloodshed. Frank Fletcher shot and killed Andrew J. Baldwin in front of the Commercial Hotel that night shortly after 10 o'clk. Fletcher married Baldwin's mother, but illtreated her, and after a child was born to them she secured a divorce from him, since which time Fletcher has been living as a farm hand with different farmers, and was making his home with Arch Beall below town up to last week. There never has been a good feeling between Fletcher and Baldwin since the divorce. Fletcher was a quiet man about the house and bore the reputation of being a good hand and peaceable. But he was addicted to drink and when under the influence of liquor had an ugly disposition. He was drinking last Saturday night, and was sitting on the platform in front of the Commercial Hotel when Baldwin passed up the street, somewhat under the influence of liquors. Fletcher noticed him and called out "That's right, go home drunk." Baldwin made no reply but walked back in a cool manner to where Fletcher was sitting and caught him by the neck with one hand and slapped him in the face with the other. Fletcher got up, and backed to the saloon door of the hotel and drew a 32-calibre pistol from his pocket. Richard Weldon, the proprietor of the hotel, called to Fletcher not to shoot, and Baldwin who was standing on the platform about ten feet away said: "Shoot you ——!" Fletcher fired and the bullet struck Baldwin in the abdomen, and penetrated the bowels. Baldwin staggered off the platform and fell in the street where he lay groaning until he was picked up and laid on the platform. As soon as Fletcher fired the fatal shot, he coolly placed his pistol in his pocket and walked up the street, where he crossed the river to Indiana where he is now supposed to be. The grand jury indicted him for murder Wednesday, and Judge Green fixed his bail at $5,000. A request has been sent to Gov. Bradley to offer a reward of $150 for Fletcher's apprehension.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXII. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 4, 1897. NO. 41.

DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION.

The Committee Meets, Orders Precinct Meetings For the 28th inst.,

And A County Convention On The 30th, to Nominate A Candidate For Representative.

In accordance with the call of the Chairman of the Boone County Democratic Executive Committee, the following members responded and were present: Reuben Conner, William Rice, Chas. Acra, Richard Stephens, Elijah Parker, Robert McGlasson, Harry Adams, David Castleman, B. L. Rice; and it was agreed that to select a Democratic candidate for the legislature in this county, to fill the place of the late Dr. W. B. Grubbs, whose sudden and unexpected death made vacant, that a mass convention shall be held in each voting precinct in the county on the 28th day of August, 1897, at 2 o'clock p. m. to select delegates to a county convention to be held in Burlington on the 30th day of August, 1897, at 2 o'clock p. m., and said delegates to nominate a Democratic nominee to fill the place of the late Dr. W. B. Grubbs.

It was agreed that only such Democrats as participated in the last primary election, which nominated Dr. W. B. Grubbs, be allowed to vote in the precinct mass conventions. The qualification for voters at said primary election was as follows: "All persons who voted for Bryan and Sewall at the last November election, and all persons who did not vote but would have voted for Bryan and Sewall had they voted, and all young men who will be legal voters at the next November election, and will pledge themselves to support the Democratic party and the nominees of the primary election, shall be allowed to vote."

It was agreed that each precinct be entitled to one delegate for each 25 votes cast at the last election for Bryan and Sewall for President and Vice-President, and one delegate for each fraction of 13 or over.

It shall be the duty of the Committeeman in each precinct to call the precinct meeting to order and see that said meeting is properly organized, and that those who are selected as delegates shall receive their credentials as such, signed by the committeeman of the precinct, and by the chairman and secretary of the meeting.

D. E. CASTLEMAN, Chm'n.
B. L. RICE, Secretary.

MR. MCKINLEY'S modification of the civil service law only makes it more difficult to make room for the outs by bouncing the ins. His order is that no removal shall be made from any position subject to competitive examination, except for just cause and upon written charges filed with the head of the department, or other appointing officers, and of which the accused shall have full notice and an opportunity to make defense.

THE tobacco trade, last week, showed no change of importance. The offerings were quite large, and the rejections small, indicating that the prices were satisfactory to the seller. The rains throughout the tobacco area the past week improved the condition of the growing crop, and should the weather conditions from now on prove favorable there will be a good crop in quality although the acreage will be short.

The governor, per Forrester, announces that the A. P. A., has captured Louisville. "Now beat it," says the governor, per Forrester, in the Capital. But as Forrester, per self, in the same issue of the Capital proclaims that "lying is such a matter of course among the present political crew in Kentucky," how can anybody tell whether the A. P. A. has really captured Louisville, or whether the governor, who is one of the "present political crew," really wants the A. P. A. defeated.—Commonwealth.

Speaker Reed has his weather eye open on the future. He rather anticipates Democratic victories next year.

The other day ex-Representative Hyde, about to depart for his far-off home in Washington, called to say good-by to Mr. Reed. In the course of the conversation Mr. Hyde remarked:

"I served in the Fifty-fourth Congress when you were Speaker, and the only regret I have is that I did not serve in a Congress when you were leader of the minority on the floor. I should have liked to see you a thorn in the side of a Democratic majority."

"You need not feel very keenly about that," drawled the Speaker, "for I should not be in the least surprised to be the leader of the minority in the Fifty-sixth Congress, if," added the Speaker, after a long pause, "I am still in the business."—Washington Post.

Much has been said in general and tolerant way of the abuse of the pardoning power by Gov. Bradley and his able assistant, Lieutenant-Governor Worthington, but few persons have any knowledge of the extent of this abuse, and until the record is placed fully before the people, no one could understand why mobs multiplied and why the public attitude in regard to the mob has been so manifestly modified.

The Evening Post publishes herewith the whole black record. On the 10th of December, 1895, Gov. Bradley was inaugurated Governor of Kentucky. This list of pardons brings the record down to June 30, 1897, a period of one year, eight months and twenty-one days.

In that time 675 persons have been pardoned, omitting those who have merely been pardoned in order to restore them to citizenship. These pardons have been for all the crimes on the statute books, but are, in the main, pardons for the gravest crimes men can commit. Small offenses are rarely punished; when punished, the sentence is light and soon satisfied.

Thirty-two murderers, sentenced to be hanged, have had their sentence commuted to life imprisonment.

Sixty-four convicts who had 'killed their men" and who were convicted of manslaughter, have been pardoned. In all, ninety-six murderers have been turned loose on society since the inauguration of Governor Bradley.

It is interesting to compare the sentences of manslaughter with the term of execution.

Sentenced for 17 years, one served 3; for 16, 7; for 10, 3; for 4, 2; for 21, 11; for 3½, only 1 month; for 15, 5: for 10, 3; for 21, 4; for 20, 9.

These sixty-four men-slayers received, on an average, an eight-year sentence, and were released after serving three years.

This record shows very clearly why the people have lost faith in the courts, in the Governor and in the law, and it shows why any outraged community appeals so promptly to Judge Lynch.

It shows, further, how to suppress pardons. Here is the list, as taken from the records, as kept at Frankfort; it is not interesting reading, but it is most instructive.—Louisville Post.

Most of the corn has been "laid by." It has a fine, healthy color and is doing nicely.—Georgetown Times.

CROP AND STOCK.

The current issue of Brads streets Journal contains some facts in regard to the wheat market which it will be well for the farmer to consider. Speaking of the supply of wheat on hand and the outlook for prices it says: "The world's available supply of wheat is probably the smallest at a like period in many years. Europe is expected to have to import 100,000,000 bushels more wheat than last year, and neither India, Australia or the Argentine is expected to be able to supply its usual share. The American wheat farmer and speculator are taking an unusual interest in the situation at this time."

Mr. Samuel J. Bailey, of the Burgin neighborhood, up to this writing, has produced the banner crop of wheat for Mercer county, says the Sayings, size of field considered. On twenty acres of Fulse he realized 915 bushels, an average of 42.25 to the acre. His entire wheat crop harvested from 75 acres, weighed out 2,400 bushels, an average all round of 32 bushels to the acre. He sold his crop at 62½ prior to threshing, making the total in dollars for the yield $1,492.

J. W. Haymaker says that on his way home last Friday from a visit to his daughter in Clark county, he did not see a good crop of tobacco anywhere between Clark and Henry county. He further gives it as his opinion judging from what he saw in Franklin, Fayette and Clark counties that there will not be more than a fourth of a crop.—Eminence Constitutionalist.

A correspondent of the Danville Advocate says: "Every year I hear of caterpillers destroying whole orchards, and there is nothing more easily disposed of. I bore a hole deep enough to reach the sap, fill it with sulphur, and then plug it up. The result is magical. The sap takes up the sulphur to every branch and twig, and the caterpillers die at once. I have never known of a tree being injured by it, and I have pursued this course for years."

Janesville, Wis., correspondent writes that the '96 crop is certainly one of the best ever grown in that State. He says that it is going through the sweat in fine shape, and with less than the usual damage. The samples drawn indicate light colors, fine texture, and a big percentage of wrappers. The growing crop is also very promising.

Mr. John B. Graves sold to Simon Weihl 130 fat cattle in 2 lots, one averaging 1694 pounds, the other 1614 pounds at $4.40 per cwt. Mr. Weihl regarded them as the finest lot of cattle that ever left Georgetown. They will be shipped to Europe by way of Boston.—Georgetown Times.

The Hopkinsville Banner, Republican, insinuates that the Republican officials at Frankfort are an unknown, adventurous set and says: "If we had anticipated success we would have put our best men to the front."

Pius Payne, colored, is undoubtedly the champion tomato grower of Bardstown. He had on exhibition six tomatoes of the tree variety that weighed fourteen pounds.

Mr. P. B. Croft, of Crittenden county, raised 2,400 bushels of wheat this year. It is reported that one field gave an average yield of thirty-one bushels to the acre.

John Caldwell threshed for Henry Crow, of Clinton, one acre of wheat which yielded 108 two-bushel sacks of wheat.

MEN CHEATED

Into Ruin By the Tempting of the Gambling Passion.

A Sin that Works Insidiously With Drum or Fing, and Carries Its Victims Down in Silent Procession—Sermon by Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D. D.

Dr. Talmage, in his sermon, depicts the insidious modes by which evil habit gains supremacy, and shows how splendid men are cheated into ruin. Text: Isaiah v., 18—"Woe unto them that sin as it were with a cart rope."

There are some iniquities that only nibble at the heart. After a lifetime of their work the man still stands upright, respected and honored. These vermin have not strength enough to gnaw through a man's character. But there are other transgressions that lift themselves up to gigantic proportions and seize hold of a man and bind him with thongs forever. There are some iniquities that have such great emphasis that he who commits them may be said to sin as with a cart rope. I suppose you know how they make a great rope. The stuff out of which it is fashioned is nothing but tow, which you pull apart without any exertion of your fingers. This is spun into threads, any of which you could easily snap, but a great many of these threads are interwound—then you have a rope strong enough to bind an ox or hold a ship in a tempest. I speak to you of the sin of gambling. A cart rope in strength is that sin, and yet I wish more especially to draw your attention to the small threads of influence out of which that mighty iniquity is twisted. This crime is on the advance, so that it is well that not only fathers, and brothers, and sons be interested in such a discussion, but that wives, and mothers, and sisters, and daughters look out lest their present home be sacrificed, or their intended home be blasted.

No man, no woman, can stand aloof from such a subject as this and say: "It has no practical bearing upon my life;" for there may be in a short time in your history an experience in which you will find that the discussion involved three worlds—earth, Heaven and hell. There are gambling establishments by the thousands. There are about 5,500 professional gamblers.

Out of all the gambling establishments, how many of them do you suppose profess to be honest? Ten. These ten professing to be honest because they are merely the ante-chamber to those that are acknowledged fraudulent. There are first class establishments. You step a little way out of Broadway, New York. You go up the marble stairs. You ring the bell. The liveried servant introduces you. The walls are lavender tinted. The mantels are of Vermont marble. The pictures are Jephthah's Daughter" and "Dore's, Dante's and Virgil's Frozen Region of Hell," a most appropriate selection, this last, for the place. There is the roulette table, the finest, costliest, most exquisite piece of furniture in the United States. There is the banqueting room, where, free of charge to the guests, you may find the plate, and vlands, and wines, and cigars, sumptuous beyond parallel. Then you come to the second-class gambling establishment. To it you are introduced by a card through some "roper in." Having entered, you must either gamble or fight. Sanded cards, dice loaded with quicksilver, poor drinks mixed with more poor drinks, will soon help you to get rid of all your money to a tune in short meter with staccato passages. You wanted to see. You saw. The low villains of that place watch you as you come in. Does not the panther, squat in the grass, know a calf when he sees it? Wrangle not for your rights in that place, or your body will be thrown bloody into the street, or dead into the river.

You go along a little further and you find the policy establishment. In that place you bet on numbers. Betting on two numbers is called a "saddle;" betting on three numbers is called a "gig;" betting on four numbers is called a "horse," and there are thousands of young men leaping into the "saddle," and mounting the "gig," and behind that "horse" riding to perdition. There is always one kind of sign on the door—"Exchange"—a most appropriate title for the door, for there, in that room, a man exchanges health, peace and Heaven, for loss of health, loss of home, loss of family, loss of immortal soul. Exchange sure enough and infinite enough.

Now you acknowledge that is a cart-rope of evil, but you want to know what are the small threads out of which it is made. There is, in many, a disposition to hazard. They feel a delight in walking near a precipice because of the sense of danger. There are people who go upon Jungfrau, not for the largeness of the prospect, but for the feeling that they have of thinking, "What would happen if I should fall off?" There are persons who have their blood filliped and accelerated by skating very near an air hole. There are men who find a positive delight in driving within two inches of the edge of a bridge. It is this disposition to hazard that finds development in gaming practices. Here are $500. I may stake them. If I stake them I may lose them; but I may win $5,000. Whichever way it turns, I have the excitement. Shuffle the cards. Lost! Heart thumps. Head dizzy. At it again—just to gratify this desire for hazard.

There are others who go into this sin through sheer desire for gain. It is especially so with professional gamblers. They always keep cool. They never drink enough to unbalance their judgment. They do not ace the dice so much as they see the dollar beyond the dice, and for that they watch as the spider in the web, looking as if dead until the fly passes. Thousands of young men in the hope of gain go into these practices. They say: "Well, my salary is not enough to allow this luxury. I don't get enough from my store, office or shop. I ought to have finer apartments. I ought to have more richly flavored cigars. I ought to be able to entertain my friends more expensively. I won't stand this any longer. I can with one brilliant stroke make a fortune. Now, here goes, principle or no principle, Heaven or hell. Who cares?" When a young man makes up his mind to live beyond his income, Satan has bought him out and out, and it is only a question of time when the goods are to be delivered. The thing is done. You may plant in the way all the batteries of truth and righeousness, that man is bound to go on.

This sin works very insidiously. Other sins sound the drum, and flaunt the flag, and gather their recruits with wild huzzas, but this marches its procession of pale victims in dead of night, in silence, and when they drop into the grave there is not so much sound as the click of a dice. Oh, how many have gone down under it. Look at those men who were once highly prospered. Now their forehead is licked by tongue of flame that will never go out. In their souls are plunged the beaks which will never be lifted. Swing open the door of that man's heart and you see a coil of adders wriggling their indescribable horror until you turn away and hide your face and ask God to help you to forget it. The most of this evil is unadvertised. The community does not hear of it. Men defrauded in gaming establishments are not fools enough to tell of it. Once in a while, however, there is an exposure, as when in Boston the police swooped upon a gaming establishment and found in it the representatives of all classes of citizens, from the first merchants on State street to the low Ann street gambler, as when Bullock, the cashier of the Central railroad of Georgia, was found to have stolen $103,000 for the purpose of carrying on gaming practices; as when a young man in one of the savings banks of Brooklyn, many years ago, was found to have stolen $40,000 to carry on gaming practices; as when a man connected with a Wall street insurance company was found to have stolen $180,000 to carry on his gaming practices. But that is exceptional.

Generally the money leaks silently from the merchant's till into the gamester's wallet. I believe that one of the main pipes leading to this sewer of iniquity is the excitement of business life. Is it not a significant fact that the majority of the day gambling houses in New York are in proximity to Wall street? Men go into the excitement of stock gambling, and from that they plunge into the gambling houses, as, when men are intoxicated, they go into a liquor saloon to get more drink. The agitation that is witnessed in the stock market when the chair announces the word "Northwestern," or "Ft. Wayne," or "Rock Island," or "New York Central," and the rat! tat! tat! of the auctioneer's hammer, and the excitement of making "corners," and getting up "pools," and "carrying stock," and a "break" from 80 to 70, and the excitement of rushing around in curbstone brokerage, and the sudden cries of "Buyer three!" "Buyer ten!" "Take 'em!" "How many?" and the making or losing of $10,000 by one operation unfits [illegible] to go home [illegible] up the flight of stairs, amid business offices, to the darkly curtained, wooden-shuttered room, gaily furnished inside, and takes his place at the roulette or the faro table. But I can not tell all the process by which men get into this evil. A man went to New York. He was a western merchant. He went into a gaming house on Park place. Before morning he had lost all his money save $1, and he moved around about with that dollar in his hand, and after awhile, caught still more powerfully under the infernal infatuation, he came up and put down the dollar and cried out until they heard him through the saloon: "One thousand miles from home, and the last dollar on the gaming table."

Many years ago, for sermonic purposes and in company with the chief of police of New York, I visited one of the most brilliant gambling houses in that city. It was night, and as we came up in front all seemed dark. The blinds were down, the door was guarded, but after a whispering of the officer with the guard at the door we were admitted into the hall, and thence into the parlors, around one table finding eight or ten men in mid-life, well dressed—all the work going on in silence, save the noise of the rattling "chips" on the gaming table in one parlor and the revolving ball of the roulette table in the other parlor. Some of these men, we are told, had served terms in prison; some were shipwrecked bankers and brokers and money dealers, and some were going their first rounds of vice—but all intent upon the table, as large or small fortunes moved up and down before them. Oh! there was something awfully solemn in the silence—the intense gaze, the suppressed emotions of the players. No one looked up. They all had money in the rapids, and I have no doubt some saw, as they sat there, horses and carriages and houses and lands and home and family rushing down into the vortex. A man's life would not have been worth a farthing in that presence had he not been accompanied by the police, if he had been supposed to be on a Christian errand of observation. Some of these men went in by private key, some went in by careful introduction, some were taken in by the patrons of the establishment. The officer of the law told me: "None get in here except by police mandate or by some letter of a patron." While we were there a young man came in, put his money down on the roulette table and lost; put more money down on the roulette table and lost; put more money down on the roulette table and lost; then feeling in his pockets for more money, finding none, in severe silence he turned his back upon the scene and passed out. While we stood there men lost their property and lost their souls. Oh, merciless place! Not once in all the history of that gaming house has there been one word of sympathy uttered for the losers at the game. Sir Horace Walpole said that a man dropped dead in one of the clubhouses of London; his body was carried into the clubhouse, and the members of the club began immediately to bet as to whether he were dead or alive, and when it was proposed to test the matter by bleeding him, it was only hindered by the suggestion that it would be unfair to some of the players.

In the gaming houses of our cities, men have their property wrung away from them, and then they go out, some of them to drown their grief in strong drink, some to ply the counterfeiter's pen, and so restore their fortunes, some resort to the suicide's revolver, but all going down, and that work proceeds day by day, and night by night. "That cart-rope," says some young man, "has never been wound around my soul." But have not some threads of that cart-rope been twisted?

I arraign before God the gift enterprises of our cities, which have a tendency to make this a nation of gamblers. Whatever you get, young man, in such a place as that, without giving a proper equivalent, is a robbery of your own soul, and a robbery of the community. Yet, how we are appalled to see men who have failed in other enterprises go into gift concerts, where the chief attraction is not music, but the prizes distributed among the audience; or to sell books where the chief attraction is not the book, but the package that goes with the book. Tobacco dealers advertise that on a certain day they will put money into their papers, so that the purchaser of this tobacco in Cincinnati or New York may unexpectedly come upon a magnificent gratuity. Boys hawking through the cars packages containing nobody knows what, until you open them and find they contain nothing. Christian men with pictures on their wall gotten in a lottery, and the brain of community taxed to find out some new way of getting things without paying for them! Oh, young men, these are threads that make the cart rope, and when a young man presents to these practices, he is being bound hand and foot by a habit which has already destroyed "a great multitude that no man can number." Sometimes these gift enterprises are carried on in the name of charity; and some of you remember at the close of our civil war how many gift enterprises were on foot, the proceeds to go to the orphans and widows of the soldiers and sailors. What did the men who had charge of those gift enterprises care for the orphans and widows? Why, they would have allowed them to freeze to death upon their steps. I have no faith in a charity which, for the sake of relieving present suffering, opens a gaping jaw that has swallowed down so much of the virtue and good principle of the community. Young man, have nothing to do with these things. They only sharpen your appetite for games of chance. Do one or two things: be honest or die.

I have accomplished my object if I put you on the look-out. It is a great deal easier to fall than it is to get up again. The trouble is that when men begin to go astray from the path of duty, they are apt to say, "there's no use of my trying to get back. I've sacrificed my respectability, I can't return;" and they go on until they are utterly destroyed. I tell you, my friends, that God this moment, by His Holy spirit, can change your entire nature, so that you will be a different man in a minute. Your great want—what is it? More salary? Higher social position? No, no. I will tell you the great want of every man, if he has not already obtained it. It is the grace of God. Are there any who have fallen victims to the sin that I have been reprehending? You are in a prison. You rush against the wall of this prison and try to get out, and you fail; and you turn around and dash against the other wall until there is blood on the grates, and blood on your soul. You will never get out in this way. There is only one way gaining out. There is a key that can unlock this prison house. It is the key of the house of David. It is the key that Christ wears at his girdle. If you will allow Him to put that key to the lock, the bolt will shoot back, and the door will swing open, and you will be a free man in Christ Jesus. Oh, prodigal, what a business this is for you, feeding swine, when your father stands in the front door, straining his eyesight to catch the first glimpse of your return; and the calf is as fat as it will be, and the harps of Heaven are all in tune strung, and the feet free. There are converted gamblers in Heaven. The light of eternity flashed upon the green baize of the billiard-saloon. In the laver of God's forgiveness they washed off, all their sin. They quit trying for earthly stakes. They tried for Heaven and won it. There stretches a hand from Heaven toward the head of the worst offender. It is a hand, not clenched as if to smite, but outspread as if to drop a benediction. Other seas have a shore and may be fathomed, but the sea of God's love—eternity has no plummet to strike the bottom, and immensity no iron-bound shore to confine it. Its tides are lifted by the heart of infinite compassion. Its waves are the hosannahs of the redeemed. The argosies that sail on it drop anchor at last amid the thundering salvo of eternal victory. But alas for that man who sits down to the final game of life and puts his immortal soul on the ace, while the angels of God keep the tally-board, and after kings, and queens, and knaves, and spades are "shuffled" and "cut," and the game is ended, hovering and impending worlds discover that he has lost it, the faro-bank of eternal darkness clutching down into its wallet all the blood-stained wagers.

THE largest house in the world is in Wieden, a suburb of Vienna. In this domicile there are 1,400 rooms, divided into 400 suites of from four to six rooms each, and they at present shelter 2,112 persons, who pay an annual rental of over 100,000 florins.

GREAT SPEED AT SEA.

Marine Architecture Promises to Be Revolutionized.

A recent trial of the little vessel called the Turbinia has attracted great attention from experts, not only on account of her amazing registered speed of "38 miles an hour" over a rough course, but also from the novelty of the method of propulsion, the lightness of machinery, the absence of vibration and other notable features. At a recent meeting of the shipbuilding section of the institute of civil engineers in London, Mr. Thornycroft, whose name is well known in connection with the development of the modern type of water tube boilers, congratulated Charles Algernon Parsons, the designer of the Turbinia, upon her wonderful record, and at the same time he pointed out reasons why the very extraordinary speed attained, as compared with the torpedo-boat destroyers — heretofore the speediest vessels constructed—was more remarkable even than appeared at first sight. Prof. Ewing, of Cambridge, who spent a week upon the vessel and made many tests and experiments in regard to speed, water and fuel consumption, etc., gave some very interesting information. The absence of complicated machinery (there being no reciprocating parts as in ordinary engines) made the duty of the engineer very easy; "in fact," he says, "there was nothing but a steam stop valve and a reversing valve that had to be handled." In 20 seconds after starting from a state of rest the steam turbine engines were working at a rate equivalent to a speed of 28 knots; of course, this did not mean that the ship responded instantly, and got under such headway in that brief time.

When asked about vibration the professor replied that it did not exist—"he did not mean a comparative quietude; but the phrase should be understood in its literal sense. Even at the highest speed there was no vibration—nothing more than a hum from the fan, which was driven directly from the central propeller shaft." The professor said that he had gone into this investigation with a certain degree of skepticism; but that the trials had been entirely successful throughout, and he could now point to nothing that would form a set-off against the obvious advantages which were possessed by the turbine as a marine motor.

These are very strong expressions, especially when we reflect that they are not sensational interviews, given through the intermediary of a reporter having, perhaps, a penchant for injecting adjectives into his notes, but are deliberate statements of experts, made in the presence of critics fully competent to detect any flaw and to demolish any untenable claim. They indicate that a most important experimental departure has been made in the method of propulsion of steam vessels, which will probably exert a far-reaching influence in the future development of steam navigation.

In conclusion, it may be explained that the Turbinia is not propelled by ejecting streams of water from her stern, as some one described not long ago; but steam is projected with great force against the blades of a steam turbine wheel, somewhat resembling an ordinary electric fan inclosed in a tight case. This wheel rotates with great speed, and is attached directly to the shaft which drives the propeller. There are actually three turbines coupled to three shafts. The absence of vibration is presumably due, in part at least, to the fact that there are no reciprocating movements as in an ordinary engine, but a continuous rotation in one direction only, except when going astern.—Philadelphia Record.

Deafness in School Children.

The fact that myopiahs is frequent among schoolchildren is well known. It is not so well known that the impaired hearing is also frequently met with. The children thus affected are often accused of being lazy and inattentive, when in reality their ears are at fault. Heiot shows that these cases are quite common, are easily recognized, are generally curable and when cured a large number of children are transformed, so to speak, both from a physical and a moral standpoint. According to Weil of Stuttgart the proportion of school children with impaired hearing is 35 per cent.; according to Moure of Bordeaux, 17 per cent. Heiot agrees with Gete and other aurists that the proportion is 25 per cent., or one-fourth. All the children in a class should be carefully examined and these semi-deaf pupils will always be found among the poor scholars. The cause of infirmity is to be sought for—nasopharyngeal catarrh following measles, scarlatina, whooping cough, adenoid vegetations, hypertrophied tonsils, etc.—and normal conditions are to be restored by appropriate treatment.—Popular Science News.

Alaska Indians in Business.

The missionary may have builded better than he knew. Several Indians, acting in the spirit of emulation, have started stores of their own, and in some instances carry a stock of $6,000 to $10,000. There are six stores of this description on their islands. These educated Indians have arrived at the conclusion that there is money in commercial life, and have decided to compete with Mr. Duncan and his Portland capitalists. Mr. Duncan has met this competition, first by selling flour at $1.25 a sack and then raising dock rates to three dollars a ton upon all goods not landed for his store. The Indians have determined to build a dock of their own, and have announced that they will complete it this summer and allow anyone to land there who wishes to. This is no idle boast, as they have plenty of money and can pay cash for work they don't do themselves. Educational and religious movements on the islands are being overshadowed by commercial matters. Rich free-milling quartz has been found, and the Indians hope before long to have stamp mills at work.—Alaska Miner.

THE HANDY MECHANIC.

How He Can Handle a Bulky Fodder Crop with Ease.

In cutting ensilage or fodder, a little work transferred from hand to horse power often goes a great way to lessen expense. A simple method is shown below of unloading fodder or hay. Two ropes about 50 feet long, depending on the length of the rack and height of load to be drawn, are used, one end of each being fastened to the hind axle of the wagon. They are then passed back and over the top of the rack between the two outside boards on either side. While loading, the ropes may be brought back under the outside of the rack and fastened almost any place on the rear part. When the load is completed the ropes are drawn over the fodder and tied to the back of the rack, acting in the capacity of a binding pole. To unload, fasten the ropes to a beam, and with the team draw the wagon slowly out from under the load. The first time may not always prove successful; but with a little practice the wagon may be unloaded in a few minutes.

The ropes should be so laid that they will not catch to anything. The fodder must be placed evenly on either side and the distance apart of the ropes is to be determined by practice. In unloading, if the fodder is heavy, the front end of the rack must be tied to the wagon or the hind end placed almost directly over the hind wheels, as the weight of the fodder is liable to tip up the rack. In tying the ropes to the beam or post, do it high enough to prevent the drawing downward upon the fodder. They should be of equal length, which may be regulated by one man drawing down on one and the other while unloading, as he finds it necessary. The team must be driven slowly. It is best to practice a few times on quite small loads and notice the effect upon different ways of loading and the place the fodder is to drop, by loosening or tightening the rope.—Farm and Home.

STORAGE OF GRAIN.

Care Must Be Taken to Insure Its Keeping in Good Condition.

On the average farm it is nearly always necessary to store more or less grain. Oats for seed and feeding, wheat for seed and exchange at the mill for flour, as well as to market. Wheat is a cash crop and can be turned into money at any time; it is often as good [illegible] to store it in the granary and sell as the money is needed as to sell direct from the machine, when the threshing is done, and then put the money in the bank.

But it is essential when grain of any kind is to be stored away that pains be taken to store in such a way as will insure its keeping in a good condition. This granary should be clean, well-ventilated and as nearly vermin-proof as possible. A separate building will generally supply these conditions more fully than any other.

If a new granary is to be built, the work should be done in good season, so as to be sure to have it ready when the threshing is done, as there is always more or less loss every time that small grain is handled, and it is quite an item to handle it as little as possible.

The granary should be built with the floor well up from the ground, set on pillars; put inverted pans or sheets of iron over each post to keep out rats and mice; have a good, solid floor and be sure that it is tight. Have good ventilation at the top. The size must, of course, depend on the quantity of grain to be stored, but it is best to have plenty of room, so that in case it is necessary to store damp grain there will be room to stir it about.

With an old granary a thorough cleaning out should be given, and it will be better if the inside is thoroughly whitewashed, using a good lime wash into which a small quantity of carbolic acid or copperas has been stirred.

It is hardly good economy to start a crop in such a way or under such conditions that it will not be reasonably sure of keeping in good condition. There is always some loss in storing grain; it is quite an item to make this as small as possible.—St. Louis Republic.

FACTS FOR FARMERS.

A good male animal will improve a whole herd.

All heavy crops are grown in a rich soil thoroughly cultivated.

Market all the poor sheep as soon as fat; there is no money in keeping them.

Early maturity is one of the best methods of lessening the cost of early maturity.

By keeping stock growing and gaining they will be making something every day.

The keeping of good sheep is as profitable as the keeping of any other kind of stock.

One advantage with both sheep and hogs is the quick returns it is possible to receive.

Good land, good seed, good tillage, good manure are four essentials of good farming.

Hogs require salt the same as other stock. Keep a supply where they can help themselves.—Farmers Union.

SYSTEMATIC WORK.

Without It Poultry Raising Cannot Be Made a Success.

Too much work and no pay discourages all who look forward for the best results, and it is safe to claim that a great many persons who keep large flocks do more work than they should be compelled to perform; not that work should be avoided, for only work will enable the poultryman to derive a profit, but there is no reason why such work should be drudgery, or become so disagreeable that one should dread to do the duties assigned. No matter what the work may be, if one has several hundred hens, and gives his whole attention to business (poultry), a regular routine can be followed; but for a small flock of not over 20 hens it does not pay to spend several hours in the poultry house. It is just such duties that have disgusted many, and only those who keep fowls for pleasure and have plenty of time to spare can afford to lose the time devoted to a small lot of hens. But much of the work is made; that is, more work must be done because it is not done right. The cleaning of the poultry house is a job which no one enjoys. To go into a poultry house on a cold day and pick and scrape the droppings, inhaling the dust and getting dirt on the feet and dust on the clothes, is more than should be done unless the hens are returning a fair compensation therefor in eggs. It all depends upon what the attendant does and how he cleans the poultry house. One who understands his business will clean the house with a broom, and use nothing else. First the house is thoroughly cleaned and dusted; then dry dirt is sprinkled under the roost on the floor. On this are placed leaves or cut straw. Instead of cleaning the poultry house once a week this work is done daily. With the broom the walls, roosts, tops and nest boxes and floor are swept, the refuse removed and more dirt and clean litter added, which will require less than ten minutes for an ordinary poultry house, thus also giving the fowls clean, dry quarters and assisting to ward off disease. The same in feeding: first learn, by feeding, how much the fowls should have, and scatter the grain in clean litter and the work is done. Have a place (on the manure heap is best) for the refuse litter, so as to be able to dispose of it handily. Fowls kept in this manner will lay, and to clean the poultry house daily will be less difficult than to wait until a large amount of filth accumulates to invite disease.—Farm and Fireside.

A SUMMER HOGPEN.

Suggestion for a Cheap Little House and Suitable Yard.

The swine quarters are often in buildings connected with the house and in such cases are likely to become offensive during the warm weather of summer. It is wise in such a case to construct summer quarters out in the orchard. The cut gives a suggestion for a cheap little house and yard. The end of the yard has a sloping top, so that the pigs can lie out of doors upon the ground, and still be protected from the sun. The roof of the little house can be of matched lumber and left unshingled.—American Agriculturist.

SUMMER PIGPEN.

Grain Ration for Poultry.

On most farms at his time of the year, the fowls can have their freedom, and the tender grass, the fat bugs and insects, and the much wholesome and fresh natural food that they find will make it hardly necessary for any other ration. But it is best to give them an evening feed of wheat or oats, in order that those that may not have been fortunate enough to find much, need not go to bed with an empty stomach. But there is a great value which these farm range fowls secure, and which is almost as important as the food they get—it is exercise.—Rural World.

THE LITTLE OLD HOUSE.

It stands at the bend where the road has its end,
And the blackberries nod on the vine,
And the sun flickers down to its gables of brown
Through the sweet-scented boughs of the pine.
The roof tree is racked and the windows are cracked,
And the grasses grow high at the door,
But hid in my heart is an altar, apart,
To the little, old house by the shore.

For its portals so bare was a Paradise rare,
With the blossoms that clambered above,
When a mother's dear face gave a charm to the place
As she sang at her labor of love.
And the breeze, as it strays through the window and plays
With the dust and the leaves on the floor,
Is a memory sweet of the pattering feet
In the little, old house by the shore.

And again in my ears, through the dream of years,
They whisper, the playmates of old,
The brother whose eyes were a glimpse of the skies,
The sister with ringlets of gold.
And "father" comes late to the path at the gate,
As he did when the fishing was o'er,
And the echoes ring out, at our welcoming shout,
From the little, old house by the shore.

But the night wind has blown and the vision has flown,
And the sound of the children is still,
And the shadowy mist, like a spirit, has kissed
The graves by the church on the hill.
But softly, afar, sing the waves on the bar,
A song of the sunshine of yore—
A lullaby deep for the loved ones who sleep
Near the little, old house by the shore.

SAM DAVIS' HEROIC END.

DEATH RATHER THAN THE BETRAYAL OF A FRIEND.

THE bust of Sam Davis, the confederate hero who met death on the scaffold at Pulaski, Tenn., to save the life of a comrade, is one of the best pieces of sculpture in the Nashville Parthenon. It is the work of George Julian Zolnay, is heroic in size, noble in conception and wonderfully true to the original. Joshua Brown, now of New York city, who belonged to the Second Kentucky cavalry of the confederate army, and was a fellow scout with Samuel Davis, tells the thrilling and awful story of his fate in the Veteran:

"Gen. Bragg had sent us, a few men who knew the country, into middle Tennessee to get all the information possible concerning the movements of the federal army, to find out if it was moving from Nashville and Corinth to reinforce Chattanooga. We were to report to Col. Shaw or Capt. Coleman, who commanded Coleman's scouts. We were to go south to Decatur and send our reports by a courier line to Gen. Bragg at Missionary Ridge. When we received our orders we were told that the duty was very dangerous, and that they did not expect but few of us to return; that we would probably be captured or killed, and we were cautioned against exposing ourselves unnecessarily.

"After we had been in Tennessee about ten days we watched the Sixteenth army corps, commanded by Gen. Dodge, move up from Corinth to Pulaski. We agreed that we would leave for the south on Friday, the 19th of November, 1863. A number had been captured and several killed. We were to start that night, each man for himself; each of us had his own information, but I did not write it down or make any memorandum of it, for fear of being captured. I had counted almost every regiment and all the artillery in the Sixteenth corps and found out that they were moving on Chattanooga. Late in the afternoon we started out and ran into the Seventh Kansas cavalry, known as the 'Kansas Jayhawkers,' and when we were told that regiment had captured us we thought our time had come. We were taken to Pulaski, about 25 miles away, and put into jail, where several other prisoners had been sent, and among whom was Sam Davis. I talked with him over our prospects of imprisonment and escape, which were very gloomy. Davis said they had searched him that day and found some papers upon him, and that he had been taken to Gen. Dodge's headquarters. They had also found in his saddle seat maps and descriptions of the fortifications at Nashville and other points and an exact report of the federal army in Tennessee. They found in his boot a letter, with other papers, which was intended for Gen. Bragg.

"'I took him to my private office,' said Gen. Dodge, 'and I told him it was a very serious charge brought against him; that he was a spy, and, from what I found on his person, he had accurate information in regard to my army, and I must know where he obtained it. I told him he was a young man and did not seem to realize the danger he was in. Up to that time he said nothing, but then he replied in a most respectful and dignified manner:

"'"Gen. Dodge, I know the danger of my situation, and I am willing to take the consequences."

"'I asked him then to give the name of the person from whom he got the information that I knew it must be some one near headquarters who had given him the plans of the federal army. He replied:

"'"I know that I will have to die, but I will not tell where I got the information, and there is no power on earth that can make me tell. You are doing your duty as a soldier, and I am doing mine. If I have to die, I do so feeling that I am doing my duty to God and my country."

"'I pleaded with and urged him with all the power I possessed to give me some chance to save his life, for I discovered that he was a most admirable young fellow, with the highest character and strictest integrity. He then said: "It is useless to talk to me. I do not intend to do it. You can court-martial me, but I will not betray the trust reposed in me."

"'He thanked me for the interest I had taken in him, and I sent him back to prison. I immediately called a court-martial to try him.'

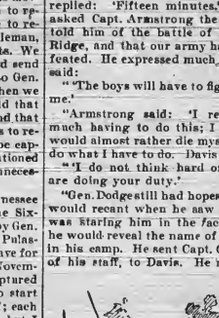
"The night before he was hanged he wrote the following letter to his mother and father:

"'Pulaski, Giles County, Tenn., Nov. 26, 1863.—Dear Mother: Oh, how painful it is to write to you! I have got to die tomorrow morning—to be hanged by the federals. Mother, do not grieve for me. I must bid you good-by forevermore. Mother, I do not fear to die. Give my love to all. Your son, SAMUEL DAVIS.

"'Mother, tell the children all to be good. I wish I could see you once more, but I never will any more. Mother and father, do not forget me. Think of me when I am dead, but do not grieve for me. It will not do any good. Father, you can send after my remains if you want to do so. They will be at Pulaski, Tenn. I will leave some things, too, with the hotel keeper for you. Pulaski is in Giles county, Tenn., south of Columbia. Good-by. S. D.'

"After his sentence he was put into a cell in the jail and we did not see anything of him until Thursday morning, the day before the execution. We were ordered to get ready, as we were going to be removed to the courthouse on the public square, about 100 feet from the jail. Davis was handcuffed and was brought in just as we were eating breakfast. I gave him a piece of meat that I had been cooking, and he, handcuffed, was compelled to eat it with both hands. He thanked me, and we all bade him good-by, and were sent to the courthouse and the guard was doubled.

"The next morning, Friday, November 27, at ten o'clock, we heard the drums and a regiment of infantry marching down to the jail, and a wagon with a coffin in it was driven up, and the provost marshal went into the jail and brought Davis out. He got into the wagon and stood up and looked around at the courthouse, and, seeing us at the windows, bowed to us his last farewell. He was dressed in a dark brown overcoat with a cape to it, which had been a blue federal coat, such as many of us had captured and then dyed brown. I note this because it has been stated that he was dressed in citizen's clothes. I do not remember exactly, but I think he had on a gray jacket underneath. He then sat down upon his coffin, and the regiment moved off to the suburbs of the town, where the gallows was built.



"Upon reaching the gallows he got out of the wagon and took his seat on a bench under a tree. He asked Capt. Armstrong how long he had to live. He replied: 'Fifteen minutes.' He then asked Capt. Armstrong the news. He told him of the battle of Missionary Ridge, and that our army had been defeated. He expressed much regret, and said:

"'The boys will have to fight without me.'

"'Armstrong said: 'I regret very much having to do this; I feel that I would almost rather die myself than to do what I have to do. Davis replied:

"'I do not think hard of you; you are doing your duty.'

"Gen. Dodge still had hopes that Davis would recant when he saw that death was staring him in the face and that he would reveal the name of the traitor in his camp. He sent Capt. Chickasaw, of his staff, to Davis. He rapidly approached the scaffold, jumped from his horse and went directly to Davis and asked if it would not be better for him to speak the name of the one from whom he had received the contents of the document found upon him, adding: 'It is not too late yet.' And then, in his last extremity, Davis turned upon him and said:

"'If I had a thousand lives I would lose them all here before I would betray my friends or the confidence of my informer.'

"He then requested me to thank Gen. Dodge for his efforts to save him, but to repeat that he could not accept the terms. Turning to the chaplain, he gave him a few keepsakes to send to his mother. He then said to the provost marshal: 'I am ready,' ascended the scaffold and stepped upon the trap.

"Thus passed away one of the sublimest and noblest characters known in history, and in future ages his act will be pointed to as worthy of emulation."

The bust in the Parthenon by the sculptor, George Julian Zolnay, is a heroic figure, and one of the most admired works of art in the building. Mr. Zolnay has given the work a nobleness, a firmness that, while it appeals to the masses on account of its strength, also has a softness that impresses every visitor. It is one of Mr. Zolnay's best productions.

A number of leading confederates are now raising a fund to erect a monument over the spot where he was executed. A large amount has already been contributed for the purpose.

CHRISTENING THE QUEEN.

Considerable Perplexity Over Choice of a Name.

One of the longest of the many jubilee articles is that by Emily Crawford. Following is her account of the queen's christening, which was "a source of endless friction:"

It was decided to have it in the great drawing-room at Kensington palace. Emperor Alexander I., the prince regent, the dowager duchess of Coburg, and the queen of Wurtemburg (princess royal of England) had expressed readiness before the birth to be sponsors, and the duke of York, Princesses Augusta and Mary to be proxies. The names should have been, in the natural course, Alexandrina Charlotte Georgiana Augusta Victoria, the sovereigns' names leading off, and that of the highest sovereign prevailing for everyday use and in the signature; but the regent protested that he, in England, was above no matter whom. He was sorely jealous of the brilliant part Alexander played in Europe in 1814 and 1815. It was feared he might not come to the christening, or, if he did, that he would behave badly. Of course, the gold font was fetched from the tower, and velvet coverings from the Chapel royal. The archbishop of Canterbury, assisted by the bishop of London, was to officiate, and the proxies were to be the guests of the duke and duchess of Kent at dinner. The ceremony was to come off on the day the infant was a month old. When the date came around, all was ready for so important an occasion; but uncertainty had not been cleared away about the regent's intentions. He arrived when the preliminaries were ready to begin. Anger was in his eye as he entered the drawing-room. The archbishop feared to set him going. When the naming passage of the ritual had to be got through, he blandly asked: "By what name does it please your royal highness to have this child called?" No answer was given. The primate had been told by the prince that he liked good historical English names, that every one could understand. What better name, he thought, than Queen Elizabeth's. He mildly suggested "Elizabeth." "On no account," said the prince regent. "Charlotte, after your royal mother and the child's royal aunt?" "Certainly not." The duchess of Kent relieved her feelings by a flood of tears. Princess Mary kissed her, and the baby cried. This spurred the mild archbishop. "What name is it your royal highness' pleasure to command?" "What's her mother's name?" "Victoria," answered the duke of Kent; but his intervention was met by an irate look from the regent. The duke of York, seeing that the christening must be hastened forward if it was to be got through at all, took it on himself to say: "Alexandrina Victoria." And so the queen missed being known in history as Georgiana.—Contemporary.

END OF TEXAS CATTLE BOOM.

Survivor of a Once Great Race Recalling the Past.

Once there was in Texas a race of cattle barons who were the kings of the state. I met one of them the other day, a relic of the glory of the past. He is seedy now, and broken down, but he was glad to talk of the times when he was great. "Yes," said he, "we ran the state while we were at it. When we wanted "free grass' we went to Austin and got it. The legislature did not dare give us anything else. The watercourses were ours, and the cowboys were our feudal serfs. We called the farmer who wanted the range opened up a 'nester,' and proceeded to drive him out. If we could not induce him to go peaceably. Why, we had a basequet, 500 of us, at Dallas once, which cost $5,000; but what did we care? We had the steers on all the ranges, and they were worth $22 a head, and were going higher.

"One night there was a feast of the cattlemen, and they made many foolish speeches. There was present a governor who had said that the state did not want any more immigration. A young newspaper man was there, too, and they made much fun of him because his paper had been finding fault with the arrogance of the cattlemen. At last he arose and read us a lesson. It was a severe one, and it hurt. He told us that we might laugh then, but the day of reckoning was at hand, and the man with a hoe would do us up. 'You may kill him,' he said, 'but if you do, tomorrow there will be two men with hoes looking over the barbed-wire fence. Kill them, and there will be four men with hoes there. Kill them, and eight will appear. It is not in the nature of things for the land that will raise 20 bushels of wheat to be given up to the pasture of a five-dollar cow. Mark what I say. In 20 years the man with a hoe will have you on the run.'

"He was right. It was the end of the cattle industry's boom, and since then we have been trying to do business on a business basis. The man with a hoe cut the fences and is the power in this state to-day." Such was the story told me by the Texan, and it is a true representation of the affairs of the great commonwealth of the southwest.—N. Y. Post.

Where Women May Marry Often.

Among the lofty mountain peaks in northern Thibet may be found a people, both hardy and brave, whose laws are among the most peculiar in the world. This region is one of the few in which polyandry is a custom. The young man who aspires to the hand of a young lady must arrange with her parents as to the amount of money he can turn over to them in case he is accepted as the girl's husband. If he happens to be very wealthy he may make her his exclusive property. If not other young men may make offers, and the girl may become the wife of quite a number of husbands. Marriage in this part of the world is entirely a matter of money. The custom is not established by law and is believed to have arisen at a time when the men were much more numerous than the women. —Chicago Chronicle.

A DRAW GAME.

How Two Scotchmen Saved Their Reputations at Golf.

They were two local golf players, both Scotchmen, and they went out to the links to play a match in the dark. Each Johnnie had cut a hole in his pocket, and had a ball all ready to drop down in the leg of his trousers just in front of the other ball. Off they drove, and on they walked, and presently one says to the other:

"I say, Jock, my man, I'm thinking yo're o'erwalking your ba'."

"Na, na," says the second, "mine was a fine, clean drive, but whaur's yours?"

"Eh, noo, mine was an awful chure."

So they went another 50 yards. Then the first says:

"Jock, mon, I'll tak' my davy we're past yours the noo."

"Then whaur's your ain?"

"Eh, mine was an awful chure."

Another 50 yards brought them to the putting green.

"Eh, Jock, I'm no seeing your ba' on the green."

"Maybe yon'd best nee if it's in the hole."

"My certes, why there it is! And, eh, but it's curious; but there's mine in the hole beside it. Mon, it's awful curious."

"Het's halved, then."

"Het's halved—one each—good play."

They teed up for the next hole solemnly. Then they stood looking at each other a moment before they drove off.

"Say, Jock, my mon, d'ye think it's any use to gang on playing like this?"

"I'm thinking it would just be a halved match."

"Het's my ain way then, tho'cht, Jock."

"A weel, we noo ca' it a halved match and gang hame."

"I'm thinkin' 'twould save a world of bother."

"I'm of the same opeenoon myself."—N. Y. Sun.

An Ammunition Expert.

Ammunition making is a great art and there are few men in the world who are skilled in it. The superintendent of the ammunition department of the Winchester Repeating Arms Co., New Haven, Ct., is acknowledged to be the leading authority on ammunition making in the world. His great skill and constant care has placed Winchester ammunition ahead of all other makes. For uniformity, reliability and strong shooting qualities, it is unequalled. The great demand for Winchester ammunition makes it easy to buy even in the most out of the way parts of the world. WASHING A FINE ART.

Washing pretty summer gowns and belongings is a fine art, very easy to learn. A bright day, plenty of water and a little pure soap are the necessary aids in the work. To do it, fill a tub two-thirds full of warm water, dissolve a cake of Ivory soap (which will not fade the most delicate colors), add it to the water, wash the garments carefully through it; rinse first in clear water, then in bluewater; wring, dip in thin starch; hang on the line in the shade. When dry sprinkle and iron on the wrong side. Gowns thus laundered will look fresh for the entire summer.

A gentleman who has a telephone in his house has in his employ a faithful but stupid German girl, who one day responded to the ringing of the telephone bell:

"Who is there?" came over the wire.

"It is I," replied Katrina.

"And who is I?"

"Why, I am I."

"But who is I?" came over the wire.

"I am me, my own self," retorted Katrina. "How should I be anyone but me?"

"But who are you?"

"I am my own self."

"What is your name?"

"Katrina Rupper."

"Well, who is Katrina Rupper?"

"She is me, I, my own self."

And when Katrina heard laughter at the other end of the line she said, indignantly:

"I will not stay here to be made a shoke of," and she walked away from the telephone, grumbling: "How could I be anyone but me? I let 'em know how to make a shoke of me!"—Youth's Companion.

WISE WOMEN.

Those Who Heed the First Symptoms of Nervous Derangement.

Special from Mrs. Pinkham.

A dull, aching pain at the lower [illegible] of the back and a sensation of [illegible]rills of heat, or chills running [illegible]cket the spine, are symptoms of [illegible] womb derangement.

If these symptoms are not accompanied by leucorrhœa, they are precursors of that weakness. It is worse than folly to neglect these symptoms. Any woman of common sense will take steps to cure herself.

She will realize that her generative system is in need of help, and that a good restorative medicine is a positive necessity. It must be a medicine with specific virtues. As a friend, a woman friend, let me advise the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If your case has progressed so that a troublesome discharge is already established, do not delay, take the Vegetable Compound at once, so as to tone up your whole nervous system; you can get it at any reliable drug store. You ought also to use a local application, or else the corrosive discharge will set up an inflammation and hardening of the parts. Mrs. Pinkham's Sanative Wash is put up in packets at 25 cents each. To relieve this painful condition this Sanative Wash is worth its weight in gold.

MRS. GEORGE H. SHEPARD, Watervliet, N. Y., says: "I am glad to state that I am cured from the worst form of female weakness. I was troubled very much with leucorrhœa, bearing-down pains and backache. Before using Mrs. Pinkham's Remedies it seemed that I had no strength at all. I was in pain all over. I began to feel better after taking the first dose of Vegetable Compound. I have used five bottles, and I feel like a new woman. I know if other suffering women would only try it, it would help them."

WALTON, KY., July 30, 1897.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

Except in response to the cry of distress—a thing which should always be done—it is seldom that the voice of a "hobo" should be heeded; yet occasionally some of them give expression to a thought (inadvertently) that is worthy of attention. As such a thing was done in your last issue, it would be a pleasure, with your permission, to answer. The protest to which "Hobo" refers, which I signed and assisted in publishing, a thing of which I am proud, was, as the Democrats of the Sixth Congressional District will remember, as can be proven by copies in existence (one of which is enclosed), a plea for the purity of the ballot, an assertion that the democracy of this district was not a commodity, and an opinion that bribery was a thing which should be CONDEMNED.

The ground which warranted the utterance was in proof, and on it I refused to vote for the regular Democratic nominee for Congress, and, God helping me, I never will vote for a man who gives or takes a bribe, if I know it. It would appear that an answer has already been made to the latter part of "Hobo's" effusion, but, perhaps, it is as well to give it some emphasis. I will, therefore, say that, while I am a Democrat and have made my position well known to the Democracy of Boone county. I have ever regarded the word Democracy as synonimous with all that is pure and true and good in a government founded upon the intelligence and virtue of its people. I have no apology, whatever, to offer to the people for the efforts I have heretofore made in defense of a pure ballot and to punish bribery and corruption of the voters of the county in selecting public servants.

So far as my candidacy for Representative is concerned, my position has been clearly defined and declared.

Respectfully, J. E. BOTTS.

A PROTEST BY LIFE-LONG DEMOCRATS.

State of Kentucky, Boone county:

On the 29th day of October, 1894 personally appeared before me a Notary Public in and for the county and State above named, William Wolfe, who being duly sworn according to law, declares that he is a citizen of, and votes in Boone County, that on the 17th day of October, 1894, he attended a mass meeting called to meet in the town of Burlington, Ky., for the purpose of selecting delegates to attend the Democratic Convention of the Sixth Congressional District of Kentucky, in the town of Walton, on the 18th day of October, 1894, to select a candidate for Congress for said District.

Affiant states that he in company with many others went to said mass meeting for the purpose of selecting delegates opposed to the nomination of A. S. Berry as the Democratic candidate to represent said district, and while co-operating with said persons who were then known to be opposed to said Berry, and while it was well known that this affiant was against the said Berry, he says that J. M. Lassing—one of the followers of said Berry and a well known citizen of said county—approached this affiant and then and there offered and agreed to pay him (affiant) the sum of ten dollars to vote for and with the supporters of the said A. S. Berry in selecting said delegates thereby offering and agreeing to buy the vote of this affiant for him, the said Berry, for the sum of ten dollars, when the said John M. Lassing well knew at the time of offering the said bribe to this affiant that he was opposed to the said Berry and was then engaged in working and co-operating with others to encompass his defeat.

W. WOLFE.

Subscribed and sworn to before me by William Wolfe this 20th day of October, 1894. SAM HIND, JR.

Notary Public Boone County.

TO THE PEOPLE OF BOONE COUNTY:

The above is a sample of the methods by which Col. Berry secured the votes of Boone County in the Sixth District Democratic Congressional Convention.

It is notoriously true that the votes of other counties (some of them not for the first time) were secured for him in similar ways.

We as Democrats and citizens of Boone County protest against the dishonor which has thus been put upon us against our will, and ask all voters of the Sixth Congressional District—especially those of Boone County—who love our county and its Democratic institutions; who love the freedom and purity of the ballot, and who recognize the fact that therein lies our only hope of safety and prosperity, to assist us in wiping this stain from the fair name of Boone and saying in emphatic terms to such men as Col. Berry that the Democracy of Boone County and the Sixth Congressional District is not a commodity, and that honor is still a virtue which we cherish, by repudiating Col. Berry at the polls in November.

FOR ALL WOMEN

Nine-tenths of all the pain and sickness from which women suffer is caused by weakness or derangement in the organs of menstruation. Nearly always when a woman is not well these organs are affected. But when they are strong and healthy a woman is very seldom sick.

McELREE'S Wine of Cardui

Is nature's provision for the regulation of the menstrual function. It cures all "female troubles." It is equally effective for the girl in her teens, the young wife with domestic and maternal cares, and the woman approaching the period known as the "Change of Life." They all need it. They are all benefitted by it.

For advice in cases requiring special directions, address, giving symptoms, the "Ladies' Advisory Department," The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

THOS. J. COOPER, Topeka, Miss., says: "My sister suffered from very irregular and painful menstruation and doctors could not relieve her. Wine of Cardui entirely cured her and also helped my mother through the Change of Life."

Up to the present writing the following have united with the church: B. P. Rice and wife, by letter; Mrs. F. P. Bruce and Edith Craven, by profession.

Mr. John S. Mason, of Hathaway, comes to the front with an ante bellum pocket knife. It has four blades, well preserved, and was purchased by Mr. Mason of Colbert Johnson, in 1854, at Hamilton, and has carried it ever since except during the war. He is the pioneer threshing machine, having begun running a machine in 1854, and is at it yet.

H. W. Harrison, dentist, of Rising Sun, Ind., will be in Burlington on the first and third Monday in each month, to do work for those who wish anything in his line. He will be here two days each visit. He is a son of the late R. F. Harrison, of Carrollton, and a graduate of the Pennsylvania College of Dentistry at Philadephia. He is highly recommended in his profession.

Our friend, Mr. Edward Gaines of the Ashby fork neighborhood, made us a pleasant call Monday. He is one of the old time croquet players of his section, and, as yet, the generations that have come on the stage since he commenced playing, has failed to develop his superior. When he goes to Petersburg a sure winner is the fellow who secures him for a partner.

To all whom it may concern—I have just bought a new Altman & Taylor horse power outfit for threshing wheat and hulling and cleaning clover, with all the late improvements. I will thresh wheat and rye at 5 cents per bushel, and hull and clean clover seed for $1 per bushel or one-fourth of the seed. I furnish the team of mules, myself and two hands. My principal haud is John Bradford (or better known as hickory Bradford, of Waterloo notoriety). JOHN S. MASON.

The refreshment privileges, &c., for the next fair at Florence, were rented last Saturday as follows: Refreshment stand No. 1, to Elchholz Bros., of Covington, $178; No. 2, to Carpenter & Castleman, of Florence, $190; one small stand to H. C. Chambers and wife, $32; one small stand to Ira Adams, $20; baggage room to Albert Souther, $44 50; melion privilege to J. O. Griffith, $8; barber shop, $4; feed store, $15. John Leathers was given the position of Chief of Police. He is to have nine assistants. The First Regimental band will furnish the music.

IN MEMORIAM.

Mrs. Mary C. Haas, daughter of Rev. Alford Chambers, was born August, 16, 1841. She was christened in childhood and was a member of the Methodist church from childhood until death. She was married to Mr. Scott in 1858. By this union God blessed the home with four children. After Mr. Scott's death sister Mary Scott lived a widow for a numer of years. In 1892 she was married to Mr. Haas, of Ohio, where she moved and lived until her last illness. She died at her daughter's, Mrs. Belle Weigler, in Cleveland, Ohio. She spent most of her life in Boone county, Kentucky, was a member of the Methodist church at Petersburg, Kentucky, until she and her family moved to Ohio. She was a woman of fine sense, sterling qualities, a loving mother and had many friends. She was conscious up to the very last moments. Having her children gathered around, her she prayed for them and exhorted them all to live a religious life. She leaves two sons and two daughters by her last husband, Mr. Haas, to mourn her loss. Her remains were shipped to Boone county, Kentucky, to her brother's Mr. Chambers, where the funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Bro. Harris, pastor of the Petersburg M. E. Church. Mrs. Viola Grant and daughter, Miss Grace, and Mr. Walton and son, sang several very sweet songs at the funeral. After the services at the house, she was laid away in the old family burying ground to await the resurrection morn,

So spirit, go and take thy flight
Leave this dull mortal here,
And soar to worids of bliss and light
And dwell eternal there.

The Sunday School Convention was held at the Bullittsburg church, last Thursday. The attendance was large, and every arrangement for the comfort of those who came from other neighborhoods had been made by the good people of that locality.

The convention was organized by electing D. E. Castleman chairman, and R. W. Adams, secretary, after which the programme arranged for the occasion was taken up and followed closely, and in nearly every instance the person to whom an assignment had been made responded promptly with an interesting paper or a talk.

Just before the adjournment at noon Prof. Rucker, of Georgetown, was invited to make a talk upon any subject of his own choosing. The Professor ascended the rostrum, and discussed in a very interesting manner the relation of the Church to the State, and the relation of the State to the Church.

At the conclusion of Professor Rucker's remarks the convention adjourned that the very abundant and elegant dinner prepared and spread for the occasion might be discussed. Everybody was invited to partake of the dinner and the demands of the inner man were most amply supplied, the long table being loaded with everything the experience of a host of good cooks could suggest.

It was about two o'clock when the convention reassembled and the exercises were resumed, and several interesting talks and discussions were had during the afternoon.

The singing was one of the features of the convention, and received most favorable comments by all. The convention was a success in every particular, and the members of the Bullittsburg church vied with eachother in making the day a most pleasant one for all who were present.

RICHWOOD, KY., August 2d, 1897.

Mr. Watts and others—In calling on me to represent the county of Boone. I haven't words to express my gratitude, and there is no duty I would shrink from to advance the interest of my State and county. Soon after the death of my lamented friend Dr. Grubbs, I was solicited by my neighbors and many friends to become a candidate. I said "no, there are other good men, I do not seek it, or desire it." I was asked if I would serve if I was the choice of the voters of Boone Co. I said I was a Democrat.

The condition of Kentucky is in a bad financial condition. The many voters of Boone would like to know the cause of the indebtedness. In the first place building a branch penitentiary. We could have added to the penitentiary at Frankfort, having all the convicts under one set of officers and saved expense.

Another great expense was adopting the new constitution, costing the State near a million of dollars.

The people of Ky., have to have a craze on some subject. Now it is free turnpikes. My advice is to go slow. Be sure you are right. We will have to use strict economy and curtail the expense of the State. Cut down the salaries, cut the per capita, of the different institutions.

I am for any good man who will stand on that platform.

Thanking you for the honor, I decline to accept your call. With the highest regard. REUBEN CONNER.

Something Different.

The average trip to the sea shore or northern resort is much like all other summer trips in many particulars, but a trip to the South in the heated season in search of a cool place is something different altogether. Different in its lack of hot noon-days (they don't have sun-strokes in the South). Different in that it is comparatively inexpensive. Different in the absence of perspiring crowds of humanity every where about one. Different in altitude—you can go up thousands instead of hundreds of feet above sea-level and get the bracing air which brings you home again invigorated.

$8.00 is the round-trip rate for a delightful trip to that famous Southern mountain resort—Asheville, the center of what is known as "The Land of the Sky." This via the Queen & Crescent Route, and the Southern R'y from Cincinnati, Saturday, August 7th. Tickets at this rate are good ten days to return. Sixteen hours ride through the Blue Grass, across High Bridge, down the Emory and through the mountains of East Tennessee to the French Broad river and for some 40 miles along that beautiful mountain stream. The Asheville altitude is 2,500 feet, with protecting peaks double that height, giving that peculiar beauty and dryness for which it is noted throughout the world. Sunshine for 300 days a year; perfect hotel service; the most elaborate private residence and domain in America, at Biltmore; scenery unsurpassed on a scale of actual grandeur. Write to us for books describing Asheville, will send them free.

Brooklyn estimates from a new directory that its population is 1,350,000. It is the largest city that has ever given up its identity.

Out of the enormous number of women in Constantinople—the population is nearly a million—not more than 5,000 can read or write.

The city of Cambridge, Mass., with a population of 85,000, has had no saloons since 1886, the people voting no license for 11 consecutive years.

The demand for American electrical machinery is rapidly increasing in Europe. We seem to have an established lead in electrical appliances as well as in making bicycles.

A clergyman says that "to possess $100,000,000 may be legal, but it is wicked." Well, there's some satisfaction under that indictment in the reflection that wickedness is so far removed from us.

This question as to what becomes of all the pins that are made is more or less absurd. Many a young man who has tried to put his arm around a summer girl's waist can tell what becomes of some of them.

A well-known physician says excessive tea drinking shatters the nervous system, weakens the brain, injures the appetite, disturbs the digestive organs and causes cold feet, but the people will go right on drinking tea.

Japan has an income tax. If a taxpayer protests that he is rated too high by the officials he is thrust into a dark room and told to "think it over carefully." Sometimes a man stays there 24 hours, buried in darkness and thought, and finally he is apt to agree with the officials that he is richer than he had at first supposed.

The new gold discoveries in the north may not add to the gayety of nations, but it makes trouble for the philologists. The difficulty is to know how to spell the name of the region which has suddenly become famous. There appears to be no rule governing the matter, and therefore it is a go-as-you-please. Klondike, Clondike, Klondyke and Clondyke are the principal variations. As the simplest way is always the best, Klondike seems most likely to find favor.

There are no remaining public lands in any of the states of New England, in New York, Pennsylvania, New York, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Tennessee, Kentucky or Texas. There are 25,000,000 acres of public land in Ohio, 37,000,000 in Florida, 32,000,000 in Alabama, 28,000,000 in Louisiana, 36,000,000 in Michigan and 34,000,000 in Wisconsin. The other public lands are in the western states and in the territories.

A writer in answer to the question, "Where is the hottest place on earth?" names "the lower valley of the Ganges, where the daily summer temperature is from 105 to 110 degrees. During the monsoon the Enphrates country registers from 115 to 120 degrees. The sandy wastes of Arizona frequently send the thermometer to 110 and 115 degrees, but Massowah and the Red sea country lead all. In the sun the thermometer reaches 170 degrees, and in the shade 130 to 145 degrees, and life in the open air is sacrificed."

Twenty-five years ago scientists predicted that abundant coal fields would be found on both sides of the British channel, and the predictions have been fulfilled. Besides the great Kentish fields discovered several years ago and yielding bountifully ever since immense tracts of coal have been recently found between Calais and Cape Grisnez. The French discoveries were the result of those in England, geologists being sure that the same belt of coal extended under the water from one country to the other. This last discovery is of the greatest importance to industrial France.

Australians are figuring up their losses as the result of the severe drouth of the past summer. It is found that sheep and cattle have died by thousands and tens of thousands, and every colony is poorer by hundreds of thousands of pounds. It would seem as if Australia had had its full share of ill luck. For three years past things have gone awry because of unprecedentedly unfavorable weather. The full amount of the losses will probably never be known, and the reputation of the colonies has suffered more than all. Better fortune should be in store for one kin of the antipodes.

LABOR LEADERS

Call on Gov. Atkinson and Interview Him as to Their Rights to Speak and Hold Meetings in West Virginia.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., July 29.—President Ratchford, of the United Mine Workers; President Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor, and Grand Master Sovereign, of the Knights of Labor, arrived here Wednesday evening and immediately called upon Gov. Atkinson to get an expression from him as to their rights to speak and hold meetings in West Virginia, and especially to complain of injunction issued by Judge Mason prohibiting the organizers to appear or hold meetings on the grounds of any coal company without permission or upon any road leading to the company's property.

Gov. Atkinson pointed out to his visitors that three branches of state government, the executive, the legislative and the judicial, are entirely separate and distinct one from the other; that he had jurisdiction only in the executive branch, and that the matter of issuing the injunction is purely a matter for the courts or the judicial branch. The governor had not seen an official copy of the injunction but if what he got from the newspapers in regard to it, was correct, he believed that the injunction was too sweeping in its provisions. However he would withhold his opinion upon it till he saw an official copy. He asked his visitors to call again Thursday when he would give them his final answer as to what he would or could do toward giving the relief asked for. Messrs Gompers, Ratchford and Sovereign said Wednesday night that they would go ahead at once to organize the state, no matter what may be the governor's answer, or the issue in the courts. They would proceed with their speeches till they were arrested and then fight it out in the courts. Each will return to his headquarters Thursday, and begin the work of the labor demonstration in the several states August 5.

PALMYRA ISLAND.

Its Seizure by the British Government is Considered Significant.

NEW YORK, July 29.—A special to the Herald from Washington says: Official information of the action of the British government in taking possession of the island of Palmyra, in the Pacific ocean, has been received at the state department. The information was embodied in a dispatch which reached the department Tuesday, from San Francisco, it having been wired from that point by the dispatch agent of the department stationed there, who had received it from Minister Sewall, at Honolulu. Evidently Mr. Sewall regarded the matter as of great importance, for it is understood it was the only subject received by wire from the steamer which arrived at San Francisco the latter part of last week. The message received from Minister Sewall merely contained the bare fact of the seizure of the island.

The action of Great Britain in taking possession of the island at this time, following, as it does, the submission of an annexation treaty to the senate by the president, is considered very significant by the authorities here. Whether it is intended to complicate matters so as to stave off annexation or whether Great Britain purposes establishing a naval station upon the island in question her action is regarded as of the highest importance and future developments will be awaited with keen interest by officials here.

Refused to Send Troops.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., July 29. — Gov. Tanner late Wednesday night received a telegram from the sheriff of Roanoke, a town near Bloomington, saying 1,000 miners are advancing on the town from other points and asking for state troops. The governor telegraphed that as no overt acts had been committed the circumstances did not warrant sending any troops and none would be sent, and for the sheriff to telegraph him Thursday morning the condition of affairs.

Champion Female Rider.

TOLEDO, July 29.—Lizzie Olaw and Tillie Anderson, each of whom claims to be the champion female rider of the world, met at the Casino 14-lap track Wednesday night, for a purse of $500 and a side bet of $700 and the title of champion. The race will consist of an hour's racing for three nights, two out of three heats to win. The racers covered 23 miles and 11 laps in the hour Wednesday evening, finishing together. This breaks all in and out door records for women riders in competition.

The Guidesuppe Murder Case.

NEW YORK, July 29.—Judge Newberger, in the court of general sessions, has overruled the demurrer in the case of Mrs. Nack and Martin Thorn, accused of the murder of William Guidensuppe. The demurrer alleged that if murder was committed it was in Queens county, and out of the jurisdiction of the courts of this city. The case, therefore, will be tried in New York county.

McKinley and Party on the Way.

ALBANY, N. Y., July 29.—President McKinley and party passed through this city Wednesday night at 10:15 p. m. en route for Lake Champlain. The original plan to stop two hours at Albany was abandoned, and the engine of the Delaware & Hudson exchanged for the West Shore, a mile below the depot. The special train of three cars then proceded north without delay.

The Women Take a Hand.

FAIRMONT, W. Va., July 29.—Polish women armed with stones and sticks kept several men from going to work at Monagah Wednesday. Others have been warned not to enter. Col. J. A. Fleckinger said Wednesday if the men at his mines were not at work by Friday new men would be brought in.

Secretary Gage Calls on Cleveland.

BUZZARD'S BAY, Mass., July 29.—Secretary of the Treasury Gage, Wednesday afternoon, called on ex-President Grover Cleveland at Gray Gables, coming over from Marion on E. C. Benedict's yatch Oneida.

GOLD CRAZE

Taking Away Many Employes in the Navy Department.

The Discount of, Seven and a Half per Cent. Allowed by Beer Stamps Delivered On or Before July 24th to Be Collected From the Brewers.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—The navy department has felt the evil effects of the gold craze. The firm of Moran Bros., located in Seattle, is building the torpedo boat Rowan and had made good progress until the Alaskan exodus set in. Now they have informed the navy department that so many of their workmen have dropped their work to go to Alaska that they are obliged to appeal to the navy department for an extension of time in which to complete the boat.

The land office is receiving many applications for copies of the public land laws by persons who profess their intention of going to Alaska. The office has been obliged to notify the applicants that the land laws have not yet been extended to Alaska, though the mineral laws apply.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—Commissioner Forman Thursday issued the following circular letter to collectors of internal revenue:

"You are hereby instructed to collect from all brewers in your district the discount of seven and a half per cent., which was allowed on beer stamps delivered by you on or before the 24th inst., without regard to the date of the order for stamps.

"In case of neglect or refusal of brewers to pay the same after demand, you will report them for assessment on your July list. You are informed, and will so advise all brewers in your district, that stamps purchased and delivered before the 24th inst, and upon which the discount of seven and a half per cent. has been allowed may be used for their full face value."

The secretary of war has appointed the special board provided for in the anndry civil appropriation bill to make a survey and examination (including estimates of cost) of deep waterways between the great lakes and the Atlantic seaboard. The personnel of the board is as follows: Maj. Charles W. Raymond, corps of engineers; Alfred Noble, of Chicago, and George Y. Wisner, of Detroit.

The commissioner of internal revenue has amended the regulations concerning the bottling of distilled spirits in bond so as to require the data prescribed by law to appear on bottle strip stamps, to be printed or engraved thereon before they leave the internal revenue office. Hitherto this data has been permitted to be written on the stamp by the distiller.

A statement prepared at the treasury department shows that the recent civil service order of the president increases the exemptions from the civil service competitive examination from 63 to 219 in the internal revenue service, and in the customs department 348 positions are added to the exempt class and 150 places hitherto outside the rules have been brought within them. All of the exempt places, however, are subject to a rigid, non-competitive examination conducted by the civil service commission.

BIG BATTLE

Near Canudos, in which Three Thousand Soldiers Were Killed.

NEW YORK, July 30.—A dispatch to the Herald from Rio Janeiro, Brazil, says that authentic information has reached that city to the effect that more than three thousand soldiers have been killed in a big battle near the site of Canudos.

The fanatics, numbering more than 10,000 men, all well armed, attacked the government troops. Whole brigades of the soldiers were swept down and destroyed, trampled under foot as the victorious fanatics, with wild, horse shouts of triumph passed over them.

The full extent of the loss of life can not be told. There is no reason to doubt, however, that the loss in killed on both sides is more than 3,000.

For miles the ground around Canudos is strewn with the dead and dying, the government troops being compelled to leave their dead on the field and flee to save themselves from complete destruction from the avalanche of fanatics.

Must Pay Duty on Goods.

VICTORIA, B. C., July 30.—There is a crowd of indignant gold seekers in town. Two hundred of them came from Seattle with their outfits to take the steamer Islander for Dyea. Arriving here they found that not a pound of goods would be allowed to enter the Klondyke district without paying the regular Canadian duty. Some of them decided upon payment of the duty here, but others are going with the expectation of evading the customs officers. This is hardly possible and the customs officers are going up on the Islander, accompanied by a force of constables, who will assist the mounted police now there to enforce the law.

Famous Race Horse Dead.

LEXINGTON, Ky., July 30.—Domino, the famous race horse, died at the farm of James it. Keene at 3 o'clock Thursday morning of meningitis. He was taken ill yesterday and six veterinaries could not save him. Domino was foaled in 1891, and won about $100,000 in stakes and purses.

A Husband's Revenge.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., July 30.—Near Clarendon Thursday Houston Wilson, colored, on returning home found John Galvin with his wife. Houston fired a load of buckshot into his wife's side, inflicting fatal wounds, and then shot Galvin, killing him instantly. Houston was arrested.

Russian Minister to Siam.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 30.—The announcement is made that M. Korowski, consul general of Russia at New York, has been designated for the new post of envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to Siam.

THE LAW

Will Be Invoked to Disperse the Marching Miners—Sheriff Lowry, of Pittsburgh, Issues a Proclamation to That Effect.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 31.—Legal proceedings are to be taken against the marching coal miners, unless they disband and go to their homes. This was decided on Friday afternoon and Sheriff Harvey A. Lowry will be expected to see to it that the assemblages are disbanded. While the marches on the mines of the New York & Cleveland Gas Coal Co. have not been as effective as the miners' officials could wish it, it is evident that the marches are making an impression on the employes of the company. Friday there was posted in the vicinity of the Turtle Creek, Sandy Creek and Plum Creek mines a proclamation issued by the sheriff, commanding that all persons shall refrain from assembling or congregating on the public highways or thoroughfares of Allegheny county, or interfering with the peace. All are commanded to retire to their respective homes or place of residence, or be dealt with according to law.

President Patrick Dolan was asked what he thought of the proclamation. He said he did not care how many proclamations were issued, so long as the peace was kept, which, he said, it was intended to do. He expressed himself as having no fear.

A meeting was held Friday morning, which was addressed by District President Patrick Dolan. He went over about the same ground as was covered in his speech Thursday night, and added that all labor organizations in the country, with the exception of the Brotherhood of Locomotive engineers, was with the miners in their strike. He made an attack on this order, saying that owing to the inroads of electric railways and other means of rapid transit the wages of the engineers would drop sooner or later, and then they would be asking assistance from other organizations.

In other portions of the district the strike matters are quiet. The strikers are all awaiting with an anxious interest the result at the Dearmitt mines. The owners of the Castle Shannon mine have decided to close their plant until the present differences in the coal trade are adjusted.

At midnight it looks as though the sheriff's proclamation would be the biggest factor in bringing about trouble in the vicinity of the Derrmitt mines. Friday night a meeting of strikers was held at Oak Hill and it was decided to pay no attention to the sheriff's proclamation, as it was considered to be an outrage.

At the meeting, it is reported that President Dolan, M. P. Carrick and other leaders told the men that the mandate of the sheriff was unjust and could not be enforced. The result of the meeting was that three meetings were arranged for, one at midnight, one at 2 a. m. and another at 4 a. m., and the men marched through the Turtle creek region in three divisions to reach their meeting places. The different times were chosen for the meetings as the best time to catch the working miners when changing shifts. Excitement is running high, and it was thought if the night passed without a conflict between strikers and militia, it would be considered almost a miracle.

Two Troopers Drowned.

Several persons are also reported to have been drowned in Bohemia.

BIG MINERS MEETING

The Strikers at Camp Determination Make a Midnight March

To Sandy Creek—President Patrick Dolan, Their Leader, Arrested at the Instance of Thos. P. Dearmitt—The Incident Causes an Ugly Feeling.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Aug. 2.—All roads led to Turtle Creek Sunday. Marching miners from all over the district were converging toward Camp Determination, and if all those reported as being on the march reach the scene before morning there will be at least 6,000 diggers present at the big meeting which is scheduled for 11 o'clock at McCrea's schoolhouse. The miners expect 8,000 to be present.

The burough of Turtle Creek experienced the liveliest day in its history with its large transient population of miners and curious visitors, but the day passed without trouble of any kind. Burgess Teats, of the borough, visited the miners' camp Sunday and stated he had no reason to order the crowd to disband, and as long as peace prevails he will not disturb them.

There was a complete shift in the make-up of the campers Sunday. The men from the Wheeling division of the B. & O., who have been on guard ever since the big movement against the Dearmitt men was inaugurated, left during Sunday night for their homes at Finleyville.

At 1:15 Monday morning the strikers at Camp Determination were aroused and 500 men ordered to march to Sandy Creek and 500 to Plum Creek. The marchers began with President Patrick Dolan heading the force, going to Sandy Creek. After proceeding a short distance, Dolan was served with a writ charging him with riot and unlawful assembly at the instance of Thomas P. Dearmitt. For a time great excitement prevailed among the marchers, but Dolan quieted them by saying that he would be all right and soon join them. He was then taken back to the justices' offices and the marchers proceeded. Secretary Warner, Organizer Cameron Miller and other leaders are included in the writ.

A citizen of Turtle Creek stands ready to furnish bail for Dolan and it is presumed he will be released.

The incident has caused a very ugly feeling among the strikers, and if the other leaders included in the order of arrest should be stopped in their work decided, vigorous action will likely be taken at the big meeting Monday morning.

The First Act of Violence.

WHEELING, W. Va., Aug. 2.—The first act of violence since the mining strike was inaugurated, was committed at three o'clock Saturday morning when a small bridge on the Wheeling & Lake Erie road between the mining settlements of Dillonvale and Long Run was fired. Employes of the company saw the blaze and extinguished it, but not until the structure had been half destroyed. The road was blocked Saturday morning, but will be opened by Saturday evening.

The Portuguese losses were two killed and ten wounded. The natives lost 300.

CANAJOHARIE, N. On this account it is thought there will be a large attendance at the national hay convention, to be held in Pittsburgh on the 10th, 11th and 12th of this month.

CONCLUDED.

The True Uniformity Conference Finishes Its Work—Agreement Thoroughly Discussed and Adopted Section by Section.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 29.—The "true uniformity" conference of coal operators of the Pittsburgh district concluded its work Wednesday at 9:15 o'clock, after a two days' session of close and persistent work. The 21 sections of the uniformity agreement were thoroughly discussed and adopted section by section. The best of feeling prevailed throughout the meetings, the only exception being the bolting of Col. Rend at Tuesday's session. Just previous to adjournment, however, Judge Owens announced that Col. Rend had authorized him to state that any agreement the conference adopted would receive his hearty cooperation and he would sign it if 95.50 or even 90 per cent of the operators were sincere in their sanction of it. The conference appointed a committee of five, W. P. Dearmitt, J. R. Zerbe, J. S. Moyitier, J. G. Dysart and N. F. Sanford, with Gen. John Little to secure the signature of the operators to the agreement. This committee will begin its work Thursday. It will be aided by the Ohio board of arbitration. When the requisite number of signatures have been secured, another meeting will be held to ratify the agreement.

Speeches were made by Dearmit, Dempster, Little, Zerbe and others, all expressing satisfaction over the result of the meeting and predicting the success of the plan.

The agreement, as adopted, provides for cash payment of wages, 2,000 pounds to the ton, check weighmen on the tipples, miners to be credited with the full quantity of coal contained in the mine car, abolition of company stores, semi-monthly pay days, uniform price for pick mining in the thin and thick vein districts and screens not exceeding 1¼ inches. It also provides that in case of a violation of the provisions and terms of the agreement a penalty of ten cents per ton on the total output of coal mined by the violator will be charged, which penalty is to be paid to a commission subject to the right of further arbitration or appeal. Said penalty, when collected, is to be distributed among the signers of the agreement pro rata, in proportion to the total amount of tonnage or output made by them during the year.

The commission is to be chosen annually and shall be known by the name of the Uniformity commission. It shall be composed of nine members, the thick and thin vein operators having proper representation. The members shall be sworn to faithfully and impartially perform the duties of their office and will be authorized and empowered to enforce the judgments and awards.

It shall also be empowered to subpoena witnessnes with the same force and effect as a board of arbitrators duly appointed under the act of assembly of the state of Pennsylvania relating to compulsory arbitration.

The agreement shall not become effective unless it has been signed by 95 per cent of the operators on or before January 1, 1898.

After 90 per cent have signed the agreement if any 15 operators shall be of the opinion that enough have signed to render it effective a meeting shall be called in Pittsburgh to declare it in force.

The operators, with a few exceptions, want it distinctly understood that the passage of an agreement whereby all operators are to adopt a similar system, and are to pay the same relative price for mining, has nothing to do with the great strike. They wish the miners to disabuse their minds of any such theories.

The operators have also shut out the miners' leaders from taking any part in the conferences that may take place through questions arising between the operators and miners by inserting a clause in the agreement stating the commission shall be composed of workmen employed by the subscribers. Heretofore the miners' officials have represented the miners, but now the miners are to grapple with the questions in dispute alone.

It was decided that present contracts could not be made the basis for arbitration.

NEW REPUBLIC.

Treaty Signed by Five Central American States or Republics.

The Union is Named the Republic of Central America—The Countries Forming It Are Guatemala, Costa Rica, Honduras, Nicaragua and Salvador.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—A report has been received from Wm. Meyers Little, consul at Tegucigalpa, Honduras, enclosing a copy of the treaty that has been signed by the representatives of five Central American states or the republics of Guatemala, Costa Rica, Nicaragua, Honduras and Salvador. It goes into effect September 15. The union is named the Republic of Central America, and the countries forming it will now take the names of states. Last year, when the republics of Honduras, Nicaragua and Salvador formed themselves into the "Greater Republic" of Central America, provision was made for the admission of Guatemala and Costa Rica, which has now been accomplished. The treaty is similar to that made last year, except that its provisions are extended and considerable legislation is enacted in it for the government of the new republic. The republic has the power to nominate diplomatic and consular officers and to receive foreign envoys and to give exequatur to foreign consuls to issue passports to ministers and envoys of foreign nations and to withdraw exequatur of consuls. The confederation is called the "Republic of Central America."

The government of the new republic is vested in a chief of states, who is elected from each of the states in their alphabetical order and shall hold office for one year. A council, composed of two representatives from each state with the chief of states, shall constitute the government. Alliances of defense and provisional for all the states are provided, and the expense of government and of war are to be assessed by council.

EXCITING RACE.

Dr. McLean Drops Dead After His Horse, in the Hardest Kind of a Drive Wins the Purse.

CINCINNATI, July 30.—After watching his gallant filly, Taluca, win the Ohio stakes in the hardest kind of a drive, Dr. E. F. McLean, one of the best known horsemen on the American turf, was attacked with heart disease and died a short time afterward at the Oakley race track Thursday afternoon. Dr. McLean was sitting alone in the timer's stand when he dropped over gasping for breath. Medical aid was summoned, but despite the efforts of several physicians, the turfman died just as the bugle sounded calling the horses to the post for the last race.

Mr. McLean's death was undoubtedly caused by the exciting finish in the stake race and the sensational incidents which followed. After Taluca crossed the wire winner by a nose and the jockeys were dismounting, John Huffman, the St. Louis horseman took advantage of the selling clause in the conditions of the race and began to bid up Taluca, McLean's horse. Tom Blackburn, McLean's trainer stood by and protected his filly, and after being bid up to $3,000, she was bought in by Blackburn at that figure. Blackburn at once put in a claim for Remember Me, Huffman's horse, which finished second to Taluca, and after paying $300, the amounts he was entered for, both animals were led to the McLean stable. All during the run up Dr. McLean sat silently watching the transaction. After it was over McLean's friends first noticed that he was ill, and only a short time afterwards he received the fatal attack. Mr. McLean's death caused the last race to be declared off.

For fifteen years or more Mr. McLean has raced horses and the public always had the greatest of confidence in his stable. Mr. McLean was 55 years of age and leaves a wife and family.

GOV. ATKINSON

Of the Opinion That the Injunction is Too Far Reaching in Its Effect.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., July 30.—Messrs. Gompers, Ratchford and Sovereign, the committee who came here Wednesday to confer with Gov. Atkinson, left early Thursday morning. Gompers went to Washington, D. C., Ratchford to Columbus, O., and Sovereign to Ft. Wayne, Ind. The governor told them that as soon as he received an official copy of the injunction issued by Judge Mason and examined it he would send his reply by mail to each member of the committee. The governor has telegraphed for a copy of the injunction, and he expects to receive it by Friday.

Gov. Atkinson had a long conversation Thursday by telephone with ex-Gov. Fleming relative to the injuction. Gov. Fleming said that it had been prepared with great care and was in accordance with all decisions of the courts upon the subject.

ALASKA.

The Weather Bureau Gives Interesting Information in Regard to the Climate of That Country.

WASHINGTON, July 31.—Under the direction of Secretary of Agriculture Wilson, Chief Moore, of the weather bureau, has made public a statement in regard to the climate of Alaska.

In this statement Mr. Moore says:

The climates of the coast and the interior of Alaska are unlike in many respects and the differences are intensified in this as perhaps in few other countries by exceptional physical conditions. The fringe of islands that separates the main land from the Pacific ocean from Dixon sound northward and also a strip of the main land for possibly twenty miles back from the sea, following the sweep of the coast as it curves to the northwestward to the western extremity of Alaska form a distinct climatic division which may be termed temperate Alaska. The temperature rarely falls to zero; winter does not set in until December 1 and by the last of May the snow has disappeared except on the mountains.

The mean winter temperature of Sitka is 32.5 but little less than that of Washington, D. C.

The rainfall of temperate Alaska is notorious the world over, not only as regards the quantity that falls, but also as to the manner of its falling, viz: In long and incessant rains and drizzles. Cloud and fog naturally abound, there being on an average but 66 clear days in a year.

North of the Aleutian islands the coast climate becomes more rigorous in winter, but in summer the difference is much less marked.

The climate of the interior, including in that designation practically all of the country except a narrow fringe of coastal margin, and the territory before referred to as temperate Alaska, is one of extreme rigor in winter, with a brief but relatively hot summer, especially when the sky is free from cloud. In the Klondyke region in midwinter the sun rises from 9:30 to 10 a. m., and sets from 2 to 3 p. m., the total length of daylight being about four hours. Remembering that the sun rises but a few degrees above the horizon, and that it is wholly obscured on a great many days, the character of the winter months may easily be imagined.

We are indebted to the United States coast and geodetic survey for a series of six months' observations on the Yukon, not far from the site of the present gold discoveries. The observations were made with standard instruments and are wholly reliable. The mean temperatures of the months of October, 1889, to April, 1890, both inclusive, are as follows:

October, 33 degrees; November, 8 degrees; December 11 degrees below zero; January, 17 below zero; February, 15 below zero; March, 6 above zero; April, 20 above zero.

The daily mean temperature fell and remained below the freezing point (32 degrees) from November 4, 1889, to April 21, 1890, thus giving 168 days as the length of the closed season of 1889-'90, assuming that outdoor operations are controlled by temperature only.

The lowest temperatures registered during the winter were: Thirty-two degrees below zero in November, 47 below in December, 58 in January, 55 below in February, 45 below in March and 26 below in April.

The greatest continuous cold occurred in February, 1890, when the daily mean for five consecutive days was 47 degrees below zero.

Greater cold than that here noted has been experienced in the United States for a very short time, but never has it continued so very cold for so long a time. In the interior of Alaska the winter sets in as early as September, when snow storms may be expected in the mountains and passes. Headway during one of these storms is impossible and the traveler who is overtaken by one of them is indeed fortunate if he escapes with his life. Snow storms of great severity may occur in any month from September to May, inclusive.

The changes of temperature from winter to summer are rapid owing to the great increase in the length of the day. In May the sun rises at about 3 a. m. and sets about 9 p. m. In June, it rises about 1:30 in the morning and sets at about 10:30 p. m., giving about 20 hours of daylight and diffuse twilight the remainder of the time.

The mean summer temperature in the interior doubtless ranges between 60 and 70 degrees, according to elevation, being highest in the middle and lower Yukon valleys.

ANNEXATION

Is Now Regarded Universally by the People of Hawaii as Certain.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 31.—Ellis Mills, the retiring consul general at Honolulu, arrived from the islands on the steamer Alameda. Mr. Mills was succeeded by Wm. Haywood, and with his wife he is now on his way back to his home in Virginia. Speaking of political affairs in the islands Mr. Mills said:

"Annexation is now regarded universally by the people of Hawaii as a certainty. The enthusiasm over the annexation movement is more intense now if such a thing be possible than it has ever been before, almost everybody has an abiding faith in the happy result that they all wish for and anticipate. It is confidently expected that the whole matter will be settled when congress meets this fall."

GEN. DUFFIELD

Believes a Railroad From Taku Inlet to Klondyke Would Pay.

Rich Finds of Gold May Be Made on the American Side of the Line—Dr. Sanarelli Claims to Have Discovered the Germs of Yellow Fever.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—Nothing can be done more than already has been done toward making the boundary line between Alaska and the British possessions along the one hundred and forty-first meridian until the senate passes upon the boundary treaty now before it. There is, however, no doubt of the location of the line along this meridian and most people in the locality know where it is. The demarcation work was superintended by Gen. Duffield, superintendent of the coast and geodetic survey on behalf of the United States. Gen. Duffield has spent considerable time in Alaska. He expresses the opinion that a railroad can easily be constructed from Taku inlet to the Klondyke gold fields, and believes that the enterprise will be worth undertaking, because of the richness of the mines.

"The gold," said Gen. Duffield in discussing the question, "has been ground out of the quartz by the pressure of the glaciers, which lie and move along the courses of the streams, exerting a tremendous pressure. This force is present to a more appreciable extent in Alaska than elsewhere, and I believe that as a consequence more placer gold will be found in that region than in any other part of the world."

Gen. Duffield thinks the gold hunters on the American side of the line have made the mistake of prospecting the large streams instead of the small ones.

"When gold is precipitated," he said, "it sinks. It does not float far down the stream. It is, therefore, to be looked for along the small creeks and about the headwaters of the larger tributaries of the Yukon. There is," he added, "no reason why as rich finds may not be made on the American side of the line as in the Klondyke district.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—Surgeon General Wyman, of the marine hospital service, has had translated the account written by Dr. Sanarelli, of Montevideo, of his discovery of what he claims to be the yellow fever germ, and which he calls the icteroid bacillus. He says the bacillus was discovered in the second case examined. The doctor dwells upon the difficulty of making sure of results because of the numerous microbes found in yellow fever patients. The particular germ which he holds to be responsible for yellow fever, Dr. Sanarelli says, is found in the blood or tissues and not in the gastro-intestinal cavity. He notes the fact, however, that in yellow fever as in typhoid, that the digestive tract is the seat of abundant baccilli coli, but he does not associate these with real yellow fever microbe. He concludes therefore that the virus of yellow fever does not reside in the intestinal tube, and that its toxin, instead of being absorbed by the intestinal walls, is elaborated in the interior of the organs and in the blood.

SUGAR PLANTERS

To Advance the Wages of All Field Labor 10 1-2 per Cent.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 2.—Mr. Leon Godchau, the owner of seven plantations in Louisiana and the largest producer in the United States has telegraphed to the manager of his several places to advance the wages of all field labor 10½ per cent., the advance to commence August 1, in consequence, he says, of the passage of the Dingley tariff bill.

In sugar circles the decision is general that this advance will be conceded by all the planters to labor employed in sugar culture or manufacture. The skilled labor employed in the sugar houses or refineries are paid according to the price the sugar commands and will get an increase in wages of from 20 to 30 per cent. as compared with last year.

Destructive Floods in Austria.

VIENNA, Aug. 2.—There is no abatement of the floods in Western and Upper Austria. The Danube continues to rise and the danger is very great. At Linz, 100 miles west of Vienna, and at Mauthausen, enormous damage has been done to property. A heavy stone bridge at Linz has been partly demolished. A cloudburst is reported from Budweis, Bohemia, on the Moldau, and there has been extensive flooding in the outskirts of Ischl, a fashionable watering place on the Traun. The visit of the Emperor Francis Joseph to Baden and the proposed journey of King Alexander, of Servia, from Belgrade to Vienna have been stopped by the floods.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., Aug. 2.—A destructive hailstorm passed near here. The storm started three miles west of Dell Rapids, and went in a southwesterly direction, destroying absolutely everything in its path around Garretson. One branch of the storm passed over Shermantown and Luverne, Minn. Here it went in two paths, one north and the other south, across Rock and Nobles counties. The path of this branch of the storm was ten miles wide. It is estimated that fully 1,000,000 acres of crops were destroyed.

THE NEW TARIFF LAW.

Opinions of the Press on the Measure.

The work of the extra session, by the definite and explicit avowal of the leader of the majority, is an absolute failure.—N. Y. Times.

The one achievement of the republican party, restored completely to power, is the enactment of the most monstrous robber tariff ever placed upon the statute books.—Chicago Chronicle.

It is a little difficult to decide whether the reports of the difficulty of the senators in devising an anti-trust amendment to the tariff bill are to be taken as more amusing than exasperating.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

If the new tariff measure shall force prices to anything like the McKinley figure, the outlook for republican success at the next congressional elections will not be reassuring.—Philadelphia Ledger (Ind. Rep.)

Now let everybody get rich by paying taxes and then bless the tariff. Don't stop to think a minute about the necessity of having money with which to pay the taxes, that is a minor consideration. It is far more important that the trusts should have the privilege of collecting subsidies than that the money question be settled.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The bill which has just been passed is not one of which the republican party can be proud. The senate purge schedule has a bad smell. The sugar schedule in the house bill has met with much more approval from the press and the people than the senate's schedule. There are other matters in the senate bill that have an ugly look.—N. Y. Journal.

The proponents of the bill boldly announced that it was a protective tariff. That was candor. They have told the people of the country protection was necessary to American industry in order that capital might pay American wages to labor. They have arranged a tariff which will give trusts enormous profits out of the pockets of the people, and have provided no means whereby the people working for the trusts can get wages raised except by strikes.—Chicago Journal.

There is something partaking of the ludicrous in the condition to which the advocates of a high tariff have been brought at Washington. In point of fact, however, the result is more mortifying than comical to those engaged in it. It exposes their hypocrisy in a manner that may well rower them with confusion. They professed to be concerned chiefly for providing revenue for the government, but their real concern was to provide protection for favored individuals.—Boston Herald.

The passage of such a tariff bill at this time is a violation of faith on the part of the republican party. The St. Louis platform declared that the party, while in favor of protection, was not pledged to any particular schedules. This was interpreted to mean that the party was not pledged to restore the rates of the McKinley tariff, for no one dreamed at that time that the McKinley rates might be exceeded. McKinley was elected and the republican party placed in power last fall on the currency issue, and that alone. The moderate protectionists and the tariff reformers who aided the McKinley men in the republican party last fall, and who made the success of that party possible, have a right to feel aggrieved over the first legislative sentiment of the McKinley administration.—Chicago Record (Ind.).

It is the very worst tariff bill ever written. It takes more from the people in proportion to what it gives the treasury than any other tariff bill ever framed. It gives more to the trusts and monopolies than any other, and gives it with less extension than was ever before known. There has been no pretense in its passage of answering the cry of "infant industries." There has not even been the plea of revenue necessary, for the most strenuous advocates of the bill have admitted that for at least a year to come it cannot produce an adequate revenue, while its effects after that must depend upon trade conditions not now to be foreseen. It is a tariff of the trusts, by the trusts and for the trusts. But the country will rejoice that at last it is made law—that at last the disturbance its pending created in business and industry is at an end.—N. Y. World.

The measure is not the moderate and reasonable revenue-producing legislation which the tariff leaders in the senate declared was essential to a permanent tariff when he introduced the bill. In its protective features it is undoubtedly the most extreme measure ever attempted in this country. While it furnishes no reasonable assurance of surpassing the present tariff in the raising of revenue, it is bound to increase the cost of living and decrease the purchasing power of wages. Rather than responding to the popular demand for the curbing of trusts, the bill grants monopolies still greater power and encourages the formation of new combinations. The purely revenue features recommended by the finance committee have been dropped out or defeated by the powerful liquor interests and a tax on stock and bond dealings substituted. This is a confession that the measure is so radically protective that it is necessary to seek new subjects of taxation. — Detroit Free Press.

An Outrageous Bill.

The republican papers from one end of the country to the other have all begun with one accord to apologize for the tariff bill even before it is passed. It is a question whether it will raise the necessary revenue to meet the expenses of the government. If it does not do so it will certainly be a failure, and if it does so it will be a worse bill than if it did not. A bill made up for the protection of trusts and combines is bad enough, but after putting in all those objectionable features then to add to it features which will tax the necessities of life for the purpose of running the government makes the bill still worse, so that it will be a failure if it does not produce enough revenue, and if it does produce enough revenue it will be at the expense of the class of people who are the least able to stand it.—Illinois State Register.

——Hanna is redeeming his pledges. The tariff bill as it left the senate was certainly satisfactory to nearly every trust and monopoly in the country. The plutocrats who contributed to the success of the republican party are being well taken care of now.—Tammany Times.

——We call the attention of Mr. McKinley to the fact that the miners are striking because they hope to compel their employers to pay them living wages. That is all they ask. Mr. McKinley might at least make a maxim on the situation.—Atlanta Constitution.

Switzerland has not only the cheapest postal rates, but also the largest number of post offices pro rata of population. France has one post office for every 4,782 inhabitants; Great Britain, for every 1,913; Germany, for every 1,376; the United States, for every 887, and Switzerland for every 845 inhabitants. It will be seen that the United States, in spite of their immense territorial extension, keep the second place among all the nations.

John Adams passed away from senile debility and was buried at Quincy, Mass.

THE HIGHEST TARIFF.

The New Tariff Is Worse Than the McKinley Tax.

The new tariff law registers the high-water mark in tariff legislation. The protection afforded by it is greater in important instances than that of the McKinley law itself, which was condemned by the voters of this country as an odious measure. It is not improbable that the Dingley bill, if it may be so called after its thorough revision, will go down in history as worse than the McKinley law. There can be no justification at this day for the excessively high rates of duty which it imposes. It is a continuation of war taxes in time of peace for the benefit, not of the government, but of private individuals. The duties in many cases being so high as to be prohibitive, there will be no imports from which the government can derive revenue, but the taxes in such cases will go to private individuals in the form of higher prices for products and greater profits.

The moderate protectionists of this country cannot approve such a tariff. It cannot be justified by reason and business sense. The Dingley tariff, like the McKinley tariff of 1890, is based on the Morrill tariff of the early '60s, confessedly a war measure, hastily drawn and not intended to serve as the permanent model for a system of taxation. The duties under the Morrill tariff were made high in part as a compensation for the internal revenue taxes then imposed. But when the internal revenue taxes were removed the rate of duty on imports was left unchanged, so that in reality the protection afforded by these duties was greater than in war times. This condition of things was so obviously unjustifiable that for a decade or so after the close of the war little attempt was made to justify it. A reduction of duties was promised, not at the demand of the free traders alone, but to satisfy protectionists as well. Efforts to reduce duties were to a slight degree successful. Then came McKinley, who put in force the war rates again. His act was called an act to reduce the revenue, and in order to accomplish this object rates were made so high as to prove practically prohibitive in many cases. The avowed object of the Dingley bill is to increase the revenue and to encourage industry in the United States. But the high protective duties are so nearly prohibitive of revenue to the government that it was found necessary to resort to non-protective duties and to internal taxes in order to raise sufficient revenue.

The duty on hides furnishes one illustration of the way the Dingley bill is likely to "encourage industry in the United States." For many years there has been no duty on hides. There has been growing up in this country a considerable export business in leather. The duty on hides will tend to prohibit the leather merchant of this country from going into the foreign market with his goods. The duty in question was placed in the bill at the demand of representatives of a very few cattle-growing states, the electoral votes of which were for the most part cast for Bryan. Hides imported come mostly from South American countries, with which hitherto it has been the policy to encourage trade, but which will be offended and repulsed by the duty on hides.—Chicago Record (Ind.).

PROSPERITY OF THE TRUSTS.

The Only Beneficiaries of Republican Legislation.

The McKinleyism of 1897, that outdoes almost two to one the McKinleyism of 1890, is fraught with prosperity. The evidence is complete and convincing. It has brought that prosperity to the sugar trust. The opening price of shares yesterday morning was 143. Nearly every other standard except the sugar post was deserted that brokers might operate in the trust so highly favored by congress by the McKinleyism that is to bring prosperity to the country and has brought it to the sugar trust.

McKinleyism has done much for the trusts, all of them are in high feather, they are the particular objects of regard of the government as administered by the republican party, but above and beyond them all is the sugar trust, now appropriately passed into the clutch of the Standard Oil trust, the all-devouring devil-fish of this country, whose chief proprietor throws a penny for a sop at a college and rises in public places to thank the Lord that he is not like other men, a publican and a sinner.

The republican party is the party now, as always, of great moral ideas. It makes broad its phylacteries and takes uncommonly good care of all those industrial interests that pay big money into a campaign fund, cry patriotically, down with democracy! because democracy is opposed to favoritism to a class at the expense of the whole republic, and unctuously pockets the profits which a republican congress freely placed at their disposal. — Chicago Chronicle.

——President McKinley, in his "currency message," discriminates sadly between assemblages of business men. While he refers approvingly and with some emphasis to the convention of bankers, brokers and stock gamblers at Indianapolis, and declares it expressed the sentiment of the country, he notably refrains from mentioning the Trans-Mississippi convention which met at Salt Lake City, presided over so ably and satisfactorily by William Jennings Bryan, and which almost unanimously declared in favor of the free coinage of silver and gold at the ratio of sixteen to one. Is the eyesight of McKinley affected with the same disease as that of Cleveland—which prevented him from seeing across the Mississippi river?—Illinois State Register.

——No doubt a majority of the tariff tinkerers would have been perfectly willing to make a fair division of the plunder if the sugar trust had been less rapacious. But that insatiate octopus wanted the whole thing, and all other claims had "to give way.—Kansas City Star.

BIMETALLISM.

The President's Message Merely Shuffling.

The expected has happened. The message is goosey and in plain shape. President McKinley has completely surrendered to metallism. His currency message to congress was not the manly, outspoken, shuffling affair that the country looked for. It is a straight-out declaration for the maintenance of the present gold standard, without any of the backing, filling palaver about international agreement or the coinage of the home product.

The president's frankness in not refreshing as it is startling. Heretofore he has obscured his intention and wish with regard to currency reform in a haze of ambiguity and pretense. To the weak-kidneyed bimetallist his talk and promises meant bimetallism and to the bigoted monometallist they meant monometallism.

The only importance attached to his currency message is contained in its political effect. The document merely commits the president's party to open and avowed hostility to an independent American monetary system and promises the full strength of the organization to the support of a financial policy through which old world creditor nations have grown rich at the expense of new countries with new civilizations and new requirements. The message merely asks for executive authority for the appointment of a commission "whose duty it shall be to make recommendations of whatever changes in our present banking and currency laws may be found necessary and expedient, and to report their conclusions on or before the first day of November next, in order that the same may be transmitted by me to congress for its consideration at its first regular session."

The president also tactitly indorses the action taken by the national monetary conference held at Indianapolis last January, and attempts to advise in advance the commissioners he will appoint that they should declare allegiance to the doctrine enunciated by the Indianapolis conference. He thus discounts the work of the proposed commission by prescribing conditions and restrictions.

But the details of the message are of secondary importance only. The chief point of interest is the president's desertion of bimetallism. This makes the issue between democracy and republicanism clear cut. It leaves the democratic organization the party of bimetallism and the republican organization the party of gold monometallism. There can no longer be any shuffling and evasion in the republican party. Republicans who are bimetallists must now come to the democratic party. There is no longer the least glimmer of hope for them or the triumph of their cause outside of the democratic party. The democracy can accept the issue with renewed hope and courage. Republican defeat, if not complete annihilation, and democratic victory are now assured in 1900.—St. Louis Republic.

THE WORST YET.

The Dingley Bill is Bad in Principle and Detail.

It is not a "free trader" but an old-time republican protectionist who characterizes the senate tariff bill as "the most outrageous one ever given to the people of this country." Senator Teller, who voted for the bill because he believed in giving to the republican party the full responsibility which should accompany power, says this. He declares that "it is a contempt upon the principle of protection," a measure of "designed exclusively for the benefit of corporations, with little regard for revenue and none for the people."

The list of 130 articles enumerated by Senator Vest on which the duty has been increased in order to strengthen the monopoly that controls them bears out this statement. Well might Senator White exclaim as the measure passed: "I hope that the trusts in the United States will now give the chairman of the republican national committee a receipt in full!"

The bill is bad in principle and bad in detail. It puts the highest duties on the commonest necessaries of the people and essentials of manufacturing. It will not meet the deficiency in the revenue, which was the only excuse for legislation at this time. If the McKinley bill was a blunder and the Wilson-Gorman bill a betrayal, the senate bill is a crime.—N. Y. World.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

——The nation is now in a position to begin another agitation for a revision of the tariff system.—Chicago Record (Ind.).

——Hurrah for high tariff and prosperity! Trust stocks have advanced in value $200,030,000 since the Dingley rates were agreed upon. The barons knew their business when they backed Hanna and McKinley.—St. Louis Republic.

——Everybody seems to have got "protection" in some form, save the farmer. The farmer has been left out in the cold long enough in all countries, but in this country he is not so exhausted by rents that he will not in time shake off his burdens and take care of himself.—Boston Globe.

——Republican clap-trap politicians talk about the new tariff protecting the farmers. This is cheap talk in view of the fact that the farmers have grain and other farm products to sell. They do not want protection; they want unrestricted markets and trade with the whole world.—Dayton (O.) Times.

——It is the want of confidence chiefly that has maintained the business paralysis during the last six months, and the lack of faith was imputed to the delay in inaugurating a high protective policy. That policy has now been made the law of the nation. It is not only protective far in excess of anything ever claimed by protectionists in the infancy of our industries, but it exceeds in many respects the highest protective policy of the past ever inaugurated in time of peace.—Philadelphia Times.

Mrs. Mary Giddens, one of the oldest ladies in Bedford, was bitten on her left hand by a cat one day last week, and the wound caused her considerable pain and uneasiness for several days. She was playing with the cat, which she was often in the habit of doing, when the little animal sprang at her viciously and in fighting it off she was bitten and scratched on the hand. The cat soon showed signs of hydrophobia and was immediately killed. Mrs. Giddens, accompanied by Rev. G. W. Crutchfield, came to Milton Thursday night to try the famous mad-stone belonging to Mr. J. BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXII. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 11, 1897. NO. 42.

THE Boltocrats are going to put fifty speakers on the stump in this State during September.

THE candidates for the Legislature have but a few days in which to prepare to land the nomination.

CRAPS is the favorite game in Williamstown, even boys in knee breeches indulge in it, say the Courier.

WHO owns Klondyke, is a question to be settled. England seems to have prior claims on the new El Dorado.

IF the tariff does not increase the price of commodities, as some contend, how can it provide better wages for producing labor?

THE Capital continues its attack on the Deboe-Hunter-Todd division of the Republican party. If Forrester is not muzzled he will bite himself.

THEY are having a rattling race for the Democratic Senatorial nomination in the Grant-Pendleton-Bracken district. Each county has an outfit of candidates.

IF GOV. Bradley doss not throw of the belt his pardon machine will run out of a grist. At the rate it has been operated in the past it will soon depopulate the penitentiaries of Kentucky.

DR. DAUGHERTY, who misrepresented Grant county in the last legislature, is reaping his reward now in the shape of postoffice appointments. He is getting about everyone he asks for.

THE August number of The Boone County Banner contains a splendid engraving of our townsman, D. E. Castleman, and its proximity to the picture of a very handsome young lady, gives it an especially pleasing appearance.

JOHN SECREST who has been a leading stockdealer in Grant county for many years, is missing, and it is supposed that he has gone to Klondyke to dig gold with which to pay the $8,000 he owes the farmers of Grant county, and forgot to pay them before leaving.

Neither sugar nor coal is higher on account of the tariff.—Louisville Commercial.

May be not, but the rise in the price of each was suspiciously close to the date of the Dingley tariff bill, and it will be difficult to convince the people that it had nothing to do with the rise.

FROM the resolutions adopted by the Republican convention in this county on the 2d inst., it is evident that the boys in the trenches lost their bearing while they were resolving. In the first resolution President McKinley's administration and the platform adopted by the St. Louis convention were given a hearty endorsement, while the third resolution reads thus: "Resolved, That we are opposed to Civil Service in all departments."

President McKinley's record proves him to be as great a Civil Service crank as was President Cleveland, consequently the first and third resolutions adopted by the Boone county Republicans fail to chord, and it is not for a Democrat to say which one expresses their earnest convictions. The Louisville Commercial, which claims to be a dyed-in-the-wool Republican, says:

"No convention which denounces the civil service system is a true Republican convention. The Republican platform of 1896 says 'The civil service law was placed on the statute books by the Republican party, which has always sustained it, and we renew our repeated declaration that it shall be thoroughly and honestly enforced and extended wherever practicable.' Criticism of the partisan and unfair way in which President Cleveland extended the civil service law is not denunciation of the law and system. The civil service law is one of the wisest results of Republican legislation, and President McKinley was one of its most efficient advocates."

It is a clear case of a bad law rising up to rebuke those who are responsible for its existence, and a President who is sincere in his efforts to enforce it, is bound to incur the displeasure of the outs, who are past enumerating.

Messrs. H. Polly and Z. T. Baker and others, of Big Bone, and E. E. Fry and G. W. Roberts and others, of Verona:

Gentleman:—Having recently asked the Democratic voters of Boone county for an office, and they said by their votes that they preferred another, I had some hesitancy in asking again and have taken time to consider before responding to your call to become a candidate to represent the people of the banner county of the State in the next General Assembly. But having been solicited by a number of prominent Democrats in other parts of the county, and after giving the matter due consideration, recognizing the great responsibility I would assume if nominated and elected, I accept your call and announce myself a candidate to represent the people of Boone county in the next House of Representatives.

Thanking you most heartily for your confidence and esteem as a citizens and a Democrat, kindly manifested by selecting me from among the many able and more experienced Democrats in statecraft to a position of honor and trust that the proud and ambitious always desire, and it nominated and elected it will be my highest ambition to uphold the honor and integrity of the county and maintain the high character of the many representatives who have preceded me.

I deem it unnecesary to say anything in regard to my democracy, as my endorsement of the Chicago platform is well known, and as to the financial question, that is a national question, and on that the legislature will not be called to act upon unless in the election of a U. S. Senator and then as now I am for the money of the constitution, gold and silver.

The financial condition of the State needs attention, and to improve it without increasing the tax on an already overtaxed people, it ought to be dealt with in a business like manner, reduce all appropriations to the lowest limit possible without causing loss or distress to our public institutions, reduce expenses of every kind, and dispense with all offices and officers not profitable or necessary to the best interests of the people and State, and reduce all salaries in accordance with the times and financial condition of the State, and indulge in no luxuries at the expense of the taxpayers.

I am opposed to mob law in any and every form, but a speedy trial and certain punishment for all offenses will be the most effectual remedy for that.

Free turnpikes—that is a question that needs to be will considered. They are expensive to the taxpayers and all individuals and corporations who have invested money in building turnpikes havedone so in accordance with law, and they have vested rights in them that they should not be arbitrarily deprived of.

There are other minor questions that may come up that I will omit in order to be brief.

The pressure of business will prevent me in the short time allowed to make a canvass of calling on each voter, so in conclusion I would advise every eligible voter to attend the precinct meetings on the 28th and take part by voting for the man of his choice, and if I shall be the choice of the majority of the Democratic voters of Boone county, I shall endeavor to discharge the duties of the position faithfully and honestly, with integrity withholding my action at all times subject to the advice and instructions of my constituency. Thanking you again for your generous call, I remain

Yours Respectfully,
J. W. KENNEDY.

In some of the great department stores of Paris there is in operation for the convenience of customers a moving staircase in the shape of an endless leather belt transferring them from one story to another. It is called a transporting carpet. Endless belts of canvas have been used for some time for conveying packages from one part of a store to another.

About $70,000 a year have been saved by the state of Virginia through a reform in regulating criminal expenses. ne change which results in a large saving is that which provides that convicts sentenced to the penitentiary shall be sent for by the authorities of that institution, rather than escorted to it by sheriffs or police in the various counties and cities.

There is only one naval power of the first rank—Great Britain. The French navy is barely half as strong, and France must consequently be classified as a sea power of the second rank. As none of the other naval powers is equal to France, they are placed in the third class, which includes Russia, the United States, the Japanese, the Italian and the German fleets.

The breeding of eels is a mystery. Nobody ever saw any of their eggs. The ancients used to have a notion that eels were developed from horsehairs. Another theory was that they were the progeny of a kind of beetle. It is now known that they must spawn in the ocean. Eels put into land-locked ponds do not breed; they must go to the sea in order to propagate their species.

India has 2,035 towns with an aggregate population of 27,251,176, about one-tenth of the total population. Of these towns 28 have over 100,000 inhabitants, 48 more over 50,000, and 556 more over 10,000. The largest are Bombay, 821,764; Calcutta, 771,144; Madras, 452,518; Hyderabad, 415,039; Lucknow, 273,028; Benares, 219,467; Delhi, 192,579; Mandalay, 188,815; Cawnpore, 188,712; Bangalore, 180,366; Rangoon, 183,324; Lahore, 176,854; Allahabad, 175,246.

Miss Agnes Weston, known in England as "the mother of British bluejackets," has done more for the uplifting of the English sailor than any other woman. She has established many "rests," and during the 30 years of her labor has done much for the cause of temperance among the tars. Her temperance magazine, Ashore and Afloat, has met with such flattering success that the United States authorities have especially requested her to mail the magazine to American warships.

Brussels is this summer the seat of a series of congresses dealing with questions concerning the laboring classes. They will be held from July to the end of September. The first, held at the beginning of the month, was on "Sunday Rest." It is to be followed by others on "Cheap Dwellings," on the "Accidents of Labor," and on the international protection of workers in mines and factories. The sixth international congress against alcoholism will also meet in Brussels at the end of August.

Miss Lillian Small, of Cape Cod, Mass., has a singular profession. She lives in a small cottage under the shadows of the big Highland light, and there she spends her time looking through the telescope for passing ships and telegraphing the news to Boston. She leads a lonely life, often for days seeing no one but the families of the lighthouse keepers. She has a wheel and a rifle for companions, and is said to find amusement in coasting and in shooting wild duck and such game as the country affords.

Judge Wellhouse is called the apple king of the world. His orchards, in Kansas, consist of 1,030 acres, containing 100,000 apple trees, and are located in the counties of Leavenworth, Miami and Osage. In thirteen years he has picked over 400,000 bushels of apples, and whenever he has a little money to spare he buys a little more land and sets out some more apple trees. Growing apple trees is his passion, just as gambling is the passion of some men and raising fast horses the passion of others.

The uncertain amount of phosphorus contained in American mild steel, ranging from 0.6 to 0.15 per cent., militates seriously against its use by English manufacturers, who would give it a far more cordial reception if the phosphorus could be kept below 8 per cent. Large wire firms who have bought large quanties of American steel have, on account of this irregularity, declined to place further orders, though offered very favorable terms, as while American wire may be well suited for fencing and barbed wire industries, high quality English wire demands a more homogeneous material.

NICOLA TESLA

Announces the Completion of His Latest Discovery—Messages by Means of the Earth's Electrical Currents.

New York, Aug. 5.—The Journal and Advertiser Wednesday says: Nicola Tesla has just announced the completion of his latest discovery—the simultaneous transmission of messages by means of the earth's electrical currents to as many scattered points on the surface of the globe as may be desired. This he regards as by far his greatest achievement. He will follow his usual custom and lay his information before the world of science in his own words and accompanied by his own computations and conclusions. To a few intimates he gave a thrilling demonstration of the operation of his device for arresting and subjecting to control under natural laws the electrical substances in and about the earth. His latest invention, device or discovery is to produce such a disturbance of the electricity of the earth which can be felt and noted simultaneously at all parts of the globe.

Tesla had his rooms in the laboratory on Houston street darkened. From the room adjoining the one in which he and his visitors stood a current was turned on invisibly. A huge black disk hung on a frame about eight feet in diameter, from the center of which protruded a brass electrode seven inches in diameter. As the group gazed at this the department was filled with a cracking sound, which increased till it sounded like the rattle of musketry. Bright flames shot from the electrode, not from pole to pole, as in ordinary demonstrations. Like fiery serpents the wavy coils of flame darted in graceful lines around the disk. The longest sparks were fully eight feet from the point where they burst into dazzling brilliancy to the vanishing point. The electrical sparks were undoubtedly the longest flashes of light ever produced by similar means. It seemed like a terrific lightning display, with the snapping, crackling sound displacing the reverberation of Kaweon's artillery, and all remarked the weird and awing effect of the exhibition.

"What are you doing?" was asked Tesla.

"I am producing," said he, "an electrical disturbance of great magnitude, which is continuing throughout the entire earth. In other words, I am producing a disturbance of the earth's charge of electricity which can be felt to the uttermost parts of the earth."

"And the result will be?"

"Ah," said Tesla, "that is almost incomprehensible. This electrical disturbance by means of certain simple instruments can be felt and appreciated at any point of the globe. In this way messages can be sent the entire earth around and be taken up at any part of the earth without the aid or intervention of wires in any way at all."

Miss Alice Barrett Was a Defaulter.

Boston, Aug. 5.—An examination of Messrs. Codman & Codman's books has been completed and a shortage has been found which convinces the firm that the books had been tampered with by their late bookkeeper, Miss Alice Barrett. It is believed that the shortage will be [illegible]—,500 or $3,000. Miss Barrett is the young woman who was found dead in the office of the firm two weeks ago, having committed suicide by shooting after she had attempted to burn some of the books of her employers.

Upon entering her home she caught her husband in a compromising condition and the shooting followed.

Umpire Hurst Arrested.

Cincinnati, Aug. 5.—In the second inning of the second game between the Pittsburgh and Cincinnati clubs Wednesday, Umpire Hurst gave the Reds the worst of a decision. A patrol wagon was immediately called and Hurst was arrested, charged with assault and battery.

Women Strike.

New York, Aug. 5.—One hundred women employed as warpers in the Rhenania silk mills at College Point, L. Both these requests were refused and the strikers decided to stay out till they win. The management threatens to close the works indefinitely.

THE DUTY

On Flax, Hemp and Jute Lowered by the Present Law.

Three Cuban Refugees at Punta Gorda suspected of Having Yellow Fever—No Official Notice of the Selection of King Leopold as an Arbitrator.

Washington, Aug. 6.—The completed comparison of the tariff bill, prepared by Mr. Charles H. Evans, the tariff expert, was made public Thursday. The following are some of the comparisons in addition to those given last week:

The average ad valorem duty of the flax, hemp and jute schedule is lower in the new law than in the Wilson law. That of the Wilson law was 40.94 per cent. The present law is 45.18 per cent. The average ad valorem of the pulp, paper and book schedule under the present law is 30.30 per cent.; under the Wilson law, 32.18 per cent.

The average ad valorem of the sundry schedule under the Dingley law is 23.35 per cent.; under the Wilson law it was 24.79 per cent. The total value of articles transferred from the free list to the dutiable list is placed at $101,968,941. Only two articles were transferred from the dutiable to the free list. These were cocoanuts in the shell and sheep dips.

United States Consul Henry Robertson, at Hamburg, has urgently requested the state department to warn American shippers of dried beer grains, to refrain from the practice they have adopted of adulterating the grains with ground corn. He says the bright future of the important trade is threatened by this practice and that already the largest German importers are about to cancel heavy orders and protest drafts upon proof of adulteration of the grains.

The surgeon general of the marine hospital service has been informed by wire of the capture Thursday of three Cuban refugees at Punta Gordo, on the coast of Florida, who are suspected of having yellow fever. The capture was the result of the coast inspection service of the state and the national government. The suspects were sent to the quarantine station at Charlotteville harbor for detention.

Washington, Aug. 6.—No official notice has been received here of the reported selection of the king of Belgians as arbitrator of the dispute between Japan and Hawaii, but generally the selection is highly commended. The officials say that King Leopold's reputation for fairness and liberality is so well established that there could be no possible objection to the exercise by him of the powers of arbitration, provided a choice is to be made from among European rulers. It is not believed that our own government will be asked upon to advise as to the selection, and it is highly improbable that it will interfere in the matter so long as the wishes of Hawaii are met.

Washington, Aug. 6.—During the progress of the count and weighing of the silver in the vaults of the treasury Thursday incident to the transfer of the government funds to the new United States treasurer, Thos. Martin, of this city, a colored laboror engaged in handling the bags was arrested upon a charge of abstracting silver from the vaults. A shortage of ten dollars was found last Monday in the weight of one of the bags. Another shortage of $18 was found Thursday and as Martin was suspected a watch was put upon him when he left the vaults during the noon rests. After leaving the vault Martin went into the sub-basement where there is a pile of firewood and hid the 18 silver dollars among the sticks. As soon as he left the cellar the light was turned on and the money discovered.

MILLIONS IN IT.

Papers Being Drawn Up in a Suit Involving Valuable Mining Stock in Gold Mines in Nevada.

New York, Aug. 7.—Ker & Thomas, lawyers here, Friday announced that they had drawn up papers in a suit involving millions of dollars invested in Nevada gold mines. Dennis B. Harris, a promotor, is the plaintiff, and the Gold Creek, Nevada Mining Co., Henry J. Mayham, of Denver, Col., Walter Church, of Boston, and Joseph D. Robertson, of this city, are the defendants.

The plaintiff recites that the Gold Creek (Nev.) Mining Co., of which Mr. Robertson is president, was formed in 1896, with a capital stock of $3,000,000. It purchased the property of the Island Mountain Co. and at once issued $1,000,000 worth of stock for working purposes. Of this amount he says 800,000 shares were sold for $500,000, and most of this money was spent in developing the property.

The company, according to Harris, then organized the Gold Creek, Nevada, Consolidated Lodes Co., with a capital of $10,000,000, and the Gold Creek, Nevada, Town Site Co., with a stock of $2,000,000. Harris claims he is the original promoter of these companies, and it was agreed, he says, that he should have for his trouble 359,375 shares of stock, worth according to his figures, $1,790,875. He asserts that the capitalists interested in the scheme took his advice and labor up to a certain point and then quietly froze him out.

Harris further alleges that a deal is now being negotiated with an English syndicate, represented by J. McCummings, an engineer, of Lower Broadway, for the sale of all the companies for $15,000,000. He also says that the engineer has just returned from an examination of the property, and will recommend to his principals that they buy it.

The Capital of the New Plant Will Be $15,000,000.

San Francisco, Aug. 7.—Articles of incorporation of the Spreckels Sugar Co. have been filed. The capital is $15,000,000. Of this amount the organizers of the company, J. D. Spreckels, A. B. Spreckels, A. F. Morrison, M. H. Weed and W. D. K. Gibson, have each subscribed $1,000. Producing beets and manufacturing sugar therefrom is to be the primary object of the company and incidentally they will engage in agriculture, will build, equip and manage factories and refineries, deal in real estate, construct railways, build ships and do all other things necessary to the successful development of the sugar making business.

RUNAWAYS DEAD.

Their Drowned Corpses Indentified By Their Parents.

Parkersburg, W. Va., Aug. 7.—The disappearance from Sistersville of Henry Varner and Alonzo Delve on May 15 was solved Friday by the identification of two corpses found in the Ohio river a few days after the boys were missed. The identification was made by the fathers of the [illegible] had the bodies exhumed and taken home for burial. The young men left home in a skiff without notifying their friends of their intentions, and it is supposed were run down by a tow boat.

Against the Baseball Club.

Cleveland, O., Aug. 7.—Judge Dissette decided the demurer in the baseball case against the club Friday. This is the first time that a decision of any kind by the common pleas court has been squarely against the club. Judge Dissette holds that if the facts claimed by the plaintiff are true then baseball on a Sunday is a nuisance. The case to stop baseball will now be heard on its merits.

AN EXPLOSION

In a Chicago Elevator in Which Several Lives Were Lost.

Five of the Dead Are Firemen—One Man Was Blown Into the Chicago River—The Elevator Was Burned, Entailing a Loss of About $300,000.

Chicago, Aug. 6.—Five and probably more lives were lost in an explosion which took place Thursday evening during a fire in the Northwestern grain elevator at Rook and West Water street. Four of the dead are firemen—the body of another fireman is thought to be buried in the ruins of the elevator—and one man was blown into the Chicago river. From the force with which the explosion swept the spot on which he was standing it is certain he must have been instantly killed. Either the bursting of a boiler or the explosion of mill dust caused the awful havoc.

The origin of the blaze is believed to have been in the vicinity of the boiler house. Accumulated dust as dry and inflammable as gunpowder, that had been piling up for years, formed a ready means for the fire. It spread with great rapidity and then came a terrific explosion, completing the work of scattering the fire throughout the entire structure.

Just as the firemen were getting into position for advantageous work, and nearly all the members of Engine Company 3 were mounting ladders and bringing leads of hose to play on the interior from the upper windows, there came a roar that could be heard for half a mile, the roof was raised high in the air and the walls came down with a crash.

The force of the explosion was so great that the eastern wall was hurled into the river, the west wall was tumbled down upon the heads of the unfortunate men below, and the roof was torn into mighty fragments and distributed for blocks around. Every window in the vicinity of the elevator was shattered by the concussion, dozens of persons were struck by flying debris, and several small fires resulted from falling timbers that were still in flame. At Jefferson street and Carroll avenue, many blocks distant, great burning masses of wreckage fell upon four wagons loaded with hay and set them in flames.

The elevator was of composite construction, the lower portion being of brick and the upper part of frame covered with corrugated iron. The explosion caused a perfect bombardment of flying bricks and sheets of iron at almost white heat, leaving little of the building save a frame work of wood and iron surrounding a great pile of blazing wreckage.

The explosion stunned for a moment the police and firemen, but they quickly rallied to help those who had been hurt. Dozens of men lay injured in the withering heat, some not seriously harmed and others in the throes of death. It was dangerous work to get them out, but it was gallantly and quickly done and all of the slightly injured were removed. The dead were for the time left where they lay. No man could reach the bodies and live.

The fire was most difficult to control as the elevator was surrounded by a number of small frame buildings which were continually catching fire. The total loss is estimated at $300,000 which is fully covered by insurance.

Late Thursday night the body of Fireman Jacob Strackman was found under the ruins. This makes five deaths as the result of the fire. In all 54 firemen were injured.

A CLEW

To the Terrible Holocaust on Elm Street, Cincinnati, Which is Being Worked Up by the Police.

Cincinnati, Aug. 6.—A startling feature of the holocaust on Elm street Wednesday night in which four persons, one the bridegroom, were suffocated in a fire which broke out during the wedding festivities, develops.

A physician living near the scene of the tragedy called on Coroner Haerr and informed the coroner that a patient of his had said that a woman of questionable character, residing near the place, is open to suspicion of having started the fire. She was put out of Adler's place a few weeks ago and swore revenge.

She was suspected of having set fire to a building a few years ago, and was ordered out of town at the time. She was seen near Adler's Wednesday night, and it would have been easy for her to go through the narrow south side entrance to the place and pour oil on the building. The fact that oil was undoubtedly an element in the causes leading to the fire lends color to the story.

Coroner Haerr reported this to police headquarters, and Detective Bulmer was detailed to investigate the matter and startling developments are expected.

Reward for the Capture of McLaughlin.

Rockville, Ind., Aug. 6.—The county commissioners have authorized and posted a reward of $300 for the arrest of James McLaughlin, who shot William Robinson at Montezuma and fled. In addition, the citizens of Montezuma have added $50, making the total reward $350. James McLaughlin is about five feet five inches, weighs 166 pounds, with dark hair and eyes and smooth face; has one upper gold tooth, crown work. He is a fine-looking man, and his general look and appearance attract attention.

Collector Rucker Goes Into Office.

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 6.—Henry A. Rucker, the new Negro collector of internal revenue, went into office Thursday night with rather unusual ceremonies. When he met with his predecessor to effect the transfer of the office he found a large gathering of deputies, who presented Mr. Trammel with a very handsome silver service. Speeches were made, closing with one by Rucker, whose temperate tone and fair words pleased his hearers. Thursday about ten of the deputy collectors sent in their resignations and went out with their white chie

MINERS' WIVES

Take an Active Part in the Gigantic Strike—They Do Persuasive Work Among the Wives of the Working Diggers.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Aug. 7.—Eugene V. Debs, who addressed the large miners' meeting on the Duquesne wharf Thursday night, left Friday for Turtle Creek, where he speaks Friday evening. Before leaving the city Mr. Debs denounced Judge Jackson, of West Virginia, for issuing an injunction restraining him from interfering in any way with the Monongah Coal and Coke Co. It is most sweeping, and none other can be compared to it. This injunction annihilates the right of peaceable assemblage, and effectually suppresses free speech.

"If it is sustained, it sweeps away all constitutional safeguards and delivers us, bound hand and foot, to corporate capital. I hold the injunction and the judge who issued it in supreme contempt. If I have occasion to raise my voice in behalf of the famishing miners in Jackson's jurisdiction I propose to do so, or at least make the attempt, totally regardless of this infamous injunction. The farce of the proceeding is that the injunction is issued by a judge. It ought to come direct from the coal operators, and at least hypocrisy would not intensify the infamy of the proceeding."

In reference to the charge that the deputies now on guard at Dearmits mine were forcing the miners to work at the point of revolvers, President Dolan stated that the matter had been placed in the hands of their attorney, and it was probable that the miners' officials would go into court and ask for an injunction restraining the deputies. Said he: "They have no right to compel any man to go to work, and we will not stand it. I have in my pocket the names of many of the men who were treated in this manner, but prefer not to give them now for fear the men will suffer."

The coal company discovered a new sort of missionary work among its employes Friday. Wives of many of the campers are in the field now. They have been arriving for several days, until now there are about twenty of them scattered about through the Plum, Sandy and Turtle Creek settlement. The women are from McDonald, Carnegie and Wheeling division regions and do missionary work among the miners' wives. They have access to the workmen's houses, but the men are denied this. Deputies are stationed all along the property line with instructions not to allow a solitary man to pass into the houses. The campers claim that the effect of the female missionary work will be apparent in a day or two.

VALUABLE INVENTION

Lost to the Commercial World by the Death of the Inventor.

New York, Aug. 7.—A special to the World from New Haven, Ct., says: With the recent death at Naugatuck of Herbert E. Fowler, there has been lost the secret of an invention that promised to be of great value to the commercial world. It was a process for making an electrical deposit of copper from a solution upon wood or any other rigid or semi-rigid substance. This process was made possible by coating the substance that was to be copper plated with a liquid preparation, the secret of which was known only to Mr. Fowler. Every means had been used to induce him to patent the invention, but he declined, fearing he might lose the use of it.

A Chicago company was recently formed which offered to take up manufacturing with the copper deposit extensively, but conditioned their offer upon the patenting of the invention. Their proposition was sent to Mr. Fowler, but before an agreement had been reached the inventor died.

Enforcing the Alien Labor Law.

Toronto, Ont., Aug. 7.—Canada has begun to take means to enforce the alien labor law against Americans. Commissioner McCreary is here on business in connection with work on the Crowns Nest Pass railway through the Rocky mountains. He informed the Canadian Pacific railway authorities that any American laborers engaged for that work would be deported to their own country again. McCreary has instructions from the Canadian government to strictly enforce the new law.

The Florida Orange Crop.

Jacksonville, Fla., Aug. 7.—Officers of the Florida fruit exchange who keep themselves posted on the condition of the orange crop throughout the state, now estimate that the crop this fall will amount to between 150,000 and 200,000 boxes. The bulk of the oranges will come from the counties of Manatee and Lee. Volusia county will come next, with from 15,000 to 20,000 boxes.

An Andree Pigeon Captured.

Murderous Husband Suicides.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Aug. 7.—H. A. Daley, a well to do Jenison man, shot his wife Thursday night. Friday morning he took poison and died while in charge of the officers. The woman may possible recover.

New Cure for Drunkenness.

San Francisco, Aug. 7.—Dr. Fred W. D'Evelyn, head of St. Luke's hospital, has just made public the results of 15 years' experiments by which he claims to have found a certain cure by inoculation of horse blood for drunkenness. The doctor thoroughly introduces alcohol into a horse and then draws off the blood into a sterilized vessel, where it is mixed with chloral to influence the clot. After settling 24 hours it is subjected to a freezing process, then shaken for half an hour and decanted. The result is a slightly sticky, pale, straw-colored fluid which he calls equisin.

ASSASSINATED.

Prime Minister Canovas Del Castillo, of Spain, Dead.

The Assassin, Who Gave His Name as Rinaldi, Immediately Arrested.

Canovas Was Fired at Three Times, One Shot Taking Effect in the Forehead, Another in the Chest—Prime Minister's Last Words, "Long Live Spain."

MADRID, Aug. 9.—Senor Canovas del Castillo, prime minister of Spain, was assassinated Sunday at Santa Agueda by an anarchist. The murderer fired three shots, one of which struck the premier in the forehead and another in the chest. The wounded man fell dying at the feet of his wife, who was with him, lingering in agony for two hours and then passing away with the cry of "Long live Spain," which were the last words upon his lips.

Santa Agueda is noted for its baths. The place is between San Sebastian, the summer residence of the Spanish court, and Vittoria, the capital of the province of Alava, about thirty miles south of Bilbao. The premier went there last Thursday to take a three-weeks' course of the baths, after which he intended to return to San Sebastian to meet United States Minister Woodford when that gentleman should be officially received by the queen regent.

ANTONIO CANOVAS DEL CASTILLO.

The assassin was immediately arrested. He is a Neapolitan and gives the name of Rinaldi, but it is believed that this is an assumed name and that his real name is Michele Angiuo Golli. At a special meeting of the cabinet Sunday, under the presidency of Senor Cos Gayon, minister of the interior, the latter announced that he had been intrusted by the queen regent with the premiership ad interim.

The murderer declares that he killed Senor Canovas "in accomplishment of a just vengeance" and that the deed is the outcome of a vast anarchist conspiracy. He is believed to have arrived at Santa Agueda the same day as the premier, and he was frequently seen lurking in the passages of the bathing establishment in a suspicious manner.

The remains of Senor Canavos will be brought here Monday. Marshal Martinez Campos has gone to San Sebastian to attend the queen regent. Senor Sagasta, the liberal leader, has sent the following telegram to the government:

"I have heard with deepnain of the crime that has thrown us all into mourning, and I place myself at the orders of the government and of the queen."

Most of the liberal leaders have sent similar messages, placing themselves at the disposal of the government.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—This government probably has already received the formal notifiention of Premier Canovas' assassination, but if so it is locked up with other dispatches in the state department and will not be known until Secretary Sherman reaches the department Monday morning. Immediately the state department, according to its usual custom, will announce the event to the president and the latter will in some way make formal and public expression regarding the government's deep regret. Just in what form this expression will be couched is not known, for precedents differ, but it doubtless will be a dispatch to the Spanish government simple and sympathetic in its terms.

Secretary of State Sherman received the first news of the affair through a bulletin. He expressed deep interest in the details. He said:

"This deplorable event will have some effect, of course, on the political affairs of Spain but to what extent I can not say. The death of one man is not necessarily going to change the sentiment of the whole country. Spain is a very ambitious country. Her money is gone. Her resources have been exhausted. But she means, evidently, to hold Cuba. Just how she can do it, under these circumstances, I can not see. Yet she is opposed to yielding a point. Premier Canovas was a strong partisan. He was the chief exponent of the element which was determined to keep the island at all hazards. Seemingly Spain is almost a unit on this. Canovas was a strong factor in the government of Spain, but it is not impossible that another will be found to replace in that important office, having similar views and the same pronounced ideas. How it may be in this case I am not able to say, but the effects, politically, of such an event are not essentially far-reaching, and have not always produced radical development. As to the consequences of the conflict in Cuba, I do not care to talk. I have no official information of the assassination and must refrain from venturing guesses as to what it may effect in the future."

Asked as to how long he now thought the Cuban insurrection might last, he replied that that was problematical and he did not care to discuss it. He added that he had heard various names of prominent leaders in Spain mentioned but he was not well informed as to them and there was nothing on which he could base a prediction as to Canovas' probable successor.

Senator Morgan, of Alabama, a member of the foreign affairs committee of the senate and the champion of Cuba in that body, predicted in an interview Sunday night that the assassination might be the forerunner of a complete change of government, a republic replacing the monarchy. This he thought was the present tendency and Sunday's event he regarded as an evidence of the disintegration of the Spanish government. He added:

"This affair is going to create a complete revolution throughout the whole of Spain. That country is now in a very shaky condition. It is true doubtless that Sunday's assassin was an anarchist, but the act is representative of a feeling that exists all over the country. A republican party has already attained great strength, though of course its operations have to be largely concealed. Then, the universal testimony is that the bulk of the Spanish army in Cuba is made up of young men. This has broken up families all over the land, and their dispatch to the island to be led by Weyler has developed a powerful sentiment in Spain.

"I believe that the Cuban conflict will be ended at the close of the present rainy season. This I have frequently contended and now am confident of it. The termination of the affair would thus be brought about in October."

SECRETARY SHERMAN

Says Spain Can Not Continue the Struggle Against Cuba.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—The World publishes an interview said to have been obtained with John Sherman, secretary of state, just previous to his return to Washington from Amagansett, L. I. In this interview Mr. Sherman is represented as saying: "Spain will lose Cuba. That seems to me to be certain. She can not continue the struggle. Already the conflict has cost her more than $200,000,000. Her money is gone and she can get no more. She has reached the limit of her borrowing capacity. She can not pay back what she has already borrowed. The only thing left for her to do is to repudiate her debts. We had to do that after the revolution. Having repudiated them she can begin anew, but she will have to begin without Cuba. That country is devastated. The insurgents have been fighting with only the hope of ultimate success as their reward. The Spanish soldiers have been battling for pay. The pay will stop and the conflict will stop.

"Spain is in no conditiou to wage war anywhere. The burdens placed upon her people to sustain the struggle for retaining Cuba have been very heavy. Widespread discontent will come sooner or later within the Spanish kingdom. By stopping the struggle, by withdrawing her troops from Cuba, and by repudiating her debts is the only way to recover. Sooner or later she must do this. So far we have done nothing to arouse the anger of the Spanish people. We have gone on minding our own business, blind to the distress of Cuba and deaf to the pleadings of our own people who wanted the government to interfere."

Well Known Turfman Accidentally Shot.

AUBURN, N. Y., Aug. 9.—The body of Dr. Arthur S. Kennedy, aged about fifty-five years, well known turf writer and thrust specialist, of this city, was found Sunday four miles north of this city. He left home about five o'clock Sunday morning to go hunting, and his death is supposed to have resulted from the accidental discharge of his gun, inflicting a wound just above the knee, from which he bled to death. When discovered a handkerchief was found sticking to the wound which he had used to stop the flow of blood. He was well known in turf circles as the owner of fast horses.

Feltz Did Not Take His Flight.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Col., Aug. 9.—Wm. H. Feltz did not take his jump from Pike's Peak Sunday, but it was not his fault. With the conditions of clouds and fog it would have been a blindfolded leap to certain destruction. Feltz went up the summit of the peak Sunday morning, carrying his immense moloplanes with him. Two hours were required in adjusting the big wings, but heavy clouds gathered and a slight snow falling at the time convinced him that a leap from the peak would have been suicidal.

Death of Capt. Thibaut.

FT. THOMAS, Ky., Aug. 9.—Capt. F. W. Thibaut, aged 63, of the Sixth infantry, United States army, stationed here, died Saturday morning. He had been suffering for some time from a complication of diseases. He was born in New York in 1834, and entered the army from that state during the late war. He had been in the army ever since. Mrs. Thibaut was a daughter of ex-Gov. Rector, of Kansas.

Trouble at the Coffeen Mines.

SPRINGFIED, Ill., Aug. 8.—Gov. Tanner has received no further word from Sheriff Randle, of Montgomery county, who at an early hour Sunday morning sent a call for troops at Coffeen. Gov. Tanner sent B. B. Kay, secretary of the railroad and war commission, to Coffeen, instructing him to wire a report of the conditions at Coffeen among the strikers.

Submarine Torpedo Boat Launched.

BALTIMORE, Md., Aug. 9.—"The Plunger," a submarine torpedo boat of the Holland type, designed for the United States navy, was successfully launched at the yards of the Columbian Iron works here Saturday. The ceremonies were simple, consisting merely of the customary christening and a few brief and impromptu speeches.

Earthquake Shock in Colorado.

BASALT, Col., Aug. 9.—Distinct vibrations of an eartquake were felt here about 1:40 a. m., the vibrations appearing to come from Basalt mountain just back of town, and traveled southwest. Windows rattled, houses rocked, wall paper and plastering were cracked. No material damage was done.

Probably Murdered by Burglars.

NORTH ADAMS, Mass., Aug. 9.—Henry J. Reed, a money lender, and his sister, Blanche M. Reed, were found dead in their home here Saturday. They had apparently been murdered by burglars.

SEAL QUESTION.

Ex-Secretary of State John W. Foster Confirms

The Report That the Whole Matter Will Be Re-Opened

At the Conference to be Held in Washington in October—Canada and Russia Will Be Represented—The Question Will Be Settled Satisfactorily.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—The Press Monday publishes the following: John W. Foster, ex-secretary of state, having reported to Secretary Sherman in Washington, on Saturday, the result of his work across the water on the seal question, returned to this city Sunday on his way to Lake Champlain to see President McKinley. A reporter for the Press found Mr. Foster in the Fifth Avenue hotel, but he was scarcely more communicative than he was on his return from Europe. However, he confirmed the report that the whole question is to be reopened at the conference to be held in Washington in October.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the Canadian premier, is expected here. Mr. Foster said, but his presence depends somewhat on the condition of affairs in Canada. It is likely that Laurier will be present in his capacity as privy councilor, and that the argument for Canada will be made principally by George E. King, one of the justices of the supreme court of Canada.

Russia will be represented. Mr. Foster said, but he had heard no gossip as to the choice for the duty. Mr. Foster himself will have much to do with the presentation of the case from the view point of this country. It is not improbable that ex-President Harrison will make the argument for the United States. He is familiar with every step of the negotiations and it was in his administration that the controversy reached the crucial stage.

Mr. Foster said it would be improper for him to say whether his report contained recommendations or only statements of facts.

There is no reason to believe, however, that Mr. Foster thinks the whole controversy will be settled satisfactorily as the result of the conference in Washington in October. He left the city Saturday.

COL. AGUIRA

Thinks the Assassination of Canovas Will Result in the Establishment of the Republic of Spain.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Col. A. A. Aguira, who is stopping in Washington, said Sunday night:

"The assassination of Canovas will result in the dethronement of the Spanish monarchy and the freedom of Cuba. The people of Spain are ripe for a revolution, being discontented over the high taxation, which grinds them down to poverty, and in some cases to starvation. This is the beginning of the revolutionary movement, and is connected with the recent attempt on the life of the queen.

"There is great dissatisfaction over the result of the war in Cuba and to remove Canovas was the object of well laid plans. He was the supporter of Weyler, who was sent to Cuba by him and kept there by him. The two divided the spoils of Cuba and of Spain. I am certain that Canovas will be succeeded by Sagasta, his political rival and leader of the liberal party. Sagasta will undoubtedly take immediate steps to conciliate the Cubans by granting them reforms but it will be too late. I expect to see Cuba free within 90 days, and the republic of Spain established soon afterwards."

The Vehicle Tax Declared Void.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Judge Tuley Saturday decided the new city ordinance establishing a vehicle tax to be void. The ordinance permitted the city to collect $1 a year license from each bicycle owner and for other vehicles proportionately. The ordinance was passed for the ostensible purpose of raising a permanent street repairing fund. The new law aroused much opposition and especially among wholesale men. Injunction was brought against the city and the enjoining bill was sustained in Judge Tuley's decision.

SEATTLE, Wash., Aug. 9.—Manager C. H. Hamilton, of the North American Transportation and Trading Co., announces that his company has let a contract to Cramps, the Philadelphia ship builders, for the construction of two 2,000 ton steel steamers. They will be the finest steamers on the Pacific coast, and will be used exclusively on the Seattle-St. Michaels run. The steamers will have accomodations for 200 first-class and 500 second-class passengers.

West Virginia Miners Out.

MONTGOMERY, W. Va., Aug. 9.—Fred Dilcher, of the national executive committee, wired President Ratchford Saturday that at a state convention of miners held at Montgomery, W. Va., Friday afternoon, a state organization was effected, officers elected and the meeting decided to call out the remainder of the miners who are at work in the Kanawha and New River mining districts.

Lynching in Georgia.

ALBANY, Ga., Aug. 9.—News were received here Sunday of the lynching of Benjamin Mayfield, a Negro with a hitherto good reputation, at Edna, a small village about twelve miles south of this city. Mayfield committed an assault on the wife of a man named Donald James, a railroad conductor, and was caught a short distance from the scene of his crime.

JAPAN

Wants Uncle Sam to Assume a Contingent Responsibility in the Matter of the Arbitration of Her Differences With Hawaii.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—A special to the Herald from Washington says:

Japan will insist that the United States assume a contingent responsibility in the mater of arbitration of her differences with Hawaii on the subject of immigration and the tariff.

It is understood that this is one of the essential conditions upon which Japan will consent to arbitration and that if this responsibility is not assumed by the United States, Japan will break off negotiations looking to arbitration and backup her demands by a naval demonstration in Hawaiian waters.

The state department has not yet received any official communication from the Japanese government on the matter, and the administration has not indicated whether or not it will comply with the Japanese demand when made. An official of the Japanese legation said in an interview:

"I am not officially informed concerning the terms of arbitration, but that Japan should ask the United States to take recognition of it and assume an ultimate responsibility for the decisions of the arbitor as regards Hawaii being carried out seems to be very natural.

"If the United States refuses to give us a guarantee it is probable that the arbitration proposition will fall. We prefer to entertain a grievance and to indemnify our subjects ourselves than to arbitrate after the indignity of the refusal by the United States of so just a request. Neither the United States nor the Hawaiians can justly plead disinterestedness. Frequently in the Hawaiian-Japan correspondence of late, the pending annexation has figured as a factor in the situation. This should operate in the arbitration case as well."

FOUR LIVES.

Go Out in an Early Morning Fire at Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 5.—At 2:45 Thursday morning fire broke out in the kitchen of Adler's restaurant, corner Elm and Charles street, and gained considerable headway before the arrival of the fire department. Four persons were suffocated by smoke, and were taken out by the firemen. The fire was soon put out. Loss small.

The names of the dead are: Arthur Guth, the bridegroom; Ezra Rouse, the best man; Mrs. Nellie Bennett, a guest, and Roy Carr, a bartender.

The daughter of Mr. Adler was married Tuesday night. When the body of Guth was being carried out, his young bride was running to and fro in front of the building, begging those near her to go in and rescue her husband. When the officers appeared with her husband's charred remains she vainly attempted to reach him and grew frantic with grief.

She was finally persuaded, however, to leave, and was taken to the house of a neighbor. She had been occupying another room when the fire started, and had succeeded in escaping with her life.

WAR PAINT.

Kiowa and Comanche Indians Stirred Up Over the Reported Killing of Chief Parker.

ARDMORE, I. T., Aug. 5.—Horace Gibson, a stockman just in from near the Indian reservation, reports the Kiowa and Comanche Indians putting on war paint, and says an uprising of the Indians is feared. Gibson says the Indians are greatly stirred up over the death of their chief, Quanah Parker, and will not be pacified. It is unsafe, he says, for whites to enter the reservation.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 5.—A dispatch received here from Fort Sill, I. T., denies positively the story of the killing of Chief Quanah Parker by a gang of lawless whites who raided the reservation, which act is said to have aroused the war spirit among the Kiowas and Comanches. Fort Sill reports that Chief Parker was one of several Indians who had trouble with outlaws, and adds that the reported killing originated in the fact that Running Antelope, a Comanche, was thrown from his horse and hurt in the scrimmage.

Many Bridges Washed Away.

CASTLE ROCK, Col., Aug. 5.—A cloudburst has occurred here, causing the most serious flood ever known in this county. Plum creek became a raging torrent in a few minutes, and not less than a hundred bridges on that stream and its tributaries were washed away. The Denver and Rio Grande and Santa Fe railway companies suffered some, but the damage does not interfere with regular train service.

Big Price for a Newspaper.

SEATTLE, Wash., Aug. 5.—The Piper Brothers, of Portland, Ore., have secured an option on the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, the consideration being $100,000. This secures the controlling interest owned by John Hoge, of Janesville, O., the minority interest being held, it is said, by Mr. Rockefeller, of New York. The transfer is expected to take place August 10.

Two Hundred Women Drowned.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 5.—A dispatch from Kremontchug, in the province of Poltnyn, on the River Dnieper, says that the floods have destroyed a swimming bath in the river, and that 200 women have been drowned. Kremontchug is 64 miles by rail south west of the city of Poltava, in the section of Little Russia.

THE CORN CROP.

Heat Does No Damage in Nebraska—Kansas Not So Lucky.

Omaha, Neb., Aug. 3.—Copious rains have fallen all over Nebraska, putting an end to the hottest period of weather experienced in many years. The grain operators of Kansas City, St. Louis, Chicago and the east have been wiring the grain men of Nebraska to ascertain the effect of the heat on the corn. Every county has been heard from and not one reports damage. In fact, all return the most flattering reports of the corn crop. So much so that the first estimate of 300,000,000 bushels is now raised to 350,000,000 bushels. The heavy, warm winds have blown furiously over the state for the past three days, with the mercury as high as 112 in some localities. The corn has not shown any bad effect. This is due to the great quantity of moisture previously deposited. All the old corn held over from last year through fear of a crop failure this year is now being released with a rush. Farmers have 140,000,000 bushels of this old grain and cannot get cars fast enough to get it out.

Emporia, Kan., Aug. 3.—Hot winds in Lyon and adjoining counties have dried and burned up everything in the way of crops. Corn will not average a bushel to the acre and is unfit for fodder. Cattlemen here are desperate, as there is no pasture, and are rushing cattle to market until there are not cars enough to meet the demand. The apple crop, which promised so well, has also been destroyed within the past few days. Even kaffir corn and cane are shriveled up, but the farmers claim they will recover with the first rain. These and alfalfa are about all there is hope for now.

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 3.—Reports as to the condition of the corn crop in Kansas and western Missouri continue to be discouraging. Throughout the district the weather continues scorching hot and nothing but a soaking rain can save the crop.

A REMARKABLE SHOWING.

Nebraska in the Front Rank as a Wheat-Producing State

This year Nebraska has come to the very front rank as a wheat producing state, with her splendid crop of 35,000,000 bushels of spring wheat, averaging over 22 bushels to the acre, and 5,000,000 bushels of winter wheat, which will average 21 bushels to the acre. The table given below, which has been carefully compiled, shows, what will surprise many, that Nebraska stands third among the states as a wheat producer, and it must be borne in mind that the states that outrank her are almost exclusively wheat states, whereas Nebraska is a country of diversified crops, corn being her principal product.

Actual figures for 1896 and conservative estimates for 1897:

STRIKE SOON SETTLED.

Some Quarrymen at Lemont, Ill., Secure a Raise.

Chicago, Aug. 3.—A sudden, peaceable and successful strike was inaugurated and concluded by the men employed in the big stone quarries at Lemont Monday. A demand was made for an increase in wages from $1.25 to $1.50 per day—the latter being the wages paid one year ago—and 500 men quit their work until their demand was granted by the companies. At two o'clock in the afternoon the Western Stone company acceded to the demand and the other companies followed suit. Work will be resumed in all the quarries this morning. A strike of the workers in the quarries of the Joliet Limestone company followed that of the workers at Lemont. Following the lead of the Western Stone company, the Joliet company also granted the demand of the men for an increase of 25 cents for a day's work of ten hours.

A FARMER SLAIN.

Minnesota Woman Beats Her Husband to Death.

Redwood Falls, Minn., Aug. 3.—John O'Connell, a well-known farmer and prominent politician of Westling township, Redwood county, was murdered between 12 and one o'clock Saturday morning at his farmhouse. Seven gashes in his scalp by some blunt instrument were the immediate cause of death. After the blows had been inflicted O'Connell's clothing was saturated with kerosene and his house was set on fire. Statements of three of the eldest of nine children made to the county authorities are to the effect that Mrs. O'Connell, wife of the murdered man, was the sole author of the tragedy. His wife's antipathy to drink was strong and his abuse of her and the children while under its influence may have driven her temporarily insane and caused her to commit the deed.

New Rate on Corn.

Chicago, Aug. 3.—The Illinois Central put into effect Monday its export rate of ten cents on corn to New Orleans. The rate is put into effect in pursuance of the policy of the Illinois Central, which is determined to make New Orleans one of the leading export ports of the country.

PITH AND POINT.

—"I'm so grateful to Mr. Chumpleigh for sending me his photograph." "Why, I thought you hated him." "Yes, but just think he might have brought it."—Brooklyn Life.

—She—"How would you punctuate the following: 'Bank of England notes of various values were blown along the street by the wind?'" "I think I would make a dash after the notes."—Household Words.

—Merely a Suggestion.—Bridget—"Sure, ma'am, I wud call your attenshun to the beautiful sunset out av the kitchen winder." Mistress—"That's nothing, Bridget. You ought to see it rise some morning."—Life.

—Typewriter—"I am rapid enough, and undrestand business forms all right, but I must admit that I cannot spell." Business Man—"You won't do, then, even at the price. I can't spell, either."—Indianapolis Journal.

—"Any fool can write a novel," said Griggle; "you can make things come out just as you want them to." "Very true," replied Dixon; "but you must admit that there are some fools who do not write novels."—Boston Transcript.

—Dr. Samuel S. Wesley being present during a performance of his fine anthem, "Ascribe unto the Lord," the basses sang their recitative, "Noses have they, and smell not," in such a vulgar, nasal tone, when Wesley remarked, in his most sarcastic manner: "No, they keep their noses to sing through."

—A Delicate Accommodation.—"Did you say that this is to be a wedding present?" asked the clever salesman in the china store. "No, I didn't say anything of the kind," replied the man who was making the purchase. "And I don't see that it makes any difference to you." "Not the slightest," was the reply. "I merely thought you might like to have us take off this price-mark and paste on another with a higher figure on it."—Washington Star.

RUSSIA'S RECENT CENSUS.

Startling Facts Developed by the Enumeration Lately Compiled.

The general results of the Russian census taking are now known. They present no specially startling facts, but some of decided interest. They show Russia to be, as it was of course known to be, by far the most populous country in Europe. Yet it is not so populous as to overbalance all the rest of the continent, nor even a combination of three or four other states. The notion that Russia is so great in population and resources as to menace the remainder of Europe with Cossack rule is seen to be an unsubstantial dream. The population of Russia proper is a trifle more than 94,000,000. That is little more than that of Germany and Austrin-Hungary, and much less than that of Great Britain, France and Germany. If we add the 9,400,000 of Poland, the 9,700,000 of Caucasia and the 2,500,000 of Finland, the total is still much less than that of Great Britain, France and Germany, or of the triple alliance states. The entire empire, including the 6,700,000 of Siberia and Saghalien, the 3,400,000 of the Steppes, the 4,200,000 of Central Asia and the few thousands settled in Khiva and Bokhara, foots up a grand total of 129,211,113. That is enormous. But it does not nearly equal that of the other five great powers of Europe, or that of any four of them, while if, instead of numbers, quality be considered, the inferiority of Russia is much more marked.

Comparing these figures with those of the not very authentic census of 1851 it is seen that the population of the empire has about doubled within 50 years. The total in 1851 was 65,743,730. Leaving out Central Asia, which has been acquired since 1851, it is to be observed that the population of the steppes, of Siberia and of Caucasia has considerably more than doubled, that of Poland has somewhat less than doubled, and that of European Russia and Finland has much less than doubled. Russia is, therefore, increasing as an Asiatic more than as a European power. The population is chiefly rural, despite a marked growth of towns and cities in recent years. There is only one city, St. Petersburg, with over 1,000,000 inhabitants; only two others, Moscow and Warsaw, with more than 500,000; only three others with over 250,000, and only 13 more with over 100,000 each. Those between 100,000 and 50,000 number 35 and between 50,000 and 25,000 69. The population is most dense, or least sparse, in Poland, there amounting to more than 30 to the square mile. This is a thin and scattered population compared with other countries. In European Russia proper it is only eight and in Caucasia 8.6 to the square mile. Nowhere else in the empire is it as much as seven, and in the empire as a whole it is only 2.5 to the square mile. Women are more numerous than men by nearly three per cent. in European Russia and Finland, and men are the more numerous elsewhere. In the empire as a whole the two sexes exactly balance.—N. Y. Tribune.

We heartily congratulate our friends, of Walton, who, last week, came out in an open protest against bribery. Such proceedings have existed all over the county, and have been manifested in recent elections. Our present Congressman would not be spending his time at the capital had it not been for his money and his followers, some of whoue were named in the open protest, who used it for him.

A man walked up to a candidate and said: "Sir, if I had $10 I could make very good use of it now." The candidate, assuming that he would buy votes for him, reached in his pocket and handed him $15. The poorman then went to a store and purchased a barrel of flour, some sugar, coffee and such articles as those, till he had spent the entire 15 for himself, and then went to the polls and voted against the man who gave him the $15. Such is the reward of bribery, and the present officials who hold their office by virtue of bribery will find it out "some sweet day, bye and bye."

Tom Riddell, colored, gave a lawn fete at his residence, Saturday night, the proceeds to be donated to the colored Baptist church at Burlington. Along in the evening a discussion took place between Elbert Utz and Tom Strader in regard to appropriating a neighbor's chickens for the benefit of a church festival. Utz said while it might be appropriate it was not right and no honest nigger would steal chickens and bring to a church festival. This raised the ire of Strader, who hauled off and landed on Utz's nose. Utz went down in his hip pocket, pulled a 32-callbre and begau to fire. When the smoke of battle cleared away, Strader was found to have been shot through the shoulder. Utz has skipped out.

The Fourth Quarterly Conference of the Petersburg charge will be held at East Bend church on Saturday and Sunday, the 21st and 22d of August.

Thieves have been doing considerable petty stealing in the neighborhood of James L. Riley, and have made two or three draws on him for small articles.

Thieves began operation in Burlington, last week, and R C. Rice's chicken coop was depleted. They were heard at A. J. Barker's, trying to get into the kitchen, but were frightened away.

There will be no preaching at the Methodist church in Burlington on the 4th Sunday on account of Quarterly Conference at East Bend Will be preaching at Methodist church on 5th Sunday morning and at night.

In another column is the programme for the Teachers' Institute. Teachers should read it and then prepare themselves for the duties assigned them. Prof. Newton, an excellent conductor will have charge of the exercises.

The prospects for a crop of corn in this part of the county are not at all flattering. A good rain is badly needed, but even then the devastating chinch bug will continue its work in some fields Some of the farmers are getting blue because of the poor appearance of their corn.

H. W. Harrison, dentist, of Rising Sun, Ind., will be in Burlington on the first and third Monday in each month, to do work for those who wish anything in his line. He will be here two days each visit. He is a son of the late R. F. Harrison, of Carrollton, and a graduate of the Pennsylvania College of Dentistry at Philadelphia. He is highly recommended in his profession.

The Has-beens and the Would-bes met on the diamond here, last Saturday morning, and played a game of ball which was especially noted for poor fielding and batting. At the close of seven innings the score stood 19 to 14 in favor of the Has-beens. There is no telling what the score would have been had the nine innings been played as nine or ten runs to a inning were not uncommon.

The protracted meeting is still in progress at the Baptist church, being now in its third week. Dr. Johns, who has been doing the preaching, has captivated his hearers by the masterly sermons delivered. He is one of the most forcible pulpit orators that has appeared here for some time, and depends upon conversions as a result of an intelligent presentation of the scriptures as he understands them. The interest in the meeting has continued to grow from the first, and the congregation Sunday night was very large.

Mr. Cornelius Carpenter, who lives about a mile west of town, came in to the bank, last Thursday, and had an $80 check cashed, put the money in his pocket and went home. Upon arriving at home he missed his pocket book and money, and at once instituted an unsuccessful search for it He was satisfied that the pocket book was lost on his road home from town, and the search was continued until after dark, when it was abandoned, and he was surprised upon his return home to find the wallet and its contents lying on the window sill in one room of his house. He has no recollection, whatever, of placing it there.

A negro carrying a bundle, was arrested upon suspicion, in Cincinnati, one day last week, and when the bundle was examined it was found to contain wearing apparel bearing the names of Dr. Corey and his sister, of Florence. Dr. Corey was informed by telephone of the arrest of the negro with his and his sister's property, it being the first information he or any of the family had of the robbery; but upon investigation the articles described were found to be missing, and the Doctor had the thief detained. In selecting the articles the thief chose such as were not needed at this season of the year, which was the reason the theft had not been discovered.

Three great meetings occur this fall in the North. G. A. R. Encampment Buffalo, Aug. 23rd to 28th. The sons of Veterans Encampment, Indianapolis, Sept. 9th to 11th, and the Union Veteran Legion, Columbus, O., Sept. 21st to 24th.

The Queen & Crescent Route is the official line to Buffalo and the most convenient route to all three cities. Its vestibuled trains run from Chattanooga to Cincinnati solid, on fast schedules, via the short line over the most perfectly equipped road-bed.

Extremely low rates are in effect this year to all these meetings. Selling round trip Q. & C. Route tickets on dates convenient to each, with liberal limits to return. Veterans and their friends will find travel made easy by the well furnished trains of the Q. & C. and connections convenient at Cincinnati with all lines of the North.

Ask your ticket agent to sell you tickets via the Q. & C. Route and so make an easy journey. Write for further particulars to O. L. Mitchell, D. P. A., Chattanooga, or W. C. Rinearson, G. P. A., Cincinnati.

A Feast of Good Things.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

The Christian Endeavor Society, of Verona, has recently been made glad by Manna—much Manna sent from Heaven. On July 30th our long, looked-for Rally brought us a feast, not only in the delicacies that supplied our ample tables, but a rich feast of spiritual good things. O, the rare varieties that were here presented to the appreciative appetites of our little society and of all good people present. We are humbly praying, trusting, and believing that new life and vigor will be found coursing through the arteries, veins, and capillaries of our entire neighborhood.

The exercises of the day was opened by devotional exercises led by Rev. S. H. Myers, of Walton, followed by a hearty welcome from our beloved pastor, Rev. L. Johnson.

The address of Judge J. D. Ellis, of Bellevue, was alone worth the gathering together. Many were made to see that they had been burying their talents, and instead of bringing in usury had been bringing false accusations instead. The contrast between the living and dead body, an active and inactive Christian was clearly brought out.

Mrs. S. H. Myers, of Walton, presented an essay upon "The Origin and Progress of Christian Endeavor Work." The subject was handled under the similitude of a river, tracing it from its pure source—One heart filled with the love of God—and showing all along such transparency as to reflect everywhere God's own image. It began in 1881, at Portland, Maine, with one society, organized by F. E. Clarke, the fountain and head of the beautiful river of Christian Endeavor, and now numbers 3,000,000 souls.

The afternoon session was opened by devotional exercises, led by Prof. Ellis, of Crittenden. After reading he requested as a concert prayer, simply the words, "Let the words of my mouth, and the meditations of my heart be acceptable in Thy sight, O, Lord, my Redeemer."

The grave and important duties of the Lookout Committee, were ably set fourth by Messrs. Gibson and Sayers, of Covington.

The subject, "The Prayer Meeting, and the Prayer Meeting Committee," was taken up by Rev. Morris, of Vevay, Indiana. Prayer was represented as the Electric Current by which we were connected with the Source of Life, and the Prayer Meeting Committee as the various batteries that determined to a great extent the quality and power of the current.

"Consecration," by Rev. Alex. Henry, of Crittenden, was enobling—altogether lovely. Noue could listen to such an intelligent and earnest man of God, while trying to show the depths of the word, "consecration," without being deeply moved.

Rev. G. W. Moss, of Walton, was called upon "The Pledge." He showed the Scriptural precedeuce of pledges, the importance of pledges, the universality of pledges and the richness, durability and countless value of The Christian Endeavor Pledges. This was followed by a valuable talk upon "Junior Work," by Mrs. Judge Ellis. All present realized that her heart was in that work; so forcibly did she show the often times sad neglect of our boys and girls while in their early teens; assigning attention paid by fond mothers to their outward robes, a seeming indifference and thoughtlessness in regard to their spiritual robes.

Mr. Eugene Sayers, of Covington, reviewed his trip to San Francisco convention with such fervor that all heartily wished they could have joined him in Kentucky yell—"Yi, yi, aren't we lucky Christian Endeavors from Kentucky!"

By request the Christian Endeavor Song as arranged by Mrs. Judge Ellis, to the tune of Old Kentucky Home was rendered by Mr. A. Whittaker.

Miss Lillie Rouse, of Lexington, and Mrs. Dr. Robinson, of Covington, ably served as organists, and Mr. A. Whittaker as leader of the choir.

We trust that the good influence of the day may long be felt in our vicinity. N. E. HAMILTON, Cor. Sec'y.

E. W. Rouse and wife, of the Limaburg neighborhood went to Cincinnati to attend the wedding of Mr. Arthur Guth, Mrs. Rouse's brother, on the 4th inst. After the wedding ceremony the festivities were continued until about two o'clock Thursday morning, when Mr. Rouse and Mr. Guth, the groom of but a few hours, retired to the same room for the night, and in a few minutes there occured in their room an explosion that cost Rouse and Guth and one other man and a woman in the building their lives, and did considerable damage to the building. There are numerous theories advanced as to the cause of the dreadful explosion but none of them have been fully sustained and the cause of the sad affair will in all probability, remain a mystery. The first theory was that Rouse and Guth filled a coal oil lamp with gas line, which, when lighted exploded, but investigation has wiped out that theory, and some believe that the explosion was planned and brought about by some enemy to one of the guests.

The bodies of Ezra Rouse and Mr. Guth, were brought to the Rouse home near Limaburg, last Thursday, and Friday afternoon the remains of the unfortunate men were interred at Hebron. Rev. H. Max Lentz, of Florence, who, on the evening of the preceding Wednesday was one of the officiating ministers at young Guth's wedding, conducted the funeral ceremonies.

The sudden and tragic death of Mr. Rouse cast a gloom over his entire neighborhood, where he was born and raised, and so conducted himself as to enjoy the confidence and esteem of a very large circle of acquaintances.

Mr. Rouse was about 30 years of age, and had been married twice. His first wife was a sister of Mrs. F. H. Russell, of Pt. Pleasant; his second wife was a Miss Guth, of Cincinnati, to whom he was married something over a year ago. No children by either marriage survive him. He leaves one sister, Mrs. W. L. B. Rouse, and she and the widow have the sympathy of all who have heard of the distressing accident.

Young Guth was well known at Erlanger, where he lived for many years.

The remains of the two men while they were fearfully blackened and literally baked, were not mutilated in the least.

DR. T. H. BAKER,
The New Postmaster at Louisville.

The above is a good picture of Dr. Thomas H Baker, who is now postmaster at Louisville. Dr. Baker is a son of the late A. Q. Baker, and was born in this county 38 years ago. He is a cousin of Capt. W. H. Baker, president of Erlanger Deposit Bank, and E. H. Baker, of Cincinnati, and Z. T. Baker of this county.

He passed the first 18 years of his life on a farm, and succeeded in obtaining a fair education, notwithstanding the disadvantages with which he was surrounded. He began teaching in the public schools of the county at the age of 19, and in 1883, he went to Louisville, and undergoing a successful Civil Service examination he entered the postoffice there in 1884, and applied his spare time preparing for the practice of medicine, and in 1889 he graduated from the Louisville Hospital College of Medicine since which time he has practiced his profession, and is to-day one of the most popular physicians in the Falls City, and commands an extensive and lucrative practice.

Dr. Baker has occupied a prominent position as a politician for many years, and last year he was chairman of the Republican Congressional committee, and a member of the State Advisory Committee, and the office he now holds came to him without a contest in recognition of party services.

He has an interesting family, and is one of the cleverest fellows in the land —loyal to his friends and faithful in the performance of every trust.

Something Different.

The average trip to the sea shore or northern resort is much like all other summer trips in many particulars, but a trip to the South in the heated season in search of a cool place is something different altogether. Different in its lack of hot noon-days (they don't have sun-strokes in the South). Different in that it is comparatively inexpensive. Different in the absence of perspiring crowds of humanity everywhere about one. Different in altitude—you can go up thousands instead of hundreds of feet above sea-level and get the bracing air which brings you home again invigorated.

$8.00 is the round-trip rate for a delightful trip to that famous Southern mountain resort—Asheville, the center of what is known as "The Land of the Sky." This via the Queen & Crescent Route, and the Southern R'y from Cincinnati, Saturday, August 7th. Tickets at this rate are good ten days to return. Sixteen hours ride through the Blue Grass, across High Bridge, down the Emory and through the mountains of East Tennessee to the French Broad river and for some 40 miles along that beautiful mountain stream. The Asheville altitude is 2,500 feet, with protecting peaks double that height, giving that peculiar beauty and dryness for which it is noted throughout the world. Sunshine for 300 days a year; perfect hotel service; the most elaborate private residence and domain in America, at Biltmore; scenery unsurpassed on a scale of actual grandeur. Write to us for books describing Asheville, will send them free.

THE POOR NAZARENE.

Jesus Christ Fought No Battles and Wore No Sword,

But the People Hailed Him as Their Deliverer—They Followed Him Into the Wilderness, Praising God—Sermon by Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D.D.

The prophet lived in a dark time. For some 3,000 years the world had been getting worse. Kingdoms had arisen and perished. As the captain of a vessel in distress sees a relief coming across the water, so the prophet, amid the stormy times in which he lived, put the telescope of prophecy to his eye, and saw, 750 years ahead, one Jesus advancing to the rescue. I want to show that when Isaiah called Christ the Wonderful, he spoke wisely.

In most houses there is a picture of Christ. Sometimes it represents Him with face effeminate; sometimes with a face despotic. I have seen West's grand sketch of the rejection of Christ; I have seen the face of Christ as cut on an emerald, said to be by command of Tiberius Cæsar; and yet I am convinced that I shall never know how Jesus looked until, on that sweet Sabbath morning, I shall wash the last sleep from my eyes in the cool river of Heaven. I take up this book of divine photographs, and I look at Luke's sketch, at Mark's sketch, at John's sketch, and at Paul's sketch, and I say, with Isaiah, "Wonderful!"

I think that you are all interested in the story of Christ. You feel that He is the only one who can help you. You have unbonded admiration for the commander who helped His passengers ashore while He Himself perished, but have you no admiration for Him who rescued our souls, Himself falling back into the waters from which He had saved us?

Christ was wonderful in the magnetism of His person.

After the battle of Antietam, when a general rode along the lines, although the soldiers were lying down exhausted, they rose with great enthusiasm and huzzaed. As Napoleon returned from his captivity, his first step on the wharf shook all the kingdoms, and 250,000 men joined his standard. It took 3,000 troops to watch him in his exile. So there have been men of wonderful magnetism of person. But hear me while I tell you of a poor young man who came up from Nazareth to produce a thrill such as has never been excited by any other. Napoleon had around him the memories of Austerlitz and Jena, and Dadajos, but here was a man who fought no battles; who wore no epaulettes; who brandished no sword. He is no titled man of the schools, for he never went to school. He had probably never seen a prince, or shaken hands with a nobleman. The only extraordinary person we know of as being in his company was his own mother, and she was so poor that in the most delicate and solemn hour that ever comes to a woman's soul she was obliged to lie down amid camel drivers grooming the beasts of burden.

I imagine Christ one day standing in the street of Jerusalem. A man descended from high lineage is standing beside Him, and says, "My father was a merchant prince; he had a castle on the beach at Galilee. Who was your father?" Christ answers, "Joseph, the carpenter." A man from Athens is standing there unrolling his parchment of graduation, and says to Christ, "Where did you go to school?" Christ answers, "I never graduated." Aha! the idea of such an unheralded young man attempting to command the attention of the world! As well some little fishing village on Long Island shore attempt to arraign New York. Yet no sooner does he set his foot in the towns or cities of Judea than everything is in commotion. The people go out on a picnic, taking only food enough for the day, yet are so fascinated with Christ that, at the risk of starving, they follow him out into the wilderness. A nobleman falls down flat before him and says: "My daughter is dead." A beggar tries to rub the dimness from his eyes and says: "Lord, that my eyes may be opened." A poor, sick, panting woman, pressing through the crowd, says: "I must touch the hem of his garment." Children, who love their mother better than anyone else, struggle to get into His arms, and to kiss His cheek, and to run their fingers through His hair, and for all time putting Jesus so in love with the little ones that there is hardly a nursery in Christendom from which He does not take one, saying, "I must have them; I will fill Heaven with these; for every cedar that I plant in Heaven I will have 50 white lilies. In the hour when I was a poor man in Judea they were not ashamed of me, and now that I have come to a throne I will not despise them. Hold it not back, O weeping mother, lay it on my warm heart. Of such is the kingdom of Heaven.

What is this coming down the road? A triumphal procession. He is seated, not in a chariot, but on an ass; and yet the people take off their coats and throw them in the way. Oh, what a time Jesus made among the children, among the beggars, among the fishermen, among the philosophers! You may boast of self-control, but if you had seen Him you would have put your arms around His neck and said, "Thou art altogether lovely."

Jesus was wonderful in the opposites and seeming antagonisms of His nature. You want things logical and consistent, and you say: "How could Christ be God and man at the same time?" John says Christ was the Creator: "All things were made by Him, and without Him was not anything made." Matthew says that He was omnipresent: "Where two or three are met together in My name, there am I in the midst of them." Christ declares His own eternity: "I am Alpha and Omega." How can He be a lion, under His foot crushing kingdoms, and yet a lamb licking the hand that slays Him? At what point do the throne and the manger touch? If Christ was God, why flee into Egypt? Why not stand His ground? Why, instead of bearing the cross, not lift up His right hand and crush his assassins? Why stand and be spat upon? Why sleep on the mountain, when He owned the palaces of eternity? Why catch fish for His breakfast on the beach in the chill morning, when all the pomegranates are His, and all the vineyards His, and all the cattle His, and all the partridges His? Why walk when weary, and His feet stone-bruised, when He might have taken the splendors of the sunset for His equipage, and moved with horses and chariots of fire? Why beg a drink from the wayside, when out of the crystal chalices of eternity He poured the Euphrates, the Mississippi, and the Amazon, and dipping his hand in the fountains of Heaven and shaking that hand over the world, from the tips of His fingers dripping the great lakes and the oceans? Why let the Roman regiment put him to death, when he might have ridden down the sky followed by all cavalry of Heaven, mounted on white horses of eternal victory?

You can not understand. Who can? You try to confound me. I am confounded before you speak. Paul said it was unsearchable. He went climbing up from argument to argument, and from antithesis to antithesis, and from glory to glory, and then sank down in exhaustion as he saw far above him other heights of divinity unscaled, and exclaimed, "that in all things he might have the pre-eminence."

Again: Christ was wonderful in His teaching. The people had been used to formalities and technicalities. Christ unset all their notions as to how preaching ought to be done. There was this peculiarity about His preaching: the people knew what He meant. His illustrations were taken from the hen calling her chickens together; from salt, from candles, from fishing tackle, from a hard creditor collaring a debtor. How few pulpits would have allowed Him entrance! He would have been called undignified and familiar in His style of preaching. And yet the people went to hear Him. Those old Jewish rabbis might have preached on the side of Olivet 50 years and never get an audience. The philosophers sneered at His ministrations and said: "This will never do." The lawyers caricatured, but the common people hear Him gladly. Suppose you that there were any sleepy people in His audiences? Suppose you that any woman who ever mixed bread was ignorant of what He meant when He compared the kingdom of Heaven with leaven or yeast? Suppose you that the sunburned fishermen, with the fish-scales upon their hands, were listless when He spoke of the Kingdom of Heaven as a net? We spend three years in college studying ancient mythology, and three years in the theological seminary learning how to make a sermon, and then we go out to save the world; and if we can not do it according to Claude's "Sermonizing," or Blair's "Rhetoric," or Kames' "Criticism," we will let the world go to perdition. If we save nothing else, we will save Claude and Blair. We see a wreck in sight. We must go out and save the crew and passengers. We wait until we get on our fine cap and coat, and find our shining oars, and then we push out methodically and scientifically, while some plain shoreman, in rough fishing smack, and with broken oar-lock, goes out and gets the crew and passengers, and brings them ashore in safety. We throw down our delicate oars and say: "What a ridiculous thing to save men in that way! You ought to have done it scientifically and beautifully." "Ah!" says the shoreman, "if those sufferers had waited until you had got out your fine boat they would have gone to the bottom."

The work of a religious teacher is to save men; and though every law of grammar be snapped in the undertaking, and there be nothing but awkwardness and blundering in the mode, all hail to the man who saves a soul.

Christ, in his preaching, was plain, earnest and wonderfully sympathetic. We can not dragoon men into Heaven. We can not drive them in with the butt end of a catechism. We waste our time in trying to catch flies with acids instead of the sweet honeycomb of the gospel. We try to make crab apples do the work of pomegranates.

Again: Jesus was wonderful in His sorrows. The sun smote Him, and the cold chilled Him, the rain pelted Him, thirst parched Him and hunger exhausted Him. Shall I compare his sorrow to the sea? No; for that is sometimes hushed into a calm. Shall I compare it with the night? No; for that sometimes gleams with Orion, or kindle with Aurora. If one thorn should be thrust through your temple you would faint. But here is a whole crown made from the Rhamnus or Spina Christi—small, sharp, stinging thorns. The mob makes a cross. They put down the long beam and on it they fasten a shorter beam. Got him at last. Those hands that have been doing kindnesses and wiping away tears—hear the hammer driving the spikes through them. Those feet, that have been going about on ministrations of mercy—battered against the cross, then they lift it up. Look! look! look! Who will help Him now? Come, men of Jerusalem—ye whose dead He brought to life; ye whose sick He healed; who will help Him? Who will seize the weapons of the soldiers? None to help! Having carried such a cross for us, shall we refuse to take our cross for Him?

Shall Jesus bear the cross alone,
And all the world go free?
No; there's a cross for every one,
And there's a cross for me.

You know the process of ingrafting. You bore a hole into a tree, and put in the branch of another tree. This tree of the cross was hard and rough, but into holes where the nails went there have been grafted branches of the Tree of Life that now bear fruit for all nations. The original tree was bitter, but the branches ingrafted were sweet, and now all the nations pluck the fruit and live forever.

Again: Christ was wonderful in His victories.

First—Over the forces of nature. The sea is a crystal sepulcher. It swallowed the Central America, the president and the Spanish Armada as easily as any fly that ever floated on it. The inland lakes are fully as terrible in their wrath. Galilee, when aroused in a storm, is overwhelming; yet the sea crouched in His presence and licked His feet. He knew all the waves and winds. When He beckoned, they came. When He frowned, they fled. The heel of His foot made no indentation on the solidified water. Medical science has wrought great changes in rheumatic limbs and diseased blood, but when the muscles are entirely withered no human power can restore them, and when a limb is once dead, it is dead. But here is a paralytic—his hand lifeless. Christ says to him. "Stretch forth thy hand;" and he stretches it forth.

In the eye infirmary how many diseases of that delicate organ have been cured! But Jesus said to one born blind, "Be open;" and the light of Heaven rushes through gates that have never before been opened. The frost of an ax may kill a tree, but Jesus smites one dead with a word.

Chemistry can do many wonderful things, but what chemist, at a wedding, when the refreshment gave out, could change a pail of water into a cask of wine?

What human voice could command a school of fish? Yet here is a voice that marshals the scaly tribes, until in the place where they had let down the net and pulled it up with no fish in it, they let it down again, and the disciples lay hold and begin to pull, when, by reason of the multitude of fish, the net broke.

Nature is His servant. The flowers—He twisted them into His sermons; the winds—they were His lullaby when He slept in the boat; the rain—it hung glittering on the thick foliage of the parables; the star of Bethlehem—it sang a Christmas carol over His birth; the rocks—they beat a dirge at His death.

Behold His victory over the grave! The hinges of the family vault become very rusty because they are never opened except to take another in. There is a knob on the outside of the sepulcher, but none on the inside. Here comes the Conqueror of Death. He enters the realm and says, "Daughter of Jarius, sit up;" and she sat up. To Lazarus, "Come forth;" and he came forth. To the widow's son He said, "Get up from that bier;" and he goes home with his mother. Then Jesus snatched up the keys of death and hung them to his girdle, and cried until all the graveyards of the earth heard Him, "Oh, Death! I will be thy plague! Oh, Grave! I will be thy destruction!"

But Christ's victories have only just begun. This world is his, and he must have it. What is the matter in this country? Why all these financial troubles? There never will be permanent prosperity in this land until Christ rules it. This land was discovered for Christ, and until our cities shall be evangelized, and north, south, east and west shall acknowledge Christ as King and Redeemer, we can not have permanent prosperity. What is the matter with Spain, with France, with all of the nations? All the congresses of the nations can not bring quiet. When governments, not only theoretically, but practically, acknowledge the Saviour of the world, there will be peace everywhere. In that day there will have more ships than now—but there will not be one "man of war." The foundries of the world will jar with mightier industries, but there will be no molding of bullets. Printing presses will fly their cylinders with greater speed, but there shall go forth no iniquitous trash. In laws, in constitutions, on exchange, in scientific laboratory, on earth as in Heaven, Christ shall be called wonderful. Let that work of the world's regeneration begin in your heart, O hearer! A Jesus so kind, a Jesus so good, a Jesus so loving—how can you help but love Him?

It is a beautiful moment when two persons who have pledged each other, stand in church and have the banns of marriage proclaimed, father and mother, brothers and sisters stand around the altar. The minister of Jesus gives the counsel; the ring is set; earth and Heaven witness it; the organ sounds, and amid many congratulations they start out on the path of life together. Oh that this might be you marriage day! Stand up, immortal soul. Thy beloved comes to get his betrothed. Jesus stretches forth his hand and says, "I will love thee with an everlasting love," and you respond, "My beloved is mine, and I am His." I put your hand in His. Henceforth be one. No trouble shall part you—no time cool your love. Side by side on earth—side by side in Heaven! Now let the blossoms of heavenly gardens fill the house with their redolence, and all the organs of God peal forth the wedding march of eternity. Hark! "The voice of my beloved." Behold, He cometh leaping upon the mountains, skipping upon the hills."

In Beloochistan, when the physician gives a dose, he is expected to partake of a similar one himself as a guarantee of his good faith. Should the patient die under his hands the relatives—though they rarely exercise it—have the right of putting him to death, unless a special agreement has been made freeing him from all responsibility as to consequences; while, if they should decide upon immolating him, he is fully expected to yield to his fate like a man.

Burma grows a hard wood called Pyinkadoe which, the British have found, makes excellent railroad sleepers. The wily Burmese, however, who sell the wood, having discovered that the British engineers know little about it, having taken to dyeing cheap wood a reddish color and palming it off as Pyinkadoe.

LAST OF THE WILD BIRDS.

They Are Being Exterminated All Over the World.

The Smithsonian Institution sounds a note of alarm. It declares that civilized man is sweeping the wild birds off the face of the earth at such a rate that before long hardly any species of feathered creatures will survive save those which are domesticated. The next few years must witness the extinction of many species already becoming rare, while during the last quarter of a century scores of other species have been totally extirpated. Thus is threatened a great change in the fauna of the world—a change that is only too apt to be attended by results most damaging to the interests of mankind.

Take, for example, that wonderful bird called the "rhea," which represents the ostrich on the American continents. Though already becoming rare, the survivors of this magnificent species are being hunted systematically in Argentina and North Patagonia for the sake of their feathers. And what do you suppose the long and handsome feathers are used for? For millinery? Not a bit of it. They are employed in the manufacture of feather dusters. Thus it appears that one of the most beautiful creatures placed on the earth by a beneficent Creator for the benefit and admiration of mankind is to be destroyed forever for the sake of cheapening the production of feather dusters.

The famous Labrador duck used to be common enough in the markets of the United States, migrating in winter as far south as New England. In summer it was plentiful along the Labrador coast and about the mouth of the St. Lawrence river. Like the eider duck, to which it was allied, it bred on rocky islets, where it was safe from foxes and other carnivorous quadrupeds. But sportsmen visited the islets annually and destroyed the breeding birds wholesale. They had no asylum to turn to, the shore of the mainland being infested by four-footed enemies, and the result was inevitable.

The well-known Carolina paroquets, the only parrots native to the United States, are near to final extinction. Formerly they ranged all over the eastern part of this country, as far north as New York and westward to Texas. At present the few survivors are confined to remote parts of southern Florida and the Indian territory. The species has been wiped out in a most ruthless and wanton manner. These little birds sleep inside of hollow stumps, hanging by their beaks, which are stuck into crevices. A while ago the so-called "passenger pigeon" flew by millions in the Ohio valley as far east as Massachusetts. Now only a few of them are left. They have been shot by wholesale, and while they lasted were commonly utilized for shooting from traps.—Boston Transcript.

NEW TRICK TO DRAW TRADE.

Shrewd Business Man Who Takes Advantage of Human Curiosity.

On a street off one of the main thoroughfares a plainly-clad young man stood gazing into the window of a shoe shop. A messenger boy, thinking the object of the young man's attention must be something worth seeing, stopped and gazed, too. The pair were joined by a clerk on his way to lunch, and presently quite a little crowd had swarmed up. There was nothing special to see, after all; just tiers of commonplace shoes, with labels announcing their prices. As fast as the people in the crowd found that it wasn't one of those idiotic mechanical toy monkeys, or a live sparrow—the latter is a great curiosity in a window—they passed on. One or two, perhaps, went into the shop for further inspection of some pair of shoes that had caught their fancy.

The young man waited until the crowd had quite melted away. Then he strolled on to the ——corner. A straggling group of men turned past him and toward the shoeshop. He overtook them and walked briskly until he reached the window that seemed to attract him. There he stopped short and began to gaze at the shoes with an earnestness that was conspicuous. Every one of the crowd following paused to investigate the attraction. One of them went into the store to look further. The rest went on, the young man with them as far as the corner.

A dozen times an hour, all through that afternoon, was the performance repeated. At six o'clock the youth himself entered the store.

"Everything satisfactory, I hope?" he said to the well-dressed man near the door.

"Quite so. Come again to-morrow," was the answer. And the well-dressed individual handed the youth a large, white coin.—Chicago Times-Herald.

What He Was Good For.

"Why do they keep that old man around here?" inquired the porter's friend, superciliously, observing an aged individual in shirt sleeves, who sat scribbling at a desk. "What's he good for?"

"Good for about $3,000,000, you chump," replied Dennis, scornfully. "That's the old man."

And such are the eccentricities of our language that the friend understood without more words.—Washington Times.

The Other Man's House.

"Much better, isn't it, to own your own home and pay no rent?"

"It is in a general way, but it has its disadvantages. A fellow can't go around driving nails anywhere he pleases in the woodwork of his own house, you know."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A Soft Answer.

Mr. Benham—I wish I were single again.

Mrs. Benham—You horrid wretch. What would you do if you were?

"Marry you again."

AN INIQUITOUS TARIFF.

Prosperity for the Mill Bosses and Favorites.

Charles H. Evans, who has had much to do with the preparation of tariff bills during the last 25 years, figures the ad valorem equivalents of the duties under the late and the present tariff in different schedules as follows:

Schedules.	Late tariff.	New tariff.
Chemicals	28.53	30.67
Earthen and glass ware	36.00	52.47
Metals	38.11	49.24
Sugar	40.94	74.16
Tobacco	109.06	121.90
Agricultural products	22.44	38.42
Spirits, etc.	61.54	68.83
Cotton manufactures	42.76	52.33
Silks	46.96	53.41
Wools and woolens	47.62	86.54

Mr. Evans' estimates for the three remaining schedules—wood, including lumber, pulp and paper and sundries—are not given. He places the average on all dutiable goods at 54.66 per cent, against 40.10 per cent. under the late law. The present law is the worst we ever had. Even under the McKinley bill the average on dutiable goods was only 50.06 per cent. at the highest, in 1894.

Mr. Evans' averages are figured on the basis of quantities and values of imports for the fiscal year 1896. The average for the current fiscal year will be less than 54.66 per cent., and may be less than for the fiscal year 1894, because so great a quantity of the goods on which rates are highest and have been increased most has been imported in advance under the lower rates of the late law.

The average may reach the figure given, because many of the increased and highest rates are prohibitory, or nearly so, and the actual average will be brought down by the comparatively large importation of goods on which the duties are lowest.

But for the purposes of fair comparison it is proper to figure on the basis of imports under the comparatively low tariff. So far as the actual average may be less than that figured on the basis of imports of 1894 the difference will represent privation caused by the monstrous Dingley rates. It will mean that the people have been forced by the "prosperity" law to wear less woolen clothing and more shoddy and cotton. And so of other articles of necessity and comfort.

As prices advance all along the line the people will begin to see that the new law means prosperity for the mill bosses at their expense. The farmers will begin to see that the duties on their products are a fraud and an insult to their intelligence. Not a few of the tariff beneficiaries themselves who really desire to find foreign markets for their products will see that the Dingley law handicaps them heavily, and that they would be much better off without any protection for themselves if they were relieved of the expense of protecting others who could do without protection as well as they.

In short, all but a few protectees organized as monopoly trusts will see that the protective system is a curse to them. Then will come a tremendous reaction, more sweeping by far than that of 1892, and it will come to stay.

Some of the monopoly protectees expect it, and that is why they grasp at the straw of a permanent tariff commission. They would be delighted to "take the tariff out of politics" just as it is. But they may as well accept the conclusion that it will not be taken out of politics until it is taken entirely out of existence as a machine for protection and that it will be taken out in that way before very long and so quickly that their heads will swim as they never did before.—Chicago Chronicle.

OPINIONS AND POINTERS.

——As to the sugar trust, it didn't need any more prosperity.—Chicago Tribune (Rep.).

——"Prosperity is another name for high tariff," cheerily chirps Mr. Hanna. That is, prosperity for the trusts.—St. Louis Republic.

——The people will let the administration know what they think of the new tariff act when the congressional elections come around.—Kansas City Star.

——When hoodwinked consumers begin to step up and pay higher prices for food, clothing, furniture and carpets as a result of the tariff they will probably omit all but the last two syllables of the Te Deum Laudamus now called for by the republican party.—St. Louis Republic.

——Prosperity? Why, certainly. See how much more the American laborer is to be permitted to pay for the necessities of life. Nowhere else in the world can be found such glorious privileges as those of the citizens of the United States under a high republican protective tariff.—Tammany Times.

——To the man who is hungry, idle and in despair, it seems a mockery to be told that the country is in the enjoyment of unexampled prosperity. When good times come everybody will know it without being told. Does anybody know of anybody who is resisting the coming of prosperity?—Columbus (O.) Press.

——President McKinley was reported as saying at Canton, O., that "the prospect of a good wheat crop means a return to prosperity very soon." This sounds very like flat heresy against the protectionist faith. It is impossible, according to the economic gospel of which Mr. McKinley has been the great evangel, that a good wheat crop should bring prosperity. Prosperity can only be the child of protection.—N. Y. World.

——While all the people, with the exception of a few wealthy Americans who can afford to go abroad for the purchase of their wardrobes, etc., are compelled to pay tariff duties on all foreign articles they purchase, the rich, who can best afford to pay the duties, and who should pay the largest proportion of them, have, as a rule, paid no tribute to the government. The new tariff stops this genteel smuggling.—Philadelphia Times.

GOOD TIMES AND WHEAT.

At Variance with the Logic of Tariff Makers.

People may differ as to the relation the passage of the Dingley tariff bill may have to the evident indications of the revival of business and the return of prosperity, but no one has a doubt that wheat is the most important element among the many that are bringing about a brightened outlook and preparing the way for "good times." The settlement of the tariff agitation for at least four years will give the markets an opportunity to adjust themselves to stable conditions—a thing most desirable in the business world. But this stability is largely a negative factor, while the big crop in the United States, and especially the big crop of wheat, is a positive factor that is making its influence felt more strongly every day. A record crop of wheat in this country, coupled with short crops in most of the other grain-producing countries of the world, is a conjunction of circumstances that cannot fail to be advantageous to American farmers. While the shortage in Russia, the Argentine Republic, Australia, India and other countries is now said to amount to about one-tenth of the world's crop, the United States wheat growers, who fortunately overplanted their probable market by about 75,000,000 bushels, will profit greatly by this extra demand. The department of agriculture estimates the total wheat crop of the United States this year at 460,000,000 bushels, or 32,000,000 bushels in excess of that of last year. A big surplus wheat crop and an advancing price is the condition that is now making glad the American farmer from the Alleghenies to the Pacific coast.

Throughout the grain belt of the United States the crop of wheat is not only the largest since 1891, but is now safe, while the European crop, on the contrary, is the smallest since 1891. Expert statisticians estimate that the exportable surplus in the United States this year is 185,000,000 bushels, as compared with 145,000,000 bushels last year, a balance of 40,000,000 bushels over last year to aid in bringing good times. Compared with the millions of dollars the wheat crop will bring to America this year, the riches thus far taken from the Klondyke miners are insignificant. Kansas, Texas, Nebraska and Colorado and the west generally are already beginning to feel the good results of a most satisfactory year in agriculture. Nebraska is said to have paid off from $25,000,000 to $30,000,000 of its mortgage indebtedness owing to the good crops and prices of last year and this year. Kansas is also paying off its mortgages, and the moving of the great grain crop is giving more employment and profits to the railroads, to merchants and all classes of business. Doubtless Mr. Dingley will look upon the big wheat crop in the United States as an indication that Providence is on the side of protection. In fact, most high protection papers are already pointing to the undoubted improvement of business conditions as a result of the new tariff law. The coincidence of big crops and foreign demand for our cereals with the enactment of a tariff whose average duty rate as compared with that of the Wilson law is as 54.66 to 40.10 is at least fortunate for the country, even though it is unfortunate for the logic of tariff-makers who claim that all blessings flow from protection.—Chicago Record (Ind.).

TARIFF IS ALL

A Policy That Does Not Help the People.

The currency question is not regarded as a serious one by republicans generally. There are some who, like the president, think that the ,federal financial system ought to be doctored: many more who are indifferent on the subject, and not a few who insist that there is no need for any action looking to financial reform. The senate did not think the matter important enough to justify a few hours' extension of the special session, and the president's message recommending the establishment of a commission was not over-courteously received by that body. The administration doubtless has reason to regard itself fortunate in getting a tariff bill passed, for it is to be noted that the president signed the Dingley bill in such haste as to suggest that he was haunted by a fear that if he wasn't quick about fastening executive sanction on it it might get away.

The tariff is, therefore, all that is to be hoped for just now in the way of relief from conditions that involve the concern and activity of the administration. The protectionists say that the tariff is enough; that all good is bound up in the new law, and that the country can now settle down and enjoy the prosperity that is sure to follow the establishment of Dingleyism as a policy. Thousands of the supporters of the "advance agent" insist that this new law is not what they voted for, but it is quite likely that the protectionist leaders know better than they do what they voted for. It seems to be held that if they didn't vote for it they ought to have done so, and that if they don't like it it is because they don't know what is good for them.

The new tariff is a fact, anyway, and we must make the best of it whether we like it or not. The Cleveland Plain Dealer, lapsing into a satirical mood, suggests that "everybody get rich by paying taxes and then bless the tariff. Don't," it says, "stop to think a minute about the necessity of having money with which to pay the taxes; that is a minor consideration. It is far more important that the trusts should have the privilege of collecting subsidies than that the money question be settled."

This is the truth, ironically speaking. The problem that the great American people should now set about solving is this: How to be happy though taxed like thunder.—Binghamton (N. Y.) Leader.

AGRICULTURAL HINTS

PERMANENT ROADS.

How to Build Them and the Materials to Be Used.

The best road construction requires right material. The three principal things are stones, gravel and clay. Each town where suitable stones are plenty should own one or more stone crushers. Crushed stone forms the very best material for the foundation of a good road. Gravel is next in importance, and clay can be profitably used on sand, and in some instances sand on clay formation.

The lack of proper drainage in the roadbed is the cause of a large part of the poor roads in the country. Good drainage of the roadbed is as important as the use of good material. A substratum constantly gorged with water from hidden springs can never be depended upon to build on and afford a dry and solid road. The first essential is to get rid of the water on the surface and below it.

The right policy of road improvement contemplates more or less permanent improvements upon town and county roads each year. The fault of the district system and the appropriated labor method is that only temporary work is done, so, by the time the annual round of repairs is gone through with, the money appropriated is so far exhausted that an outlay for permanent improvements is not warranted; whereas if a competent commissioner had the roads in charge, certain portions of the worst places which now call for annual repairs should be permanently made over, even if it takes a higher appropriation yearly for a few years. Take, for instance, a stretch of road where the soil is springy, or for any cause the drainage is imperefect. No permanent improvements can be made in such places without proper drainage is effected.

To do this adequately open a ditch four feet or more wide and three and a half to four feet deep in the center of the trave1. Fill this with rough stones, placing the first ones thrown in so as to form an open drain; fill in the stone till within a foot of the top, using the smallest stones for the top; if a crusher is in use the corser of these, which is best, then cover with evergreen boughs or straw and finish with gravel. The idea is shown in Fig. 1. The important thing is that these drains always lead to and end at an open culvert. This is an effectual remedy for "honey pots" or slough holes when the frost is leaving the ground in spring.

The town of Winthrop, in this state, is noted for its good roads. Nearly

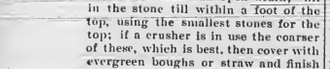

FIG. 2.

CRUSHED STONE ON CLAY.

30 years ago the town discarded the district system, and elected a road commissioner who has held the place to the present time. From almost impassable highways in the spring of the year, that is, over certain portions, these 65 miles of highway have been transformed into smooth and dry roads. Nearly four miles of stone drains have been put in, varying from four or five rods in length to over 100 rods long.

Gravel forms the best material for road surface. Sand has no use in the roadbed except in clay or kindred formation. A clay foundation is one of the worst for good and permanent road building. Clay packs in dry weather but softens up easily during rainfall. Successful work in making a solid and durable roadbed on a clay foundation has been done in this town. The first section was put down two years ago and thus far affords a dry, solid, and apparently durable roadbed. For years the practice had been, annually and as often as rains and large amount of travel rendered the road muddy and uneven, to haul on crushed stone and keep the surface fairly smooth and even. Two years ago the surface was covered with crushed stone three or four inches deep, and thoroughly pressed down with the steam roller. On top of this screened stone and coarse gravel was placed two inches deep and rolled. A finishing coat of ground granite, an inch or more in depth when rolled, gave a hard and even surface. The roadway is some 30 feet from ditch to ditch. Such roads are costly to build, of course, but the universal opinion among men of good judgment in these matters seems to be that such thorough work pays, and is the cheapest in the end. See Fig. 2.

In using the road machine on the country roads the proper thing to do is, first, to run the plow along the outer limit of the gutter or ditch. This gives a straight ditch and loosens up the soil so that two horses will carry the machine about as easily as four will without the plowing. As a rule, the travel of the road should not be disturbed by plow or machine where a fairly good roadbed has previously been secured. Neither should the soil and wash of the ditches be carried up by the machine and placed on the surface. Soil makes soft road. This should always be covered in deeply in some way, and let the hard pan or substratum form the top.

In some places it is necessary to remove the top soil a foot or more in depth and fill in stone. Such places frequently occur where it is not practicable to drain otherwise, and when the soil is retentive and heavy, freezing deeply gives a soft and muddy surface in spring. It is well to cut down squarely just beyond the wheel ruts, a foot or more and let the soil form a shoulder to hold the stone. Form the ditches upon the sides rather shallow so as not to remove the support to the shoulder which holds the stone from sliding from the roadbed. See Fig. 3.

Stones from the fields and useless wall upon the roadside may be used at the bottom, finishing off with small cobbles and crushed stone with a good coat of gravel over all.

It is about impossible to make satisfactory roads on clay without in some way providing drainage, so contrived that the least possible water will remain in the material which forms the travel of the road. Deep side ditches, a narrow roadbed with a high crown, thus making the water level 20 inches to two feet below the travel is one way to form a very fair road out of very poor material. This is improved by a mingling of sand, gravel or "shingle," with the clay to such proportions as the readily available supply will admit—even to one-half. This commingled gravel or other solid substance should extend at least a foot below the surface to bind the clay and withstand heavy travel.—L. F. Ahbott, in Ohio Farmer.

KEEPING UP CALVES.

Indoor Summering After June Has Great Advantages.

The practice of keeping calves housed the first summer of their lives is becoming more and more general each year among progressive dairymen and beef raisers. Those who are endeavoring to find profit in either of those branches of stock raising are finding out that protection from heat, flies and dried pasture is about the cheapest and most effective plan to adopt. No doubt one principal reason why more calves are not housed, says Farmers' Advocate, is that it would involve a certain amount of regular labor in the shape of "chores" which so many object to in the summer season; but unless we take a lively, practical and self-sacrificing interest in our business in these times we cannot hope to reach the goal of greater profits in our business. The wide-awake and enterprising competitors who do things because they should be done and not draw the line at a point where an undertaking adds to or takes from a little of present personal comfort, are the ones that wear the hopeful expression to-day and declare that the times are mending. There is no question in the minds of those who have tried both plans but that indoor summering has great advantages over pasturing after the third week in June. So far as turning the calves out a few weeks on the fresh pasture before the heat and flies become harmful is concerned, there can be no greater disadvantage, provided the calves are not less than six or seven weeks old and the pasture is abundant and of good quality. Perfect liberty at this time, along with fresh grass or clover, skim milk, and a lick of oat chop, oil cake, or the like, will start the youngsters in the way to be profitable feed consumers. So long as these favorable conditions exist in the pasture lot there is no advantage in making changes, but when the time comes that a cool, dark stable and mown clover or oats and tares would give the calves greater comfort, just at that time should such conditions be administered. This is more particularly applicable to calves that are to become beefers, because we want to sell for money some time in the future every pound of grain our feed has made and not allow any of it to be lost after being once beneath the skin. With dairy calves rapid development, when of a muscular character, is very important. A stunted animal is always much less profitable than it would have been had its growth been continuous, because its digestion will be stronger and it will become a larger, better-looking beast, with greater capacity for service.

MARKING THE MILK.

It Enables One to See at a Glance Just When to Skim.

Where the milk is set in shallow pans it is wise to mark each day's milk, as "Tuesday morning," "Tuesday night," etc. In this way one can see at a glance just when to skim, and does not have to stop to reckon up the number of pans used each day. It is also often desired to mark a particular cow's milk, in order to observe its quality. A label and method of attachment is shown in the cut. A strip of pasteboard has its end bent over and wire inserted as shown. The fold is glued down, thus holding the wire. Bend the double wire and hang it over the pan's edge.—N. Y. Tribune.

ORCHARD AND GARDEN.

Two kittens in the garden are equal to a small cyclone.

No top on radish or other plant, no root. At least that is our experience.

Build a structure like a corn crib, with shelves in it, for drying onions.

Apply soap to the bark of trees now and it will lessen the number of borers.

Better than wrapping the ends of whiffletrees, when cultivating the orchard, is to use a gentle horse and have the whiffletrees very short. — Western Plowman.

A GREAT CHERRY ORCHARD.

How an Immense Crop Is Handled on a California Ranch.

Probably there is no better known and certainly there are few larger ranches in the state of California than that owned by the Meek estate. It is situated a little way outside the city of Oakland and it covers a huge tract of land between San Lorenzo and Haywards. It is spread over 3,300 acres of some of the finest fruit-bearing country on the Pacific coast. A thousand acres of this extent is in fruit, for the most part cherries.

The ranch is owned and controlled by the two Meek brothers and their sisters, how skillfully may be known from the fact that in spite of hard times and a depressed market there has never been a year when it has not paid, and paid liberally. A full crop of cherries from this wonderful orchard will bring its owners anywhere from $30,000 to $35,000.

The season's cherry picking goes on at a great rate, and a little army of pickers toil from tree to tree, stripping the branches like a swarm of locusts.

The sight is picturesque, for the pickers come by families and live in the cherry orchard in a small village of tents. At the height of the season nearly 150 pickers are employed. They are of all ages and both sexes, as the work is of such a nature that it can be performed as well by women as by men, as well by a ten-year-old girl as by a grown man. The pickers are, of course, boarded at the expense of the ranch, and besides are paid from 75 cents to a dollar a day, so that a wife and two or three children can make as much money during the few weeks of the picking season as the head of the house can earn during the entire year.

After the picking the cherries are taken over to the packing house and handled at once. The riper cherries are sorted out and put upon local markets, while the more backward are shipped east. The force of packers can dispose of 420 boxes per day. Two thousand boxes go to the car load, and must be hurried to their destination as speedily as possible, for there is no fruit that loses its flavor quicker by overkeeping than the cherry. For the same reason the boxes must be rapidly marketed, for they will not keep many hours in the heat of an eastern summer. There are plenty of difficulties in the way of getting the California cherry upon the dining tables of the eastern consumer, but with ordinary care and a fair season the prices obtainable are not bad. In Chicago a ten-pound box of California cherries can be made to bring a dollar if properly handled, while in New York, though the eastern local market comes into competition, the same quality will sometimes sell for 12 cents a pound.—San Francisco Wave.

"THREAD TOOTH."

Dental Trouble the Result of Using the Teeth in Place of Scissors.

The dentist looked at the incisor about which complaint had been made and nodded significantly.

"I see," he said. "Thread tooth."

The words conveyed but little intelligence to his hearer, and, failing to comprehend their significance after a few moments' reflection, she asked what he meant by it.

"You do a great deal of sewing, don't you?" he said.

"Yes," she replied in a bewildered way; "but I don't see—"

"And you bite your thread instead of cutting it, don't you?" interrupted the doctor.

"I don't know—"

"Well, I know. Of course you do. Nothing else could have made this tooth look as it does. This biting of thread is the most pernicious thing in its effect on the teeth that a woman can do. It is surprising how many of them have unconsciously fallen into the habit. It would require only an extra second to take up the scissors and clip the thread, but the woman who sews lifts the garment to her mouth and with those sharp teeth severs the thread, thereby gaining a fraction of a minute, perhaps, but at the same time literally sawing the enamel off her teeth. Gnawing thread once or twice a day cannot possibly be harmful, you argue. Probably not. But when you bite it a score or more times a day and repeat that every day in the year the effect is bound to be seen at last in what I call the 'thread tooth.'

"If it was only the silk and fine cotton that women bite it wouldn't be so bad. But you don't stop at anything. Why, the other day I was in a house where a woman was sewing buttons on a child's shoe. The thread she was using was a little less than a rope in thickness, but she bit it off just the same. Before I went away she said she would be around to see me professionally in a few days, as her teeth had been troubling her. I asked her which one needed being attended to. She pointed out the one that served as scissors, of course. I can't tell a woman's age by looking at her teeth, but I do know whether she does much sewing or not."—Chicago Tribune.

Like Prize Fighting.

Mrs. Maloney—Say, Mike, what's this arbitration stuff I read about in the papers?

Mr. Maloney—I dunno exactly, but I think it's something like prize fighting. They take it out in talkiug.—Indianapolis Journal.

He Was Probably Sitting in It.

"Why do you have a plush chair on your piazza in hot weather, Miss Julia?"

"We have to have it. We always offer it to men whom we don't care to have stay all evening."—Chicago Record.

Another Injustice.

"Where's your brother got to lately, Liza?"

"E got ten days for knocking a pleeceman down."

"Wot! Ten days for one pleece man?"—Pick-Me-Up.

AROUSED HIS CURIOSITY.

She Had Never Heard of the Cathay But It Must Be Good.

"No," remarked the young man who is very much given to interspersing his conversation with quotations, "I shall not go away for the summer.

"That is too bad," exclaimed the young woman in the bicycle suit, sympathetically.

"Not at all. This thing of sitting around on piazzas and doing nothing except wishing that there was some other way of killing time faster is not at all to my taste. As a matter of fact, it isn't any warmer in the city than it is elsewhere, and there is always something going on. I like the bustle and the hurry and the hum."

"But you must have rest, you know. You will wear yourself out if you don't."

"Oh, well," he went on, with that comethat-may manner which can usually be relied on to impress a very young woman, "it is better to wear out than rust out."

"But there is no need of doing either, is there?" she inquired, apprehensively.

"Perhaps not. But it is my disposition. My motto is: 'Better 20 years of Europe than a cycle of Cathay.'"

"Why, Arthur. How suddenly you change the subject."

"I wasn't aware that I had changed the subject."

"Why, yes. You said: 'Better 20 years of Europe than a cycle of Cathay.'"

"Aren't you familiar with that?"

"No," she reluctantly confessed; "I believe you must use it up."

"Oh, no; that is mine."

"Well, anyhow, I'd like to see one."

"One what?"

"A Cathay. I never heard of it, but it must be a very fine make of cycle to cost as much as a trip to Europe."—Washington Star.

FOR EXCHANGING THINGS.

A Mania That Affects All a Woman's Transactions.

She sat down and slowly drew off the black chiffon boa which she wore.

"What a pretty—a—aw—constrictor that is," said the man, toying with its ruffiness.

The girl laughed. "Well, you came pretty near it; you got as far as its last name. It is a pretty one, isn't it? I bought a white one first, and then I decided I needed a gray one much more, so I exchanged it. You know my whole wardrobe is gray, and the gray boa looked perfectly dear with it and—"

"Gray? It's black," interrupted the man, dangling the thing before his eyes.

"Of course it is," she replied; "I exchanged it again. You see, I decided that the gray one would soil easily, and, beside, Margaret has a gray one, and I can—that's the nice thing about Messinger & Slinger's store, you can exchange everything, they're so accommodating. Do you know—" she continued, her mouth and eyes perked up in an expression of mystery.

"No," he interposed, "I understand nothing of women's business methods; they're too complicated for my feeble brain."

"I was going to say," she continued, unruffled, "that if I ever have to marry I'm going to get my husband at Messinger & Slinger's, so that I can take him back if he doesn't suit."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

A Widow's Way.

He—They say that wedding rings are going out of fashion.

She—Oh, I don't care. If you wish to dispense with the ring, dear, it will make no difference to me. But why didn't you give me some warning of what you were about to say? This is so sudden."

An Abominable Legacy.

A tendency to rheumatism is undoubtedly inherited. Unlike many other legacies, it remains in the family. The most effectual means of checking this tendency, or of removing incipient rheumatism, whether preexistent in the blood or not, is to resort to Hostetter's Stomach Bitters as soon as the premonitory twinges are felt. Nullifying the influences of cold, exposure and fatigue, the Bitters not only fortifies the system against their hurtful consequences, but subjugates malaria, liver and kidney complaint, dyspepsia and nerve disquietude.

Misled by the Papers.

"New, Henry," said the dear old lady. "I do hope you will never play baseball."

"Why not, grandma?" asked Henry, with natural surprise.

"Because it is so very dangerous."

"Dangerous! Why, grandma, it isn't any more dangerous than any other game."

"It is exceedingly dangerous," said the old lady, in a tone of deep conviction.

"But, grandma, you never saw a game, and don't know anything about it."

"Perhaps I don't, but I know it is highly dangerous. Almost every day the papers tell about men who have died on the bases."—Baltimore American.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXII. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 18, 1897. NO. 43.

It looks very much like an effort if being made to retire Secretary Sherman, although the old man is not willing to quit public life.

KENTUCKY is claiming a small Klondyke. It is located in Hardin county. Considerable excitement has been occasioned by the discovery of gold in that county.

HON. W. H. LYONS, of Newport, went to Louisville for the purpose of giving Gov. Bradley a roast, but he was captured and muzzled before he could get in his work.

THE anti-Bradleyites had control of the Louisville convention, and they would have refused to endorse the Republican administration of State affairs had they not been afraid of the hereafter.

THAT favorite sentence, "our gallant Governor, W. O. Bradley," was very adroitly omitted from the resolutions adopted by the Louisville Republican convention; but notwithstanding this, the Governor received more generous treatment at its hands than he expected.

"THE Simon pure Democrats who never thirst for office like Violette, Breckinridge, Martin and others are nevertheless the only kind of Democrats that suffer their names to go under the Republican chicken coop."—Owen News.

The News said something when it uttered the above.

OCCASIONALLY the political lightning strikes some fellow unexpectedly. Such was the case at the Senatorial convention at Williamstown, last week, when W. T. Voiers, a merchant, of Butler, Pendleton county, was nominated on the one hundred and forty-third ballot. Bracken, Grant and Pendleton each had a candidate before the convention, and a deadlock resulted, it being impossible for either to capture any of his opponents, delegates. The convention reaffirmed the Chicago platform and indorsed W. J. Bryan for President in 1900.

"THE civil service law was placed on the statute books by the Republican party, which has always sustained it, and we renew our repeated declaration that it shall be thoroughly and honestly enforced and extended wherever practicable" —Republican National Platform, 1896.

"We are opposed to [illegible] civil service that builds up an official class with practically a life tenure in almost all branches of the public service, and we demand that the civil service law be modified so as to limit the terms of service to four years, with the privilege of reappointment or promotion, subject to such restrictions as will secure competent officials and to every section of the country its proper proportion of them."—Kentucky Republican platform, 1897.

The Republicans are reversing themselves as rapidly as possible on the civil service question. They have no regard whatever for the declaration of their national platform of last year. The offices are now in sight, and they want them, and the law which they were proud of in their national convention has become a thorn in the flesh. They have awakened to a proper conception of the evils of the law.

Resolved, By the Republican party, in convention assembled, That we reaffirm the principles of the Republican party as set forth in the platform adopted by it at St. Louis in 1896.

That we indorse the Republican national and State administration, and especially commend the action of our present State officials in their efforts to suppress mob violence and to preserve the financial credit of the State.

We commend the action of the representatives of the Republican party in the passage of a tariff bill which will raise revenue sufficient to support the government, prevent the issue of interest-bearing bonds, protect American labor and maintain the national credit.

We are opposed to a system of civil service that builds up an official class with practically a life tenure in almost all branches of the public service, and we demand that the civil service law be modified so as to limit the terms of service to four years, with the privilege of reappointment or promotion, subject to such restrictions as will secure competent officials and to every section of the country its proper proportion of them.

We heartily sympathize with the struggling people of Cuba in their efforts to secure liberty and independence.

That we recommend to the people the adoption of the constitutional amendment submitted by the last Legislature, allowing all cities and towns the privilege of regulating under legislative supervision the method of levying the taxes they impose on themselves for city and town expenses.

We favor the passage of a law that will protect the laborers of Kentucky from the competition of convict labor, and, if necessary to accomplish said result, in amendment to the constitution permitting such legislation.

[Owen News]

Last Sunday a suspicious party left Owenton, composed of F. H. Brown, A. Wolf, ol. J. B. Allen and a representative of one of the county and daily papers. No sooner had they gone than the rumor was circulated that gold had been found in paying quantities on one of the branches of Two Mile, near Sparta by Steve Gause and others who have been prospecting there for some time. Mr. Brown, who is an old gold hunter, unfolded the plan of operation if future developments materialized. Mr. A. Wood, who came near going to Klondyke when the first announcement came, is in hearty accord with Mr. Brown, and others, will be immediately interested and a company organized to push the 'diggins' if there is a probability of the thing paying. Undoubtedly quartz rock has been found by Mr. Gause and those exploring the Baker farm, but are unable at this time to tell about the probability of it paying.

THE Republican papers in Holman's old district are very quiet since the election there on the 10th inst.

GOV. BRADLEY does not endorse the State Administration up to date, or he would not have fired so many of his appointees.

DR. SCOTT, who Gov. Bradley fired out of the position of superintendent of the Eastern Kentucky Lunatic Asylum, a few days ago, has written the Governor a very insulting letter. They are brother-in-laws, and the Doctor was appointed by Bradley to the position of which he relieved him.

THE Capital says the Republican State convention didn't have the nerve to repudiate Bradly or indorse McKinley. The Capital is Governor Bradley's mouth-piece. It looks like the Republican party is in the middle of a very bad fix in Kentucky, and the Capital is adding fuel to the fire.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

I am a near neighbor of Hobo, and neither of us live in Kalamazoo. We are both plain citizens of the old rock-ribbed county of Boone—Democratic, of course—both good men and loyal Democrats. I say this much for Hobo in order to say as much for myself. He has political aspirations, and so have I. We are this much alike, at least.

"What did Hobo mean by that letter?" many have asked me, so I will tell you for you will ask also. I don't know. Was he after Judge Botts? I think not. If he was he did not strike a soft place. You can hardly blame a good Democrat for protesting against Col. Berry and his bribing lieutenants. You have heard the old saying that "a dog that carries a bone will pick a bone," so I am inclined to believe that a man who would offer a bribe would accept one. All good Democrats ought to protest against such low practices. However, a good Democrat is loyal to his party and its principles.

If Hobo wanted to find fault with Mr. Botts, why did not he ask him. If he (Botts) voted for Bryan and Sewall? If he was for free silver at the ratio of 16 to 1? If the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company is anxious for him to represent Boone county at Frankfort? I understand that the railroads in Kentucky boast that they turned the State over to the Republicans because they are favorable to corporate wealth and the gold standard.

Hobo would have done the county a real service had he drawn from Mr. Botts frank and honest answers to the above questions.

Hobo takes up the big Doctor and pats him on the head, as much as to say: "Nice little fellow—did you really write that letter?" Being satisfied with the Doctor's signature, says, "you must not fight McKinley or old Hengland," but come closer home and tell us what kind of a boy you have been. You shall run, of course you shall, and that dreadful old committee must not handicap you. I am for you." Wonder what Hobo means?

Hobo says Mr. Rice is handicapped, but that his democracy is alright. I wonder what's the matter with B. L? Who knows?

Hobo warns us against the wily Reuben Conner, whom he thinks is alright, and so do we. Wonder why he was so kind in warning us? Reuben evidently smels a rat, for in the next issue of the RECORDER he tells the people why they should be afraid of him, and we all understand Mr. Conner now. He says the people of Kentucky have to have a craze on some subject. May be Mr. Conner got this idea from the gold standard people. They said free silver was a craze and that it would soon blow over; but free silver is blowing over like Mr. Bryan's rock wall, which was 3 feet high and 5 feet wide. It blew over but was higher than before, and so will be the free turnpike craze of which Mr. Conner speaks in his card. Look out, Uncle Reuben, that you don't get caught under it. Uncle Reuben talks wildly about squandering money on the World's Fair, cutting down salaries, adopting the constitution, building a branch penitentiary, and cutting the per capita of the charitable institutions, etc. "Go slow is good advice," and I repeat it—go slow, Uncle Reuben, with that platform, for nobody but you can stand on it.

I am heartily in favor of going slow, and of strict economy, but there is a big difference between economy that is farsighted and leads to prosperity and economy that is parsimonious and leads to distress. I am aware, as well as is the Senator, that we have fat salaries in Kentucky, attached to offices that are of no use at all. Why cut such salaries? Why not do away with such offices entirely? Why cut the salary of the honest, hard worked official, who is already underpaid, along with the worthless officials. To illustrate: Why reduce the salary of the competent, faithful county superintendent of schools, and continue paying other worthless county officers twice as much as they earn, when as good officers could be had for half the salary.

No doubt but either of the above named honorable gentlemen would faithfully represent us at Frankfort. Senator Conner has honored us as well as himself by faithfully representing the county at Frankfort. So has N. S. Walton. But why don't they help reform the abuses within the old county of Boone. There is work along this line for every good citizen, not only when he wants an office, but all the time. A man who is only a reformer when he wants office is no reformer at all.

What is the use of a man writing a platform, or promising the people to do this, that or the other? The people should take such promises for what they are worth. The representative from this county will be only one among 100. He may or may not have influence among these. He can work and vote for good laws, and oppose bad laws. He can no longer pass a single law for Boone county. There is no more local legislation. So what we should be most concerned about is the man himself. He should and must be a Democrat. He must stand on the Chicago platform of 1896, which was good enough for 6,500,000 Democrats who have not bowed the knee or worshipped the golden calf. That platform is good enough for the rock-ribbed Democracy of Boone county. He must be for free silver—16 to 1 all the time, not only when he wants office. We want an origiual free silver man—not a man who sat on the fence until he saw which was the popular side—he won't do to trust. You don't want a drinking or gambling representative. If he drinks he might go out after a drink at the wrong time.

A house in a New York town was struck by lightning seven times in one day last week. This may be called the electrocution of an old proverb.

It is estimated that Japan will import during this year 1,000,000 barrels of our flour. China is also purchasing our wheat in quantities.

It is estimated that the advertising bills of London business men amount to $20,000,000 a year. That accounts for the fact that London is the greatest business place in the world.

Lord Kelvin has devised a plan at Shoreditch, England, by which garbage is consumed by electricity and the resulting gases used for fuel. Science is determined to show that there is no such thing as necessary waste.

A New York woman asked to have her daughter locked up in an insane asylum on the ground that she "is crazy to marry." Fortunately the judge didn't see it that way. With such a precedent established he evidently realized how few of our girls would be at liberty.

The bronze statue of Harriet Beecher Stowe, which will soon be erected in Hartford, Conn., will be 12 feet high, and will represent Mrs. Stowe, seated with a suppliant figure of Uncle Tom stretching forth a pair of brawny arms, from which will hang broken shackles.

A madstone is advertised for sale in a recent issue of a scientific paper. The advertiser offers to prove its efficacy to any prospective purchaser. Whether the advertiser or the purchaser is to undergo a bite from a mad dog in order to prove the merits of the stone is not stated.

The longest tunnel in existence will be the one under Pike's peak, but just so long as railroad companies persist in lighting the lamps before reaching a tunnel they needn't expect it to become particularly attractive or interesting to the younger members of the traveling public, no matter how long it takes to get through.

A new variety of potato has developed by Robert Cornwell, a farmer living in the eastern part of Barton county, Mo. The tubers develop without a growth of "tops," thereby giving no substance to the greatest pest of potato growers, the Colorado potato beetle. If this is authentic, the ordinary ball bearing potato will go out of use.

C. F. Jones, a resident of El Paso, Tex., who rejoices in the pseudonym of "Give-a-dam" Jones, was acquitted of a charge of celebrating the Fourth with firecrackers. The interesting feature of this information is the revelation to the public that El Paso is one of the few places in the country where firecrackers are not allowed on Independence day.

The death of Mrs. Alexander Campbell, at Bethany, W. Va., recently, at the age of 85 years, will remind the public of the remarkable growth of the church founded by her husband. She saw the very beginning of a sect which now numbers 1,000,000 communicants, which once turned the scale in a presidential election, and which is rapidly adding to its membership in many states in the union.

The use of the X-rays in diagnosing disease and injuries has already in the hands of ignorant manipulators caused many disastrous results. No ignorant man, or one not fully acquainted with its powers and use, should attempt to use it. The Roentgen ray is still a profound and unexplained mystery, and not one to be trifled with. Two cases are reported from Paris where serious results followed, one making necessary the amputation of a leg.

A Boston swimmer has attempted to swim across the English channel, but failed by about three miles. The feat is one to test the greatest strength, skill and endurance. It has been accomplished a few times before, notably some years ago by Capt. Henry Webb, but many more have failed than succeeded. Twenty-one miles of the roughest water and the strongest tides lie between the English and French shores, and he is indeed a splendid swimmer who can buffet successfully this waste.

The autopsy of the body of a young lady who died suddenly in an eastern city revealed a myriad of tiny splinters of wood in the throat, esophagus and stomach, which the physicians traced to her habit of chewing toothpicks after luncheon. This calls attention to the very vulgar habit which so many people have of chewing toothpicks upon the street. The toothpick is a useful thing in its place, but there is nothing so transgresses good taste as to appear upon the street with that article in the mouth. The custom has become so common as to attract attention everywhere.

THE MINERS

In the Spring Hill Mines Are Getting Sixty-Nine Cents—They Go Back to Work Thus Further Complicating the Situation.

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 13.—The fact just made public that the men at work in the Spring Hill mine of Dempster, Boyd & Co., were getting 69 cents, has further complicated the strike situation. This rate has been paid since July 16.

There are 90 men at work in this mine, and 200 mine wagons are mined every day. This is dumped directly into the tenders of locomotives on the Pennsylvania railroad.

An effort will be made by the strikers to get the miners out, but the latter say they will continue at work until forced out. The latest movement of the strikers indicate that the miners' leaders have abandoned all hope of drawing the coke region into the strike and have adopted a plan of using the cokers to assist the strikers in a more profitable way.

Committees have been in the coke region all week collecting money and provisions. The headquarters of the district officials of the United Mine Workers in this city are still besieged with piteous appeals for aid from the starving women and children of the starving miners. More than $1,000 worth of provisions have been distributed during the last two days, and the requests for help are away in excess of the means to respond. Around the Bunola mine, and along the Wheeling division of the B. & O. railroad, the suffering seems to be worst. In many homes there seems to be nothing but dry bread to eat, and in some cases not even this.

Arrangements have been made for a big labor meeting in McKeesport Saturday evening, which all the striking miners in the Turtle Creek and Monongahela valleys are expected to attend. The meeting will be in charge of the striking puddlers' committee.

The striking miners, who were former employes of the New York and Cleveland Gas Coal Co., met Wednesday afternoon and formed a permanent organization and appointed a committee from each mine to take charge of the strike at these mines.

Following the organization they attended a meeting at Turtle Creek addressed by Mrs. Jones, of Chicago, at which 3,000 miners and their wives were present from the different sections of the district.

The feature of the meeting was the crowning of Emma Haas with a wreath of daisies by Mrs. Jones, who presented here to the miners as the "Joan of Arc of America." This is the 16-year-old cripple who came into prominence through firing a pistol as the miners marched past her home on their daily visits to the mines. Her father was working in Plum Creek mine and she said she fired the pistol to enthuse her father with the just cause of the strikers. She was brought before the deputies and the pistol was taken from her. She was told if she repeated the performance she would be sent to the reform school. Mrs. Jones said the girl will be sent to school and educated for her future work in life. It is intended to make of her a speaker on economic and industrial topics.

FOR MONEY.

Aged Couple Murdered Near Bellefontaine—Their Daughter the First to Discover the Crime.

BELLEFONTAINE, O., Aug. 12.—One of the most terrible crimes in the history of Logan county was committed in Union township, about three miles southwest of this city. David Derrick and his wife, a wealthy couple, were found murdered at their home.

Henry Hale, a neighbor, related the following story Wednesday morning:

"Mrs. David Watson and daughter, of New Richland, drove to the home of the couple, Mrs. Watson's parents. They found the house locked and detected a terrible stench. They called Hale, ... together they entered.

"Prostrate on the floor lay the lifeless body of Detrick, undressed and covered with bed clothes. The walls about him were covered with blood, as was the floor.

"In the doorway between two bedrooms Mrs. Detrick was found dead."

They had been murdered for their money by some one familiar with the place. They were chloroformed about a year ago and robbed.

Alderman Sentenced for Contempt.

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—Alderman William Mangler was sentenced Wednesday by Judge Dunne to pay a fine of $1,000 and serve 90 days in the county jail for contempt of court. Alderman Mangler, a few weeks ago, publicly stated that he had been approached by a prominent business man with an offer of $2,000 to vote for the General Electric Street railway franchise ordinance. On being summoned by the grand jury to testify to the name of the alleged business man, Alderman Mangler refused, claiming that in telling his story he would incriminate himself. His persistent refusal to testify, although promised immunity for himself, led to the contempt proceedings.

BATTLE OF AGUACATE.

Captain General Weyler, in the Fight, Narrowly Escaped Capture.

After the Battle the Captain General Fell Back on Guanabacoa—The Wily General Again Attacked But Refused to Fight—Excitement in Havana.

HAVANA, Aug. 13.—The battle of Aguacate occurred Monday night and Tuesday morning. It was the bloodiest battle that has taken place for several months, and resulted in an overwhelming victory for the patriots. The Spaniards left 200 dead on the field.

There is a strong belief here that Gen. Weyler, who has recently returned to Havana, was in the fight, and the battle was the result of an attempt to capture or kill him.

Weyler left Matanzas with a guard of only 80 men, but he had three strong columns posted on the road over which he was to travel. Gen. Castillo, who had 1,500 men in the vicinity, determined to try and capture the Spanish leader. He whipped the Spaniards in the fighting on Monday, but failed to capture Weyler. Tuesday the Spaniards returned in force, and the Cubans, after giving them three or four volleys, broke into detached bands and scattered.

Gen. Molina and Col. Alden, who lead the Spanish, are reported wounded.

After the fight at Aguacate Weyler fell back on Guanabacoa. Five miles from there Gen. Rodriguez attacked Weyler, who now had an escort of 4,000 men, but the Spaniard refused to give battle, though the patriots constantly harrassed his troops. Rodriguez followed Weyler to within sight of Guanabacoa.

There is great excitement in Havana over Weyler's failure to check the patriots.

The patriots are keeping their word and making things lively for the Spaniards. A report of another big fight near Sagua la Grande has reached the capital. The Cubans attacked the town and burned a portion of it.

BIG REWARD

Brings Many Detectives to the Scene of the Detrick Double Murder. A Large Funeral Thursday.

BELLEFONTAINE, O., Aug. 13.—The shocking and revolting Detrick double murder is still the talk of the town and excitement runs at fever heat, growing as each minute goes by. Thursday the bodies of the murdered couple were buried in the Spring Hills cemetery, the funeral being the largest ever held in this county, as many as 3,000 people being estimated to have attended.

It is now known that two gold watches, a revolver and a large tin box, containing the money hoarded by Detrick, was all that was taken. The box was found Thursday morning near a brush heap a short distance west of the house. It was entirely rifled. The exact amount of money the box contained is not known, but it is known that Detrick had hoarded up several thousand dollars.

Ex-County Sheriff John Sullivan Wednesday night arrested Lew Dearwester on suspicion. Dearwester once worked at the Detrick home. ... that Detrick had money hidden at his house. When taken to jail a $20 gold piece and some silver was found on his person. During the day Dearwester spent a $20 gold piece, and as five $20 gold pieces are known to have been in the hoarded money, suspicion points strongly toward Dearwester. Although the suspected murderer could give no explanation as to where he obtained the money, he was released. He has not been seen since he was released and will probably be rearrested if found.

Since the $1,000 reward was offered Wednesday night by Samuel Detrick, a brother of the murdered man, and the $1,000 reward offered by the board of county commissioners for the capture and conviction of the guilty parties, detectives have been flocking here, nine already being known to be in the city. Richards of Cincinnati, Wolf of Cleveland, Norris of Springfield and Fisher, of Indianapolis, being among them. Chief of Police F. M. Bell, of Lima, was here all Wednesday night with bloodhounds at the scene. He returned with the dogs Thursday morning, they failing to catch a trail, the crowd on the grounds having made it impossible for the dogs to find the scent.

Thursday Mrs. Wallace, a daughter of the dead people, made a sensational statement to the effect that she hoped that the work of unraveling the mystery would not be prosecuted, as she knew that the blow would "fall close." Since this statement suspicion rests on a relative of the dead couple. Detective Witte, of Cincinnati, is here and and is making an earnest endeavor to capture the large reward offered.

BELLEFONTAINE, O., Aug. 13.—About 10:30 Thursday night Tony Ford, of Mt. Victory, was arrested by a Cleveland detective and Officer Kernan, after Ford had been quizzed about an hour by the detective. The officers refused to talk, but it is believed Ford knows something about Deerwester. Everything quiet at midnight.

KENTON, O., Aug. 13.—Col. Knert, of the Second regiment, O. N. G., was ordered to Bellefontaine Thursday evening to inspect the situation regarding the probabilities of military being needed on account of the Detrick double murder excitement there. As yet no orders for the militia to report for duty have been received.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Col., Aug. 13.—One of the largest deals in mining property in the Cripple Creek district was closed in this city. ANARCHISTS

To Be Excluded From the United States—Immigration Bureau Issues Instructions in Regard to the Matter.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—Commissioner Powderly, of the immigration bureau, has sent the following letter of instruction to immigration officials at New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Quebec, Canada, relative to the anticipated arrival in this country of Spanish anarchists:

Information has reached this bureau to the effect that one Planas, a leader of the Spanish anarchists, has been expelled from France, being conducted to Havre, from which port it is expected he will sail to the United States. I am also advised that Tarrida Marmot, another Spanish anarchist, is believed to have gone to England and probably is en route to this country. A careful inspection should be made of arriving passengers in order that should any of this class be detected, a careful examination can be had as to their right of admission into the United States under existing laws.

It is stated at the bureau of immigration that there is no law under which persons can be excluded on the ground that they are anarchists. Nor is anarchy anywhere declared to be a crime, so that if Planas and Marmot are refused admission to the country, the refusal must be based solely upon the fact that they come within the general immigration law as to paupers, contract laborers, criminals, etc. This law expressly provides, however, that nothing in this act shall be construed to apply to, or exclude, persons convicted of a political offense, notwithstanding said political offense may be designated as a felony, crime, infamous crime, or misdemeanor, involving moral turpitude, by the laws of the land whence he came or by the court convicting.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—A statement prepared at the bureau of statistics show that the value of goods imported into Canada and again exported into the United States during the past year subject to the 10 per cent discriminating duty under the recent opinion of the attorney general was $1,960,740. In 1894, the latest figures at present obtainable, the value of foreign goods coming into the United States through Canada, under consular seal, was about $6,000,000. The question of the assessment of the 10 per cent discriminating duty on this class of goods is now under consideration.

Surgeon General Weyman has telegraphed the Penusylvania board of health for particulars regarding the death of cattle and poisons reported to have resulted from anthrax germs brought in hides from China to a tannery at Durbis, Pa. The creek which runs by the tannery is said by the newspaper reports to have become infected by the germs. Surgeon General Weyman says that a similar case was reported two years ago from Bosbury, Pa., but upon investigation it was discovered that the death both of men and animals had resulted from fly bites. The flies fed upon the decaying flesh on the hides and communicated the poison to the men and beasts which they bit. The surgeon general thinks it probable that the deaths at Dubois may upon investigation be placed to similar causes.

SOLEMN CEREMONY.

The Funeral of Senor Canovas Del Castillo—The Body Laid to Rest Amid Salvos of Artillery and the Tolling of Bells.

MADRID, Aug. 14.—The funeral of Senor Canovas del Castillo Friday was a most touching and solemn ceremony. All the troops of the garrison lined the route along which the cortege moved, the flags were lowered and the public buildings, embassies, consulates and clubs were heavily draped with crepe. More than a thousand wreaths were deposited in the death chamber. A salvo of artillery announced the starting of the funeral procession, which moved slowly through an enormous crowds, in which all heads were bare and many eyes were weeping.

A peculiarly poignant scene ensued as the Duke of Sotomavor, Marshal Martinez Campos, Marquis Pazo de la Merrsed and the other pallbearers lifted thecoffin, Senora Canovas, in a clear firm tone said:

"I desire that all should know I forgive the assassin. It is the greatest sacrifice I can make; but I make it for the sake of what I know of my husband's great heart."

Throughout the distance between the death chamber and the church, the road was strewn with flowers and laurels.

Senor Sagasta headed the cortege, which was formed of militia, deputies, senators, generals, admirals and deletions representing all the principal public bodies. The wreath of the queen request rested upon the coffin and other floral tributes were carried in special carriages.

All the shops in the city were closed, and a very large proportion of the populace that thronged the streets appeared in mourning garb. The entire garrison marched past the coffin, and the services lasted from 4 until 7:30 p. m.

The remains of Senor Canovas were interred in the family vault in the St. Isidoro cemetery, amid salvos of artillery and the tolling of all the bells of the city.

DON CARLOS

Favors Unflinching Severity in Repressing the Cuban Rebellion,

Followed by Generous Concessions to Local Requirements—The Carlist Movement Increased in Strength and Discipline—Time Comes, Will Fight.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—The correspondent of the Daily Telegraph at Lucerne has had a long interview with Don Carlos on the death of Canovas and Cuban affairs.

Don Carlos declared that the American remonstrances and hints of interference were mere balloons essai, which ought not to be taken seriously. He said that the United States, if these attempts had been resolutely repelled by the Spanish government, would have withdrawn its extravagant pretensions. What was wanted in Cuba, he argued, was unflinching severity in repressing rebellion, followed by generous concessions to local requirements and aspirations.

In conclusion Don Carlos declared:

"The Carlist movement in Spain has greatly increased in strength and discipline during the last decade. I am in touch with every branch of it. There will be no more futile risings or useless bloodshedding, but when the time is ripe every one will be ready to fight to the death for the throne."

MADRID, Aug. 16.—The political horizon is menacing. Senor Robledo has publicly declared in favor of the retention of Capt. Gen. Weyler and against any reconciliation with the dissident conservatives.

It is expected that this will upset the plans of the conservative party and of the court, and will compel the queen regent to summon the liberals.

A PRISONER

Slashes Five Policemen With a Razor and Escapes By Jumping From a Window—Subsequently Wounded and Captured.

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 16.—James Elbert arrested as a suspicious character and supposed to be an anarchist, created big excitement Sunday morning at the police station by slashing five policemen with a razor. One of the officers, George McIntyre, was horribly cut on the face, one wound extending from the ear to the throat, taking part of the ear. His condition is serious. The others, Geo. Cole, Jas. McEvoy, W. E. Coreless, and Wm. Kenney are badly cut, but not seriously. Elbert, after cutting his way through a guard of 15 policemen, made his escape from the station by jumping 50 feet from a rear window, badly pursued by officers, while blood streamed from their wounds. After a chase of several squares, Officer Coreless finally fired his revolver, the bullet taking effect in Elbert's right arm and he was then captured. The man fought desperately and had to be clubbed into insensibility before he could be taken back to the station, Elbert now lies in the jail hospital in a precarious condition. Elbert is an Austrian, who had been working at the Armstrong cork factory until lately, when he was discharged on account of his ... habits. Suspicious ways. He has since been threatening Mr. Armstrong's life, and was arrested because he insisted on hanging around the factory after being repeatedly warned off the premises.

PROBABLE LYNCHING.

A Mob After the Assailant of Mrs. and Miss Heathcock.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Aug. 16.—Will Phillips, the man who recently criminally assaulted Miss Sallie Jones, daughter of a wealthy Georgia planter residing near this city and who was arrested in Arkansas, was taken to jail at Lafayette, Walker county, Ga., Sunday where the crime was committed. A mob had been organized to lynch Phillips as soon as Miss Jones identified him, but her father prevailed on them to let him go to trial. Posses are in pursuit of the assailant of Mrs. and Miss Heathcock, and every road and avenue to Chickamauga Park is being guarded by armed men. If caught the man will never reach the jail, as more than a hundred men have sworn he shall die at once. Miss Heathcock and her mother have both recovered consciousness and have given an ample description of their assailant. A large reward has been offered for the man. The assaults on Miss Jones and the Heathcocks occurred within a mile of each other.

A Father's Terrible Deed.

OMAHA, Neb., Aug. 16.—A special to the Bee from Greely, Neb., says: Sunday morning John D. Maw, a farmer living a few miles from here, attacked his married daughter, Mary J. Hughes, with a hammer. He crushed in her skull, inflicting fatal injuries. He drove the family from the house and set fire to it and then fired the wheat stacks and barns. Maw, who is 60 years old, has been mentally unbalanced for years, but was thought harmless. He is in jail.

Manuel Planas Not an Anarchist.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—Cubans in this city say that Manuel Planas, who, on orders issued by Commissioner of Immigration Powderly, is to be held for investigation at the port of arrival, is not an anarchist leader. He is, they say, a well-known pharmacist of Bayamo, Cuba, who was deported by the Spanish officials as an alleged political suspect.

Beat the Record.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—Thomas Flanagan, a brother of James Flannagan, the champion hammer-thrower, threw the 12-pound hammer 163 feet and 4 inches at the Catholic club games at Jersey City Heights Sunday. The largest authentic throw of this missile previously made was 149 feet at the class games of the University of Pennsylvania last spring.

Potato Blight in Ireland.

DUBLIN, Aug. 16.—A potato blight is ravaging in the counties of Clare and Limerick. Prices have quadrupled and there is only a supply for two months.

TROOPS ROUTED.

Decisive Battle Between Spaniards and Insurgents—Spanish Loss in Officers and Men Said to Have Been Heavy.

HAVANA, Aug. 12.—Official information has reached Havana of a decisive battle between the Spanish troops and patriot forces in Matanzas. The Spanish troops were routed after a hard battle with heavy losses.

This news caused a sensation in Havana, as Capt. Gen. Weyler is now in Matanzas, and there is belief that the Spanish troops directly under him were those which suffered defeat.

Gen. Gomez and a large force of patriots were due in Matanzas about this time, and he probably led the Cubans, though this is only surmise.

The Spanish loss in officers and men is said to have been greater than in any recent battle. The Spanish were compelled to give way, leaving many dead on the field.

Much concern is exhibited at the palace. The rapid concentration of Cuban troops upon the Santa Clara border has been noted here, and fears are entertained that the Cubans, flushed with their success in Matanzas, will attempt a demonstration against Havana.

Gen. Gomez himself may have led such an attack, but it is more probable this work will be left to his lieutenant, Maj. Gen. Carillo.

A rumor reached this city that railroad traffic had been stopped on almost all the lines running through Matanzas province.

Excitement was added to by a later report that Gen. Weyler had ordered the Marquis d' Ahumada, the acting governor general, to send as large a force of troops as could be spared to the vicinity of Guines, near the border of Havana and Matanzas provinces. Additional artillery was shipped to Guines.

The present situation of Gen. Weyler is similar to that of Martinez Campos, when he tried in December, 1895, to check the famous raid of Gomez and Maceo, and was compelled to fall back successively at Colon, Jovellanos and Colisco.

CONSUL GENERAL LEE

And Other Foreign Representatives Tender Their Official and Personal Condolence on the Death of Senor Canovas.

HAVANA, Aug. 12.—Consul General Lee, Mr. Gallan, the British consul, and other foreign representatives, called at the palace Wednesday to tender their official and personal condolences to the acting governor general, the Marquis Ahumada, on the death of Senor Canovas.

The afternoon newspapers contain special dispatches from Madrid commenting upon the significance of the friendly messages of President McKinley, Sherman, Gen. Stewart L. Woodford and Hannis Taylor in Spain's hour of sorrow.

The Spanish mail steamer which left Wednesday carried home a thousand sick soldiers and marines.

Capt.-Gen. Weyler entered Havana on horseback with an escort of cavalry at 6 o'clock Wednesday evening. He was received by the authorities on the outskirts, and as he passed through the streets the crowds cheered for Spain and Weyler.

Having arrived at the palace the captain general received a number of deputations and representatives of all classes of society. He was evidently deeply moved by the news of the death of Senor Canovas and said that as soon as he heard of it he started for Havana. He characterized the calamity as an immense national loss, adding:

"I was completely identified with his policy, was sent to Cuba by him and was his personal friend. It has been, perhaps, due to him that the real interests of Cuba have been conserved."

The country is flooded, as the earth has subsided along the banks of the Brahmaputra, causing great damage to the crops. Similar reports are received from many other places.

SISTER OF CHARITY

Arrested Charged With Begging on the Streets of Newark, N. J.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—A Gerry society agent caused the arrest Wednesday of a sister of charity, Maria Rosa, of Newark, N. J., for begging in the street. She was accompanied by 13-year-old Lena McGowan. She had been warned by the agent, but persisted in begging, and he took her and the little girl to the societies rooms. Then the sister was cautioned and released. Shortly afterward the agent saw her begging again and called a policeman, who arrested both her and the girl. The magistrate, before whom she was arraigned, discharged her on her promise to return at once to the institution at Newark, N. J.

YOUNG MEN

Compelled by Society to Keep Up Appearances.

To Do This the Moral Fabric is Destroyed—Happy Will Be He Who Resists Temptation, Lives According to His Means and Pays His Debts.

Dr. Talmage's text last Sunday was: Proverbs vii. 22: "As an ox to the slaughter."

There is nothing in the voice or manner of the butcher to indicate to the ox that there is death ahead. The ox thinks he is going on to a rich pasture field of clover, where all day he will revel in the herbaceous luxuriance; but after a while the men and the boys close in upon him with sticks and stones and shouting, drive him through bars and into a doorway, where he is fastened, and with well-aimed stroke the ax fells him; and so the anticipation of the redolent pasture field is completely disappointed. So many a young has been driven on by temptation to what he thought would be paradisaical enjoyment; but after a while influences with darker hue and swarthier arm close in upon him, and he finds that instead of making an excursion into a garden he has been driven "as an ox to the slaughter."

We are apt to blame young men for being destroyed when we ought to blame the influences that destroy them. Society slaughters a great many young men by the behest, "You must keep up appearances; whatever be your salary, you must dress as well as others, you must give wine and brandy to as many friends, you must smoke as costly cigars, you must give as expensive entertainments and you must live in as fashionable a boarding house. If you haven't the money, borrow. If you can't borrow, make a false entry, or subtract here and there a bill from a bundle of bank bills; you will only have to make the deception a little while; in a few months, or in a year or two, you can make all right. Nobody will be hurt by it, nobody will be the wiser. You yourself will not be damaged." By that awful process a hundred thousand men have been slaughtered for eternity.

Suppose you borrow. There is nothing wrong about borrowing money. There is hardly a man who has not sometimes borrowed money. Vast estates have been built on a borrowed dollar. But there are two kinds of borrowed money—money borrowed for the purpose of starting, or keeping up legitimate enterprise and expense, and money borrowed to get that which you can do without. The first is right, the other is wrong. If you have money enough of your own to buy a coat, however plain, and then you borrow money for a dandy's outfit, you have taken the first revolution of the wheel down grade. Borrow for the necessities; that may be well. Borrow for the luxuries; that tips your prospects over in the wrong direction.

The Bible distinctly says the borrower is the servant of the lender. It is a bad state of things when you have to go down some other street to escape meeting some one whom you owe. If young men knew what is the despotism of being in debt, most of them would keep out of it. What did debt do for Lord Bacon, with a mind towering above the centuries? It induced him to take bribes and convict himself as a criminal before all ages. What did debt do for Walter Scott? Broken-hearted at Abbotsford. Kept him writing until his hand gave out in paralysis, to keep the sheriff away from his pictures and statuary. Better for him if he had minded the maxim which he had chiseled over the fireplace at Abbotsford, "Waste not, want not."

The trouble is, my friends, that people do not understand the ethics of going in debt, and that if you purchase goods with no expectation of paying for them, or go into debts which you can not meet, you steal just so much money. If I go into a grocer's store and buy sugars and coffees and meats with no capacity to pay for them, and no intention of paying for them, I am more dishonest than if I go into the store, and when the grocer's face is turned the other way I fill my pockets with the articles of merchandise and carry off a ham. In the one case I take the merchant's time, and I take the time of his messenger to transfer the goods to my house, while the other case I take none of the time of the merchant and I wait upon myself, and I transfer the goods without any trouble to him. In other words, a sneak-thief is not so bad as a man who contracts debts he never expects to pay.

Yet in all our cities there are families who move every May day to get into proximity to other grocers and meat shops and apothecaries. They owe everybody within half a mile of where they now live, and next May they will move into a distant part of the city, finding a new lot of victims. Meanwhile you, the honest family in the new house, are bothered day by day by the knocking at the door of disappointed bakers, and butchers, and dry goods dealers, and newspaper carriers, and you are asked where your predecessor is. You do not know. It was arranged you should not know. Meanwhile your predecessor has gone to some distant part of the city, and the people who have anything to sell have sent their wagons and stopped there to solicit the "valuable" custom of the new neighbor, and he, the new neighbor, with great complacency and an air of affluence, orders the finest steaks and the highest-priced sugars, and the best of the canned fruits, and perhaps all the newspapers. And the debts will keep on accumulating until he gets his goods on the 30th of next April in the furniture cart.

No wonder that so many of our merchants fail in business. They are swindled into bankruptcy by these wandering Arabs, these nomads of city life. They cheat the grocer out of the green apples which makes them sick, the physician who attends them during their distress, and the undertaker who fits them out for the departure from the neighborhood where they owe everybody when they pay the debt of nature, the only debt they ever do pay.

Now our young men are coming up in this depraved state of commercial ethics, and I am solicitous about them. I want to warn them against being slaughtered on the sharp edges of debt. You want many things you have not, my young friends. You shall have them if you have patience and honesty and industry. Certain lines of conduct always lead out to certain successes. There is a law which controls even those things that seem haphazard. I have been told by those who have observed that it is possible to calculate just how many letters will be sent to the dead-letter office every year through misdirection; that it is possible to calculate just how many letters will be detained for lack of postage stamps through the forgetfulness of the senders, and that it is possible to tell just how many people will fall in the streets by slipping on an orange peel. In other words, there are no accidents. The most insignificant event you ever heard of is the link between two eternities—the eternity of the past and the eternity of the future. Head the right way, young man, and you will come out at the right goal.

Bring me a young man and tell me what his physical health is and what his mental caliber and what his habits, and I will tell you what will be his destiny for this world and his destiny for the world to come, and I will not make five inaccurate prophesies out of the 500. All this makes me solicitous in regard to young men and I want to make them nervous in regard to the contraction of unpayable debts. I give you a paragraph from my own experience. My first settlement as pastor was in a village. My salary was $800 and a parsonage. The amount seemed enormous to me. I said to myself, "What! all this for one year!" I was afraid of getting worldly under so much prosperity. I resolved to invite all the congregation to my house in groups of 25 each. We began, and as they were the best congregation in all the world and we felt nothing was too good for them, we piled all the luxuries on the table. I never completed the undertaking. At the end of six months I was in financial despair. I found that we not only had the surplus of luxuries, but we had a struggle to get the necessities, and I learned that every young man learns in time to save himself, or too late, that you must measure the size of a man's body before you begin to cut the cloth for his coat.

When a young man willfully and of choice, having the comforts of life, goes into the contraction of unpayable debts, he knows not into what he goes. The creditors get after the debtor, the pack of hounds in full cry, and alas! for the reindeer. They jingle his door bell before he gets up in the morning, they jingle his door bell after he has gone to bed at night. They meet him as he comes off his front steps. They send him a postal card, or a letter, in curtest style, telling him to pay up. They attach his goods. They want cash, or a note at 30 days, or a note on demand. They call him a knave. They say he lies. They want him disciplined in the church. They want him turned out of the bank. They come at him from this side, and from that side, and from before, and from behind, and from above, and from beneath, and he is insulted, and gibbeted, and sued, and damned, and sworn at until he gets the nervous dyspepsia, gets neuralgia, gets liver complaint, gets heart disease, gets convulsive disorder, gets consumption. Now he is dead, and you say: "Of course, they will let him alone." Oh, no! Now they are watchful to see whether there are any unnecessary expenses at the obsequies, to see whether there is any useless handle on the casket, to see whether there is any surplus plait on the shroud, to see whether the hearse is costly or cheap, to see whether the flowers sent to the casket have been bought by the family or donated, to see in whose name the deed to the grave is made out. Then they ransack the bereft household, the books, the pictures, the carpets, the chairs, the sofa, the piano, the mattresses, the pillow on which he died. Cursed be debt! For the sake of your own happiness, for the sake of your good morals, for the sake of your immortal soul, for God's sake, young man, as far as possible, keep out of it.

But I think more young men are slaughtered through irreligion. Take away a young man's religion and you make him the prey of evil. We all know that the Bible is the only perfect system of morals. Now, if you want to destroy the young man's morals, take his Bible away. How will you do that? Well, you will caricature his reverence for the Scriptures, you will take all those incidents of the Bible which can be made mirth of—such as Jonah's whale, Samson's foxes, Adam's rib—then you will caricature eccentric Christians, or inconsistent Christians; then you will pass off as your own all those hackneyed arguments against Christianity which are as old as Tom Paine, as old as Voltaire, as old as sin. Now, you have captured his Bible and you have taken his strongest fortress; the way is comparatively clear, and all the gates of his soul are set open in invitation to the sins of earth and the sorrows of death, that they may come in and drive the stake for their encampment.

A steamer 1,500 miles from shore, with broken rudder and lost compass, and hulk leaking 50 gallons to the hour, is better off than a young man when you have robbed him of his Bible. Have you ever noticed how despicably mean it is to take away the world's Bible without proposing a substitute? It is meaner than to come to a sick man and steal his medicine, meaner than to come to a cripple and steal his crutch, meaner than to come to a pauper and steal his biscuit, meaner than to come to a poor man and burn his house down. It is the worst of all larcenies to steal the Bible which has been crutch and medicine and food and eternal home to so many. What a generous and magnanimous business infidelity has gone into! This splitting of lifeboats, and taking away of fire escapes, and extinguishing of lighthouses.

I come out and I say to such people: "What are you doing all this for?" "Oh!" they say, "just for fun." It is such fun to see Christians try to hold on to their Bibles! Many of them have lost loved ones, and have been told that there is a resurrection, and it is such fun to tell them there will be no resurrection! Many of them have believed that Christ came to carry the burdens and to heal the wounds of the world, and it is such fun to tell them they will have to be their own savior! Think of the meanest thing you ever heard of; then go down a thousand feet underneath it, and you will find yourself at the top of a stairs a hundred miles long; then go to the bottom of the stairs and you will find a ladder a thousand miles long; then go to the foot of a ladder and look off a precipice half as far as from here to China, and you will find the headquarters of the meanness that would rob this world of its only comfort in life, its only peace in death, and its only hope for immortality. Slaughter a young man's faith in God, and there is not much more left to slaughter.

Now, what has become of the slaughtered? Well, some of them are in their father's or mother's house, broken down in health, waiting to die; others are in the hospital, others are in the cemetery, or, rather, their bodies are, for their souls have gone on to retribution. Not much prospect for a young who started life with good health, and good education, and a Christian example set him, and opportunity of usefulness, who gathered all his treasures and put them in one box, and then dropped it into the sea.

Now, how is this wholesale slaughter to be stopped? There is not a person who is not interested in that question. The object of my sermon is to put a weapon in each of your hands for your own defense. Wait not for Young Mens Christian associations to protect you, or churches to protect you. Appealing to God for help, take care of yourself.

First, have a room somewhere that you can call your own. Whether it be the back parlor of a fashionable boarding house or a room in the fourth floor of a cheap lodging, I care not. Only have that one room your fortress. Let not the dissipater or unclean step over the threshold. If they come up the long flight of stairs and knock at the door, meet them face to face and kindly yet firmly refuse them admittance. Have a few family portraits on the wall, if you brought them with you from your country home. Have a Bible on the stand. If you can afford it and can play on one, have an instrument of music—harp, or flute, or cornet, or melodeon, or violin, or piano. Every morning before you leave that room, pray. Every night after you come home in that room, pray. Make that room your Gibraltar, your Sebastopol, your Mt. Zion. Let no bad book or newspaper come into that room any more than you would allow a cobra to coil on your table.

Take care of yourself. Nobody else will take care of you. Your help will not come up two, or three, or four flights of stairs; your help will come through the roof, down from Heaven, from that God who in the 6,000 years of the world's history never betrayed a young man who tried to be good and a Christian. Let me say in regard to your adverse worldly circumstances, in passing, that you are on a level now with those who are finally to succeed. Mark my words, young man, and think of it 30 years from now. You will find that those who 30 years from now are the millionaires of this country, who are the orators of the country, who are the poets of the country who are the strong merchants of the country, who are the greatest philanthropists of the country, mightiest in church and state, are this morning on a level with you, not an inch above, and you in straitened circumstances, now.

Herschel earned his living by playing a violin at parties, and in the interstices of the play he would go out and look up at the midnight heavens, the fields of his immortal conquests. George Stephenson rose from being a foreman in a colliery to be the most renowned of the world's engineers. No outfit, no capital to start with! Young man, go down to the library and get some books and read of what wonderful mechanism God gave you in your hand, in your foot, in your eye, in your ear, and then ask your doctor to take you into the dissecting room and illustrate to you what you have read about, and never again commit the blasphemy of saying you have no capital to start with. Equipped! Why, the poorest young man is equipped as only the God of the whole universe could afford to equip him. Then his body—a very poor affair compared with his wonderful soul—oh, that is what makes me so listless. I am not so much anxious about you, young man, because you have so little to do with, as I am anxious about you because you have so much to risk, and lose or gain.

There is no class of persons that so stirs my sympathies as young men in great cities. Not quite enough salary to live on, and all the temptations that come from that deficit. Invited on all hands to drink, and their exhausted nervous system seeming to demand stimulus. Their religion enfeebled by the most of the clerks in the store, and most of the operatives in the factory. The rapids of temptation and death rushing against that young man 40 miles the hour, and he in a frail boat headed up stream, with nothing but a broken oar to work with. Unless Almighty God help them they will go under.

INJUNCTIONS,

Sweeping and Far-Reaching, Figure in the Miners' Strike.

Miners Claim They Are Keeping Within the Law and Have a Right to Assemble in Peace—Mine Owners Assert Assemblages and Marches Are Unlawful.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Aug. 13.—Sweeping and far reaching injunctions now figure in the coal miners' strike in the Pittsburgh district. The developments of Thursday tend to make the situation a strained one, and it appears that a crisis is near at hand.

The strikers have demonstrated that their assemblages, marches and missionary work have materially affected the output of the New York and Cleveland Gas Coal Co., while at the same time public sympathy has been enlisted in their cause.

The sheriff's proclamation, issued two weeks ago, restraining the men from assembling and marching, has been a dead letter, and the marches have been continued daily. No disturbance of any kind has occurred, the officials of the miners contriving through the whole time to keep their men within peaceful bounds. The preliminary injunction issued Thursday by Judges Collier and Stowe, now brings the matter to the county courts for settlement. The case will be heard on Monday morning and the decision is looked forward to with much interest.

The miners and their officials claim that they are keeping within the law and have a right to assemble in peace and demonstrate to the world that they are being wronged by a rate of wages that keep them constantly at the point of starvation; also that they have a right to use their presence and influence among men who are militating against their interests by continuing at work.

The New York and Cleveland Gas Coal Co., on the other hand, assert that the marches and assemblages are unlawful and a menace to their employes, many of whom, they say, are willing to return to work providing the strikers remain away. Looking at the matter from this standpoint the company made its radical move Thursday in the courts to bring about a condition under which the company can operate its mines.

If the strikers continue their marches Friday morning as they now say they will, in defiance of the injunction, capiases will be issued for the offenders on the charge of contempt of court. Should the injunction be enforced the strikers' camp around the Dearmit mines will soon be extinct. The strikers, though excited over the turn of events, are in no wise disheartened.

AT 11:15 p. m. Thursday Sheriff Lowry and his deputies, numbering 100, left Turtle Creek for Plum Creek. The distance they will have to travel will be about 12 miles, and they expect to be on hand before the strikers march on Plum Creek. The sheriff is determined to carry out the order of the court, and says he will surely arrest the leaders as soon as the march begins. If new leaders are substituted they also will be gathered in. While the big majority of the strikers are willing to go to jail unresistingly, there are a few ugly heads who have announced that they will not be taken alive. The minority may be the means of causing strife.

FIRE DEPARTMENT

Can Confiscate Coal in the Event of a Fire, if Necessary.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 13.—Alarmed by the shortage in the coal reserve in the fire department, consequent upon the miners' strike, and the inability of the city to replenish by purchase, Senior Fire Commissioner Davis called upon the law department Thursday for advice as to his rights to confiscate coal in the event of a fire.

"You can not stand by and see the city burn if there is any coal in sight," said Attorney Quackenbush. "I advise you to seize all the coal that can be secured, and never mind the consequences. Those can be dealt with afterwards. If you find it necessary to seize coal under such circumstances, do not hesitate, the city will back you up."

An American Suicides in England.

LONDON, Aug. 13.—At the inquest held over the remains of an American who committed suicide by shooting himself with a revolver at Handworth, after a card party, it developed that the deceased left a number of extraordinary letters, including the following one: This is to certify that I, as a Charles Jacksou, an American citizen, living in Birmingham, have, of my own free will and desire, committed suicide, as I have lived quite long enough." The jury rendered a verdict to the effect that the deceased committed suicide while laboring under insanity.

DEERWESTER,

One of the Suspected Murderers of the Detrick Couple, Cuts His Throat From Ear to Ear on His Wife's Grave.

BELLEFONTAINE, O., Aug. 14.—Tony Ford and Lewis Deerwester are now behind the bars under suspicion of being the murderers of Mr. and Mrs. Detrick.

Human bloodstains have been found on their clothes, with evidence of having been washed.

Bloody shoes and clothing belonging to both men have been found. Deerwester is now believed to have cut his throat in order to hide the bloodstains made by the Detricks' blood.

His self-inflicted wound is not considered to be very serious, although it is five inches long.

It is now alleged that Ford, Deerwester and the latter's brother, George, were seen on the night of the murder acting in a suspicious manner.

A most startling climax to the tragedy of the week came Friday morning.

The almost lifeless body of Lewis Deerwester, who was arrested on suspicion of being the murderer of Mr. and Mrs. Detrick, and who was subsequently released, was found Friday morning lying across the grave of his wife in Blue Jacket cemetery, two miles southwest of town.

Deerwester's throat had been cut from ear to ear.

The greatest excitement since the discovery of the dead and mutilated bodies of the aged couple Wednesday morning was occasioned when this news was brought to town early Friday morning.

Deerwester had worked for the aged couple, and was familiar with their premises and on the best of terms with them. He had been seen with gold money, and this was considered proof against him. He is a poor man and not used to handling gold. Deerwester was in attendance Thursday at the funeral of Mr. and Mrs. Detrick.

In an account book in Deerwester's pocket was found by Sheriff Law the following note:

"Aug. 12.—Dear Friends: You are accusing me of a deed I did not do, and rather than disgrace my people I will take my life. So good by to all dear friends forever. God forgive me for this. I would rather die than be disgraced. I have never harmed nobody. I have no one to live for. All that was near and dear to me are gone. Farewell to all.

LEWIS DEERWESTER."

The book also contained a note and a piece of cedar from his wife's grave.

Miss Kate Taylor, of Blue Jacket Mills, while on her way to Bellefontaine Thursday evening, saw a man on his knees in the cemetery, but thinking it some one waiting to get in the schoolhouse to stay all night, she thought nothing of the matter.

The deed was committed with a large hunter's knife found by the body.

When Tony Ford, of Mt. Victory, was arrested on suspicion late Thursday night by a Cleveland detective a large crowd gathered about the station house and threats of lynching should he prove to be the murderer were indulged in.

Deerwes... ...stricken to the county jail and an effort will be made to get him to confess. Nearly a thousand people are crowded about the jail.

Col. Kuert, of the O. N. G., of Kenton, has been ordered here to inspect the situation and be prepared for a call of the militia.

GEN. WEYLER

Sends His Resignation as Captain General of Cuba to Madrid.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—A dispatch to the Herald from Havana, Cuba, via Key West, says:

I have learned, on what seems to be the best authority, that Capt. Gen. Weyler has sent his resignation to Madrid. This report is generally believed to be true.

There is no doubt that the resignation of Gen. Weyler is due to the assassination of Senor Canovas del Castillo, the premier of Spain, through whose personal wishes Capt. Gen. Weyler was retained in Cuba.

The report of Gen. Weyler's resignation is a cause for satisfaction among Cuban sympathizers and reconcentrados, who, in the advent of another chief of the loyal Spanish troops in Cuba, see only relief from the policy of concentration, which has resulted in such suffering to the pacificos in Cuba.

GOES TO KLONDYKE.

A Swindler Promises If He Strikes Pay-Dirt to Reimburse His Victims.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Aug. 14.—W. B. Wells, a grain dealer at Trafalgar, a small town in Johnson county, took a peculiar method of raising money to go to Alaska. Last Saturday he presented bills of lading to H. L. Kinney at the board of trade and the Acme Milling Co., each calling for 700 bushels of wheat. Upon each bill he drew $500. The wheat did not arrive, and Friday the firms received letters from Wells, confessing that the bills were forgeries, and stating that he had started with the proceeds for the Klondike. He said that if he struck it rich there he would repay them.

A ROYALTY

Of Ten Per Cent. to Be Levied by the Government on Placer Mining.

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 16.—The regulations formulated by the Dominion government covering the collection of a royalty on gold mined in the Yukon, are published in the Official Gazette just issued. They are as follows:

"That upon all gold mined on the claims referred to is the regulation for the government of placer mining along the Yukon river and its tributaries, a royalty of ten per cent shall be levied and collected by officers to be appointed for the purpose, provided that the amount mined and taken from a single claim does not exceed $500 per week, and in case the amount mined and taken from any single claim exceeds $500 per week, there shall be levied and collected a royalty of ten per cent. upon the amount as taken out up to $500, and upon the excess or amount taken from any single claim over $500 per week there shall be levied and collected a royalty of 20 per cent., such royalty to form part of the consolidated revenue and to be accounted for by the officers who collect the same in due course.

"That the times and the manner in which royalty shall be collected and the persons who shall collect the same shall be provided for by the regulations to be made by the gold commissioner, and that the gold commissioner be and is hereby given authority to make such regulations and rules accordingly.

"That default in payment of such royalty, if continued for ten days after notice has been posted upon the claim in respect of which it is demanded, or in the vicinity of such claim by the gold commissioner or his agent, shall be followed by the cancellation of the claim. That any attempt to defraud the crown by withholding any part of the revenue thus provided for by making false statements of the amount taken out, may be punished by cancellation of the claim in respect of which fraud or false statements have been committed or made, and that in respect of facts as to such a fraud or false statement or non-payment of royalty, the decision of the gold commission shall be final."

THE AUTHORITIES

At Bellefontaine Believe That Ford and Deerwester Are the Murderers of the Detrick Couple.

BELLEFONTAINE, O., Aug. 16.—The authorities here are working on the theory that Ford and Deerwester were the murderers of the aged Detrick couple, and every effort is being made to secure a confession from one or both of the men.

Deerwester is rapidly recovering from his self-inflicted wound of Friday.

The investigation of the ... now being conducted by Sheriff Shaw with absolute secrecy. None but the detectives are admitted to the jail. None of the newspaper men who have been besieging the sheriff ever since the arrests have been allowed to interview the prisoners.

Corporal Harry Roof was the guard over Deerwester Friday night. The prisoner, in a talk with Roof, claims to have no recollection whatever of the events Thursday night. Roof says Deerwester's mind seems to be wandering, or else that he is feigning.

A trail has been found leading from the scene of the murder to Brenners's lake, a half-mile distant, but no other traces have been found. Neighbors detected Friday the burning of woolen clothes at the home of Deerwester's sister, but nothing further has been learned.

It is expected that a woman will be arrested for complicity in some way in the Detrick murder. She is suspected of knowing a great deal about the case, and has been mysteriously missing since the investigation began. She and Deerwester have been companions. Just how she is connected with the case is not now known outside the officers.

Some of the older children began to strike the team with a weed they were playing with and started the team, which soon attained a fearful gait. The noise aroused the inhabitants, the most of whom went in pursuit. The older children jumped out before the team got under "full headway," but the twins were too young and were unable to do so. After a hot chase of 14 miles the team was finally overhauled by Mr. Pat Code and stopped, the children jolted and scared almost to death, but otherwise unhurt. After the usual sighs of relief and several sound spankings by the several mothers, Beaver soon regained her usual quiet composure.

This community was suddenly shocked on the 13th inst., by the sad news of the drowning of Hubert Acra, the only child of Charles Acra and wife. While bathing in the river just below town he got beyond his depth and could not swim. His companion attempted, in vain, to save him. After a brief religious service at the house on the 14th conducted by T. L. Utz, the remains were laid to rest in the family burying ground on the headwaters of Middle Creek. The throng of 150 or 200 people that followed to the grave, speaks more strongly than language, of the esteem in which Hubert was held, and of the deep sympathy manifested toward the bereaved father and mother. Greater was the floral display of the ladies of the town and country, than the writer has witnessed before. Hubert would have been 20 years of age next January and had recently graduated in the common school, and expected to enter the school-room this year and prepare himself for a useful life. Let us indulge the hope that Hubert is now a pupil of the "Great Teacher" whose example we should be ever striving to imitate.

Big Bone.

Last Wednesday night there gathered at the hospitable home of Miss Kate Green, at the twilight hour, one of the most pleasant, fun loving and interesting groups of young folks that have assembled themselves together for a royal time at Big Bone. Miss Kate, the fair hostess, had spared no time nor pains to prepare for the entertainment of her welcome guests, and the evening was spent in social conversation, quaint plays and pleasantries till 11 o'clock, when she bade her guests walk into the dining room, where her tasteful hand had prepared for them a tempting repast. The spread itself, sumptuous iu varied services, was elaborately ornamented with colored lights and pretty flowers, presenting a scene of festal loveliness. This feature of the occasion was manifestly enjoyed, after which all repaired to their respective homes.

I feel that to fail to mention the many pretty belles and handsome beaux, who were so fortunate to be present, would be a distinguished dereliction of reportorial duty. The ladies were the Misses Emma, Lizzie and Nellie Cleek, Ethlene Griffith, Katie Moore, Rita DeJarnette, Julia Adams, Jenette Chambers and the Misses India, Alpha and Bessie Hance. The gentlemen were John and George Sleet, Howe Cleek, Joe Noel, John Adams, Alex Conley, John Delhanty, George Burrows, Robt. Chambers and Dr. R. E. Ryle.

The Big Whale at Lawrenceburg Fair.

The big Whale that has been viewed by so many, and was at Chicago during the World's Fair, will be at the Lawrenceburg wharf during the week of the Fair. This will give those who have not seen this great monster a chance to view this leviathan of the deep as well as go to the Fair. No man, woman or child should fail to see it—it is worth going miles to see; this is no fake, but a real, genuine whale, 65 feet long, weighed, when captured, 75 tons, measuring 35 feet around the body, its tongue weighed 3,600 pounds. 25 people can stand in its mouth at one time. See it by all means—it costs you only 15 cents your child, 10 cents.

-:-BEWARE!-:-

For some time it has been the custom for a representative of a local firm to meet you at the depot with a welcome shake of the hand and then lead you to the store he represents, where, after selling you a bill of goods, he asks what else you intend to buy and recommends you to certain other stores which he tells you are RELIABLE.

After you have purchased from one or more of these RELIABLE stores the representative of the local firm calls upon the proprietor of said store and collects a commission on the amount of your purchase as his pay for sending you there to buy. Who pays this commission?

You do; for the reason that it is nscessary for the merchant to advance the price of his goods enough to include the amount he has to pay the "shark" who sends you to him.

We have no agents and pay no commissions and are therefore able to and do undersell those who pay heavy tribute to the "sharks."

One day last week James T. Grant's farm hands were hauling old hay and other light trash and filling washes in the fields. They had a large load of that combustible material on the wagon, when the men discovered a bumblebees' nest, which they concluded they would destroy by burning it. The fire was soon put to work, and in some mysterious way was communicated to the hay and trash on the wagon, which burnt rapidly, and frightened the team, and they started to run off, but were caught by one of the men, while his companion crawled under the wagon and unhitched the team, and the horses escaped, but a good wagon and new hay bed were consumed. Mr. Grant takes a philisophical view of the accident, and says it might have been worse.

The protracted meeting at the Baptist church closed last Sunday night, after having been in progress for three weeks. Dr. Adams preached his last sermon on Wednesday evening when he took his leave of the congregation. Rev. Blyth assisted in the services the remainder of the week. Rev. Utz preaching the closing sermon Sunday evening. During the meeting Mr. and Mrs. B. P. Rice were received by letter; Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Barker were taken under the watch-care of the church, and the following were received by baptism the ordinance being administered at Bellevue last Sunday afternoon: Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Bruce, Mabel Vest, Edith Craven, Joe Wean, Herbert McKim, Dell Roberts, May Cason.

Our Utzinger correspondent tells the following good joke on two fellows whose names he wisely omits. "Two Kentucky gentlemen, hailing from the breezy heights of Woolper, went to Lawrenceburg, a few days before the special Congressional election, and got stranded on Capt. Reif's bar, and in their heroic efforts to extricate themselves they used language and bodily force that caused them to be marched down to the bastile, and when they ascended the prison steps they hauled and delivered a stump speech in the interest of the Democratic nominee for Congress. Among other things they said "if the voters of Holman's old district elect a broken down Methodist preacher it would be a disgrace." At this juncture things began to grow interesting, and it took strong efforts on the part of friends to keep the Kentucky orators out of jail.

F. Riddell was buying some meat from a butcher, one day last week, when he dropped a roll of money composed of one $10 and one $5 bill, which was snapped up by a huugry dog that was watching for scraps of meat that chanced to fall from the butcher's wagon. Riddell saw the dog, as he supposed, swallow the money, when one of his characteristic expressions satisfied the canine it had better flee the impending wrath, and it started up the street at a rapid gait, followed by Riddell who was, by that time considerably excited over the manner in which the $15 had taken legs and was leaving the town. About the time Riddell threw up his hands and shouted, "fare you well, brother Watkins," at the dog as it disappeared in a patch of dog-fennel in a back alley, some one chanced to discover the roll of money lying under the butcher's wagon where the dog dropped it when it discovered its mistake. Riddell was informed of the false accusation he had brought against the dog, and what, for a few minutes was quite a serrious matter, turned out to be a harmless and most amusing incident.

The talk is now of the Harvest Home, and then comes the fair.

UNION, KENTUCKY.

Mr. Lewis Conner, an old and esteemed citizen, died at the residence of his son, O. P. Conner, of the Locust Grove neighborhood, last Friday morning, in his 75th year. He had been in ill health for several years, and was tenderly and lovingly cared for by his children, of whom there are four, William, James M., O. P., and Rev. Chas. C. Conner.

Mr. Conner was born in the neighborhood of Florence, and spent his long and useful life in this county. His wife, who survives him, was the daughter of the late Henry Aylor, and a sister of Mrs. Julia Clore, of Burlington, and Mrs. Edward Stephens, of Erlanger.

For many years Mr. Conner was a leading livestock man of this county, and expended large amounts of money in fine cattle, that class of stock being his favorite. He also bought and sold livestock, of which he handled largely every year, and in all the years he was thus engaged he sustained an enviable reputation for honest dealing with his fellow man, and Lewis Couuer's word in a trade was good as his bond, and in the walks of life his conduct was worthy of emulation.

The remains were put in the vault at this place last Sunday at noon to await final interment, upon the arrival of Rev. C. C. Conner from the Nothwest.

Last Friday afternoon, Hubert, the 19 year old son of Charles H. Acra, who keeps the toll gate near Bellevue, and Kirby Clore, of Bellvue, were bathing in the river, when young Acra got beyond his depth and was drowned.

Just before the young man went down he was noticed standing in the water about waist deep, and it is supposed that he stepped off of a rock into the deep water, where he was seized with cramps, as he could swim, although not an expert. He called for help and his companion, who is not a good swimmer, went to his assistance, when he grabbed him and they both went down together, and young Clore came near drowning before he could release himself from his unfortunate companion. Two fishermen who were tracing a trot line near by saw the boys struggling in the water but could not get to them in time to render any assistance.

The body of young Acra remained in the water about half an hour before it was recovered.

Death under any circumstances, and at any age is sad, but especially so when it comes to a young man just entering upon a life of usefulness, and who was the only child, and the pride of the father and mother, who saw unfolding to him a bright future.

Hubert Acra was a bright young man, of gentlemanly demeanor, and enjoyed the confidence of all his associates and acquaintances. The bereaved parents have the sympathy of all in their great affliction.

The remains of the young man were interred in the family cemetery on the Lawrence Pope homestead, last Saturday at 2 o'clock.

THROUGH THE SHADOWS.

re's no sun to cheer the valley
Where death's chilling waters flow;
And of coast and clime beyond it
Those on this side do not know.

Birds sing not above those waters;
There mysterious ravens chant.
Giving earth nor name nor inkling
Of the land beyond their haunt.

Nothing grows by that cold river;
And grew lily there or thorn,
Would it hint of what is yonder—
Boon or ban, or murk or morn?

Yet must all go through that darkness,
Lighted by no cheering beam,
Through the waters and the shadows
That o'erhang the chilling stream.

For no bridge o'erspans that river,
Nor can mortals sail the wave;
Nor can science guide the farer,
Or enhearten to be brave.

Nor can reason give the pilgrim
Boatman, compass or a bark;
Yet by faith he gains the daring
For the torrent and the dark.

Faith inspirits him with visions
Of the Heaven of his quest,
Of a land beyond the shadows,
Of the country of the blest.

And right onward to that Heaven,
Onward through the chilling stream,
Gladly, calmly, fares the pilgrim,
Courageed by faith's cheering beam;

Onward to eternal splendors
Where majestic mountains rise
In the radiance of the sunshine
Of the country of the skies.

Fragrant roses bloom forever
In the paradise above,
And the lilies to the zephyrs
Breathe the sweetness of their love.

In the forest aisles of Heaven
Birds and brooks and zephyrs sing
Of the beauties and the glories
Of the country of the King;

And the music of the numbers
Of the minstrelsy on high
Shall intensify and sweeten
Through the ages of the sky.

JACK AND JILL.

BY J. A. FLYNN.

"IT'S such a dreffal pity," said little Babs, "for Auntie Jill to be sowwy and cwy!"

"Well, she needn't cry unless she likes," observed Rex, who understood things, being nine.

Auntie Jill, who heard them from the dark corner behind the curtain, stole away to her bedroom, because she hadn't half done her crying. Then the plot began.

"Girls and ladies," protested Babs, "have to cwy sometimes, 'cause they do. If Daddy doesn't cut off my hair and make me gwow up a man I shall cwy when I'm a lady."

"It isn't any good," objected wise Rex. "When I'm a man I shall be a hunter, and kill Indians and lions, and sha'n't cry for anything."

Babs shook her golden head. "I should cwy if they hurted you, Wex. Wouldn't you cwy if a big lion catched me and eated me all up?"

Rex put one arm protectingly around her, because nine is old and big, you see. "No, Babsy. I should kill the lion; that would be ever so much better. Let's play tibby-cat's a lion, and shoot him with the popgun, shall we?" But tibby-cat bolted to the apple tree, and the rocking horse was broken, and Rex had split the doll playing headsman to her "Lady Jane Grey."

"I wis' Auntie Jill would come downstairs an' play suffink," sighed Babs.

"I'd rather Uncle Jack take us fishing, or play ball," said Rex. "Are you sure mamma said he wouldn't ever come here again?"

"Certain sure," assented Babs; "an' he wasn't our Uncle Jack, never any more, mamma said—trufly, Wex."

"He never was our uncle, really," explained the future hunter, "only going to be. But he was real nice, and I don't see what Auntie Jill wanted to go and change him for. It's just like women and girls."

"I'se sure Auntie Jill wouldn't be naughty, ever," said loyal Babs, indignantly.

"Then what is she crying for?"

"I speeks 'cause Uncle Jack—"

"You said he wasn't uncle any more, Babs."

"Well, 'cause Uncle-that-used-to-be-Jack—"

"That isn't right, either, Babs. He's Jack-that-used-to-be-uncle."

"You'se wewwy unkind, Wex," pouted his six-year sister.

"Don't be a goose," replied Rex, loftily.

"Well, I'se sure Uncle Jack has been naughty, 'cause Mammy looked dreffal angwy when she telled me about him. An' Auntie Jill is cwying 'cause—'cause she cwies when you'se naughty and has to be shut in ze cupboard."

"You're a horrid little kid, Babs," said Rex wrathfully, marching away.

"No, I'se not. Don't go away, Wex, pease don't. I'se—I'se so welly miserable." And kind-hearted little Babs threw herself along the rug and sobbed.

"I'll tell you what we'll do," said Rex, after he had soothed her with two kisses, a marble, a "conqueror," and half an apple stolen out of the dining-room. "We'll go and tell Uncle Jack that auntie's crying awful and need better come and say he's sorry—else no one won't love him ever any more."

"Oh, Wex," cried Babs rapturously, "wouldn't it be beaufull An' I would wear my new hat, if you could get it down from ze cupboard, so I would be nice and spectable. I se sure mammy wouldn't mind if we were going to fesh Uncle Jack." So Rex tiptoed on a chair for the hat, and primed the popgun as a protestion against lions and robbers, and they went round by the sweet stuff shop, because they generally went that way with Uncle Jack, and a heavy new penny was hurdening Rex's pocket. Besides, everyone knows that brandy balls are excellent nourishment for travelers of they get lost in the woods. And if they eat them before they get lost, they make sure of them, and don't "sticky" their pockets. Thanks to such prudential measures, the young explorers reached the plank across the ditch in good spirits, and as happy as bold travelers should always be.

The plank was not a long one; but the water was so near Rex's feet when they dangled, and it was such a good opportunity to shoot fish if they should appear, that it took a good while to cross over. Then they had to go the long way round the lane, because the field was full of cows; and, as Babs said: "Cows are dreffal flags, 'cause zey might be bulls." So the autumn afternoon was turning to evening when they reached the fish pond where Uncle Jack ought to be. But no jolly uncle appeared—perhaps his mamma had put him in the cupboard, because he was so naughty and made Auntie Jill cry. Rex and Babs began to feel cold and tired.

"I wis—I wis we had a lot of tea," lamented Babs.

"Perhaps we shall come to a camp," said Rex consolingly, "travelers always do. Then they will give us some buffalo cooked in a pot on three sticks over the fire; and tell us where Uncle Jack is."

So they trudged on, cheerfully, a little farther. But it got so dusk, and the cows looked so large and wild in the fading light that they might almost be real buffaloes—which are very different from play ones, as everybody knows. Bah's shoe stuck in the mud, and couldn't be found, and Rex fell in some stinging nettles, and they both got scratched scrambling through a hedge. So poor little Golden-hair sat down on a bank and cried, and Rex stroked her head, and would have cried too, if crying hadn't been out of the question for a big boy, who was nearly a man, dada said.

Just then Farmer Burton came along with his dog Rover. He found them some apples out of his pocket, and listened attentively whilst they explained matters. Of course, he ought to take them straight home, but—a wicked smile crossed the old man's lips—they had come out to find Uncle Jack, and perhaps it would be a good thing if they found him. He had seen him walking distractedly about in Sleepy Hollow a few minutes ago, and he knew something about lovers' quarrels. Why, when he was courting Dame Margery, 40 years ago, they parted forever once a month! But he didn't tell the youngsters anything about this, only took up Babs on his broad shoulders, and walked along so fast that Rex had to trot to keep up with him.

"Why does you laugh, Misser Burton?" inquired Babs.

"Oh, because you're such a funny little girl to go hunting buffaloes."

"But it was Wex zat was goin' to shoot zem," apologized she.

"Oh, I beg his pardon," said the jovial old farmer. "Perhaps he would like to stop behind and shoot them now?"

But Rex thought they'd better be getting home as it was so late. Buffaloes, he admitted, in his private mind, were not so nice to hunt in the dark.

As they were crossing the hollow, a big gentleman came striding along.

"Here's Uncle Jack!" they both exclaimed at once.

"Why, Babs—Rex!" cried he in amazement. "Whatever—"

"Oh, they've come to look after you, Mr. Jack," said old Burton, solemnly. "They'll tell you all about it. Perhaps you'll see 'em home as it is getting late."

So saying he disappeared over a stile with remarkable agility for his years and size. All the way home he laughed, until Rover thought that he must be going mad, like some ill-balanced dogs in hot weather. All that evening he chuckled to himself, until his dame confided to the hired man that the master had something on his mind for certain; and the hired man thought that "mebbe he'd had an offer for the heifer." But not for many a long day did he tell the story of the hunters.

"Well, you young pickles!" said Jack, who used to be uncle, "what the dickens are you doing here? What the deuce am I to do with you?" he added, under his breath, as he shouldered the girlie.

Babs looked at Rex, and Rex looked at Babs. "We were looking for you," said the hunter at length.

"'Cause we fort—" said the huntress; and then she, too, stopped.

Uncle Jack smiled dismally and kissed them both. "Well?" he inquired.

"We 'spected you'd been naughty," explained Rex.

"To Auntie Jill," added Babs, "'cause she's been cwyin'."

"Awful!" said Rex, solemnly.

"An' we 'spected you'd be solly," pleaded Babs, cuddling up to him.

"Else no one wouldn't love you," put in Rex, emphatically, feeling that his advancing years justified a judicial attitude.

Jack hesitated and a queer lump came up in his throat. Jill was a tiresome little tease. It hadn't been altogether his fault. But Jill cryingi Dear little Jilli "Who told you to come?" said he, looking puzzled.

"Nobody," answered Rex.

"We tolded our own selves," explained Babs.

Of course Jill wouldn't send them; he might have known that. "Why do you think Auntie Jill cried because I'd been naughty?"

"'Cause she cwies when Wex is naughty, an' mamma puts him—"

"Don't be such a donkey, Babs," interrupted Rex, indignantly.

"Well," said Jack, "I suppose I must take you young rascals home, anyhow."

"An' say you's solly," pleaded Golden-hair.

"I should if I were you," counseled Rex, putting his hand in that of Uncle-who-used-to-be, because he was a very nice uncle, and nine isn't so old in the dark. "Men must put up with something from girls and ladies, and be kind to them," he preached, solemnly.

"That's real true. My dada says so."

Jack didn't say much, but he held them very tight and carried Rex as well as Babs in the gloomiest part of the lane, where no one could see.

So it wasn't long before they came to the house, where everyone seemed in trouble except Tibby-cat, who was dozing unconcernedly in front of the fire. Dada, who had just come home, was starting out to look for them; Sarah, the nurse, and Jane, the housemaid, having just returned from a vain search. Cook was blinking over the kitchen fire about "them children" till she let thiags burn, and mamma was sobbing on the sofa in the drawing-room because she was not well enough to get up. Poor Auntie Jill was most wretched of all, because she had cried all her tears away in the afternoon and had none left for the babies.

What a shout of delight went up as they came in through the open door! Dada snatched up his boy and mamma called eagerly for them from the drawing-room, so Jack followed in with Babs half asleep in his arms. Dada and mamma looked nowhere but at the children, whilst Jack and Jill looked everywhere but at each other. Then Rex and Babs laughed and chattered and began to explain matters. "We've fetched Uncle Jack," said Rex, in a matter-of-fact tone, "to see Auntie Jill. And he's going to take us fishing tomorrow afternoon, if you'll let him."

"An' he's goin' to be so welly, welly good," asserted Babs, emphatically, "zat Auntie Jill won't be solly and cwy, not ever any more."

Mamma looked astounded and Auntie Jill found just one tear to come half out of each eye—for it hadn't been all Jack's fault, really, you know. Jack stepped a little nearer to her and half held out one hand and half didn't. "Don't be silly, children; you do not understand," said mamma, reprovingly. But dada smiled one of his quiet smiles, as, taking one little one up on each knee, he sat down on the sofa beside mamma. "I think they do," said he.

Then Jack got very near Jill and took hold of both her hands. "My dear little Jill," said he, rather brokenly. And she put her head on his shoulder and cried and said—but really it isn't fair to tell what she said. Anyhow it must have been satisfactory to Rex and Babs, for those young scamps laughed with glee at the prospect of unlimited fishing, and ball, and swings, and pennies, now that Jack-that-used-to-be-uncle-that-was-to-be was reinstated.—St. Paul's.

TREATMENT OF CONSUMPTION.

Fresh Air the Best Prescription for Weak Lungs.

By those who remember the cruel disappointment and the dashing of hopes which followed the announcement seven years ago that Koch had discovered a cure for consumption, the news of the preparation of another remedy by him will not be hailed with unmixed delight. It is possible that a real remedy for this disease may be found some day, and when it is we may be sure that there will be little delay in its adoption by physicians; but the premature publication of these alleged "cures" is greatly to be regretted because of the misery and heartrending sorrow which their failure causes to thousands of disappointed sufferers.

But while waiting for the discovery of a cure for consumption, we can use one which we have at hand in abundance, and without cost to the patient. Fresh air, fresh air, and more fresh air is the chief prescription for one whose lungs are weak, though fresh air, like any other remedy, is of no service unless it is taken into the body. For this purpose exercise out-of-doors is needed—exercise, often to the point of fatigue, in order to force the breathing, expand the lungs, and fill them with pure air.

It has been stated by a Boston physician that the use of the bicycle has lessened the amount of consumption among women, and if this is so, the explanation is not far to seek. Devotion to the bicycle leads women to exercise in the open air, and more energetically than would be possible for most of them in any other way.

In Denmark the postmen often have very long routes in the country regions, and are obliged to walk or ride many miles a day in all kinds of weather; but undesirable as such positions would seem to be, they are eagerly sought after, and of all men, by consumptives who want to get well. It has been proved that the work is life-saving, for, despite the hardships and the exposure to wind and rain and snow, almost all the invalids who adopt the life become robust and hearty.

Of course, to be effective, open-air exercise must be begun early in the course of the disease, and should always be carried out under the direction of a wise physician, since it must usually be supplemented by the use of tonics and other remedies.

A great many are cured in this way unknown to themselves, for physicians tell us that a large proportion of those who die from other causes are found to present the signs in their lungs of cured consumption, and there is little doubt that the cure has been effected by nature's remedy, of which the patient has unwittingly availed himself.—Youth's Companion.

Another Matter.

Strict devotion to the truth is commendable, but it sometimes leads to curious situations. A young man who was paying court to a young lady was thus addressed by her mother, who was perhaps not the most agreeable person in the world:

"And so you want me for a mother-in-law?"

"Ah-ah, it's n-n-ot exactly that," stammered the young man, "but I don't see how I can marry your daughter without your being my mother-in-law!"—Youth's Companion.

CLOUDS WERE DISPELLED.

Happy Influence of a Gentle Protest and a Square Meal.

"If there is anything I despise and detest," said Mrs. Billtops, "it's melancholy."

Mrs. Billtops is not often so vigorous in speech as this, and when she is Mr. Billtops knows that it is time to brace up. As a matter of fact he takes usually a cheerful view; but when he is depressed, as he is occasionally, he is glum and silent and solemn enough, and he makes everybody around him wretched. The children, sitting at the table, stop talking, the dianer gets cold, and everybody is chilly and miserable except, perhaps, at the last, Mr. Billtops himself, who finds, finally, a sort of melancholy pleasure in the general depression that he has caused.

But Mrs. Billtops has no use for anybody that casts a gloom. She has her own trials, but she never bothers anybody else about them; outwardly, at least, she is cheerful and spirited always, and she can't abide anybody that lets his troubles so far overcome him that he inflicts them on other people, too, and so she says:

"If there is anything I despise it's melancholy."

At that Mr. Billtop takes a brace. He looks up and smiles. It is wonderful with what alacrity the children respond, and Mr. Billtops responds to that, and gloom is dispelled once more by the ever grateful light of cheerfulness. And when Mr. Billtops, as the phrase goes, gets something to eat, he feels himself better still. He remembers what he has often said to himself, that no feeling of depression should ever be accepted as genuine until it has been subjected to the test of a good square meal, and he finds that the present one will not stand that test. In fact, under the combined influences of Mrs. Billtops' energetic protest and the good dianer it is rapidly disappearing, and as the dinner progresses Mr. Billtops takes a still broader and more cheerful view of things, and by the time the meal is finished he is beaming with good nature, perfectly satisfied with the present, and absolutely confident of the future.—N. Y. Sun.

PATIENT OLD AGE.

It Always Finds Friends and Sympathizers.

Truly there are trials belonging to old age which are hard to bear. The loss of faculties is the hardest, writes Mrs. Lynn Linton. So long as one can employ oneself, not asking help from any person—so long as one can read, write, work, knit—what you will in the way of independent occupation, old age has lost one of its worst inflictions.

When blindness and deafness and inability to use the hands, and such bodily weakness as makes movement impossible—when all these have overtaken the old, then the dregs are indeed bitter. And then there is nothing for it but the grand, brave dignity of patience—the noble resignation which accepts the inevitable and makes the best of bad conditions.

Patient old age always finds friends and sympathizers, where the peevish and the grumbler, like camphor atoms, repel all with whom they come in contact. When old age is selfish and repining—thinking only of its past joys or its present pains, the young, to whom patience is a natural virtue, and the shrinking from annoyance is a natural instinct, these young shrink from the poor, soured old creature, whose talk is a threnody and whose daily life is an unwilling martyrdom.

They cannot console, and they feel the jealousy which denies them sympathy and gives them instead an angry kind of reprobation. They suffer in the cold and shadow of a loveless and unsympathetic, a selfish and grasping age. They would give love if they had love to give them; but when they know that the glory of their young days serves as a text for unkindly comments and unsympathetic feeling, then they withdraw, and shrink, and fail to show those sweet attentions which the young love to show the old—if so be those dregs are swallowed patiently and are not flung as so much poison into the fresh faces whose lips are red with the wine as yet sparkling, foaming and unexhausted. —Chicago Journal.

With Advancing Summer.

Some of the newest skirts have trimmed sides and a narrow, plain front; others show the back as well, ornamented.

No matter what anyone may say to the contrary, odd waists of taffeta are still numbered in the wardrobes of women of fashion, and will be this fall.

You can hardly put too much lace on your midsummer gowns, whether they be of silk, cotton or the very fashionable thin woolen goods of a semi-transparent nature, like the revived barege and veilings worn.

There is every prospect of tucks remaining in fashion for the fall, and the revived cashmere gown will be ornamented in this manner. The round, tucked corsage is too becoming to slender figures to allow it to drop, and the dry goods merchant will rejoice at the fashion that sells more material.—Chicago Record.

Homemade Linen Collars.

The very latest linen collar is of white linen of home manufacture. The best of collar linen is bought and slashed to make square ends, standing out around the neck. Lineu stiffening is then put inside and the colinr is finished with band, buttonhole, etc., like any ordinary collar. Around the ends there is now stitched tiny, narrow Hamburg edging. The points are now turned under and the collars neatly stitched, after which it is laundered and is ready to wear above a ribbon or fastened in the neck of a dress like any other collar. This makes a soft, neat finish for the neck like a ruching, but having the trim collar effect so much liked. They are cheap and certainly very becoming to the face. — Leisure Hours.

THE CURRENCY COMMISSION.

The President's Policy Is Carefully Expedient.

The most noticeable feature of the discussion about the currency commission was the utter nbsence of any higher tone in it all than the mere question of party expediency. That the administration owes its power to last fall's pledges of currency reform seemed to be a consideration entirely eliminated from discussion. Perhaps this is not to be wondered at so much; little is to be expected in the way of attachment to pledges from an administration which has spent a twelfth of its lease of life in arranging to repay campaign contributors through the tariff, to the exclusion of all other subjects of discussion. With such an administration, under such conditions, it need not excite surprise that so poor and pitiful a sop to decency as the currency commission scheme should, after it had been prepared and publicly announced as about to be transmitted to congress, be withheld, while the republican politicians wrangled over the question of its expediency.

Hanna, it appears, favored the transmission of the message. Not that Hanna had any idea that congress would do anything on the subject if it was sent in, for Hanna knew full well how completely at odds the republicans in congress were, underneath their surface semblance of harmony, and how hard it had been to hold congress together long enough to straighten out the conflict of selfish interests over the tariff. But Hanna reasoned that the contest in Ohio, in which he had so vitnl a concern and upon the result of which will depend his reelection or the loss of his seat in the senate, is to hinge in great degree upon the financial question. An indication by the administration that it favors legislation which will prevent future drains upon the gold reserve might catch the business men in the state and thus strengthen the republican cause. Hanna was well nware that no action would be takea by the senate upon the president's recommendations, if made, but he believed, npparently, that the mere making of such recommendations would be accepted as proof of the sincerity of the administration, and, by giving press and people something else to talk about, steer them away from the dangerous ground of the Dingley tariff.

The eastern republicans in congress, as a rule, took the other side of the argument. They feared that the financial issue might again be thrust into prominence at a time when their business constituents were demanding rest from discussion and opportunity to adjust themselves to the new conditions of the Dingley bill. They asserted that they were deluged with letters from merchants, manufacturers and bankers urging the nnwisdom of a renewal of the controversy over the financial question until the exigencies of a political campaign should demand it.

So the president, "simply a careful gentleman, much too amiable and too impressionable to be safely intrusted with the great executive office," balanced the pros and cons of currency reform on the [illegible] expediency and hesitated. How happy [illegible] he with either, were t'other dear charmer away!—Albany (N. Y.) Argus.

HIGHER PRICES.

Truth About the Operation of the New Tariff.

A pound of fact is worth a ton of theory in estimating the effects of the new tariff law. The World is giving the facts as to the advance in prices which some days ago it said would be the one certain result of the Dingley bill.

The grocers have already advanced the price of sugar six-tenths of a cent a pound, merely as a preliminary increase. The consumers of the country will pay to the treasury at least $25,000,000 and probably $30,000,000 more for their sugar under the new law than they did under the one which it displaced. The exactions of the sugar trust will add millions more to the cost as pure robbery.

The testimony of merchants shows that there has already been an advance of "from ten to twenty-five per cent. on all woolen goods." It will cost more to keep warm next winter. Hides have advanced by reason of the new tax, and an increase in the cost of boots and shoes, from 30 to 50 cents a pair, is expected. An advance of prices all along the line is inevitable. As an offset to this one of the merchants asks: "But isn't the consumer better off if he gets more money?"

There is much virtue in an if. Will the consumer get more money? This also will be a question of fact rather than of theory. The consumers will know—the politicians and the protected class need make no mistake about that! They knew in 1890 and 1892. "It was the shopping women who did it," said Speaker Reed, in explaining the republican overthrow in those years. In certain lines of production it is not unlikely that wages will advance somewhat as the result of reviving industry. But there is small probability that the increase in wages will equal the increase in the cost of living. For the large class of salaried persons there is even less prospect of a compensating advance in pay.

As the proof of a pudding is in the eating, so the proof of a law is in its working. The World intends to present an accurate and impartial record of the operation of the new tariff.—N. Y. World.

——It is painful to note that right in the beginning of the tariff-made prosperity that the immense cotton mills at Fall River, Manchester and Lawrence are shutting up. In his closing speech on the tariff bill just enacted Mr. Dingley told us that the bill would "open up new opportunities for our own labor, which will be the beginning of that prosperity that was dispelled in 1892." Now it is in order for Mr. Dingley to explain why his bill doesn't work.—Utica (N. Y.) Observer.

WHICH IS IT?

Prosperity as Viewed in Its Proper Light.

The clearing house returns at last indicate an increased volume of business and prosperity for some of the people, if not for all. The total for last week shows an increase of 25.2 per cent. over the total for the corresponding week last year. But this must not be accepted as the true measure of the increase in the volume of substantial business.

In the first place, the very large increase in New York—37.8 per cent.—suggests that most of the increase is due to greatly increased activity in speculative transactions, and a comparison of the stock exchange dealings will show that such is actually the case. Outside of New York the increase was only 9.9 per ceat.

In the next place, the increase in substantial trade is due in no small measure to advances in prices. The actual volume of commodities exchanged is not so much greater as the returns on the surface would indicate. Dun & Co. report a decided advance in wool and say that manufacturers "are able to obtain an advance of about ten per cent. in prices of goods." It is notorious that wheat is much higher than it was a year ago, owing to the deficiency in the supply from other countries which usually produce a surplus for export, and farm products generally are higher than they were a year ago.

Possibly one-half of the nominal increase in the amount of exchanges outside of New York may be due to greater quantity of commodities exchanged. The remainder is due to higher prices and more active speculation.

The farmers, or such of them as produce foodstuffs, are in reality more prosperous because their crops are unusually good and at the same time the foreign demand for their produce is unusually strong. They are getting higher prices than usual for larger crops. But the new tariff, except as to the single item of wool, is not benefiting them at all. On the contrary, it is largely neutralizing the prosperity coming to them from natural causes, because it enables the manufacturers to exact from them higher prices for their goods and wares.

Yet the republican tariff magicians audaciously take to themselves all the credit for the timely sunshine and rain and for all the conditions which for the time being improve the foreign demand for the farmer's crops. But the farmer will find out the true state of the case when his foreign customers, repelled by our hostile tariff, shut out our farm products and seek other sources of supply.

European purchasers of our foodstuffs and even of our cotton are even now doing all in their power to stimulate production elsewhere; so that they can supply their wants without being dependent upon a country so illiberal and hostile commercially as ours is under republican rule. It will not be long before they will teach our farmers that the republican policy of commercial isolation and war is the worst possible for their interests, and that the pretense of protection for them is a cheap invention, intended only to reconcile them to tariff robbery for the enrichment of monopolies.—Chicago Chronicle.

COMMENTS OF THE PRESS.

——The announcement that foreign nations are preparing to resent the recent tariff act is not strange. The art of self-defense is by no means obsolete. —N. Y. Journal.

——Expenditures still exceed the receipts by a good figure. Perhaps President McKinley had better call congress in extra session to pass a tariff to raise revenue, private interests having had their innings.—Indianapolis News.

——We are going to get more money for our wheat, corn and cotton than ever before. The question of the Dingley bill is how much of this money the producers will be obliged to hand over to Dingley bill trusts who are ambuscading the high road to prosperity. —N. Y. World.

——Let the republican papers be generous in regard to these large payments of mortgage indebtiness in the west, of which so much is said, and tender apologies to the last administration and the Wilson tariff. Although only just discovered, the payments could not all have been paid since the introduction of the Dingley bill.—Des Moines Leader.

——By charging extravagnat prices to American consumers the protected monopolies can underbid in Europe and thus make a market there. So long as the European legislators do not retaliate and the American consumer does not revolt at paying out his money for dear goods that foreigners may buy cheaply, this scheme ought to work very well—for the monopolists.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

——As Mr. Sherman was forced out of his senatorial seat to make room for Mr. Hanna, how would it do to retire him from the cabinet in favor of the Cleveland ironmaster? His days of usefulness are obviously over, and the junior senator from Ohio could much more appropriately undertake to run the country from the state department than from his desk in the United States senate.—Providence (R. I.) Journal.

——Consumers are early learning that under the Dingley bill they are confronted by a hard, tangible condition and not a mystical, intangible theory. Prices of all necessaries are going up without the least promise of an increase in the income of wage-earners. New York grocers have advanced the price of sugar six-tents of a cent a pound. This is just a starter. From this increase the sugar trust will reap a reward of $25,000,000, as the Dingley bill intended it should. There has also been an advance of from ten to 25 per cent. on all woolen goods. The new law has caused an advance in the price of hides, and an increase in the cost of boots and shoes from 30 to 50 cents a pair will follow.—St. Louis Republic.

THE CORN HARVEST.

Labor-Saving Devices Have Made Its Gathering Easy.

Harvesting the corn crop is being made easier every year by improvements in labor-saving machinery and devices. Large commercial crops are cut, tied and left in straight rows by the improved corn harvester, while the bundles placed in shocks or stooks of 12 to 20 bundles to cure are then drawn to the barn and run through the shredder. Farmers who cannot afford the latest and improved machinery, or who have small areas of corn, cut by sled as illustrated below, or by hand cutter. The armfuls thus cut have to be tied in bundles, various materials being used for this purpose, some using two or three cornstalks, others a small handful of long, strong straw, swamp grass or willows. But whether cut by improved machinery or by hand cutter, the large bundles, shocks or stooks have to be securely fastened to withstand the fall wind and storms.

To make a corn cutter, as portrayed herewith, make a platform with runners six feet long and two inches thick; the higher the runners the higher it will cut; eight-inch plank should do. Mortise three crosspieces of two by four into top of runners. Nail boards on cross ties to make a platform 30 inches wide and nearly six feet long. Get a good steel knife and make it very sharp, say 22 inches long and five inches wide. Bevel the edge from the bottom or underside. Have a rod made with an eye in the center and curved, in order to fasten either end to a runner and hitch a horse in the center. This rod should be of one-half inch round iron, and long enough to work nicely, as shown at a. Bore a hole in platform or runner, and put in a stake about six inches high (b) even across with the base of rod (c). Another stake of the same size, but 20 inches high, on the right side of platform near the edge, and 21 inches from the front of platform (d). Take a rod of five-eighth-inch iron 67 inches long and weld a piece of flat iron one-half inch thick and eight inches long to the end at e, bolt the flat piece to platform (13 inches from center to back of platform), and bend the rod forward 17 inches above the platform, as in e. Bend the rod so as to have it extend out over the edge of the platform, over and back of the knife (h), then bend the rod in so as to extend about two inches over the platform at the center two by four cross brace (f). From there bend the rod out to g. Be sure to have it carry the same height all the time.

The bends in the rod are made in order to bring in the corn and lay it across the platform without the help of a man. In this way the danger of standing over it is averted. Nail a small stick something like a lath from top of stake d to the outside runner a few inches ahead of the knife. Bolt the knife to the platform about 26 inches from back part of platform with two bolts, and have the knife slant back considerably. I put a scrap piece of two-inch plank under the platform at e and h, to make the platform more solid where the large rod and knife were bolted fast. The large rod from g to e should be with bends 50 inches long. Directly across it is 48 inches, thus using two inches for bends. The large rod is outside of stake d about five inches. Hitch on a quiet horse, hang the lines on d and ride on rear of platform, and when a large pile of corn is cut and laid across the sled, stop and shock it up.—Farm and Home.

WOMEN AS FARMERS.

Peculiar Scheme to Be Inaugurated by a Nebraska Woman.

Mrs. Hattie N. Bemis, of Arabia, Neb., does not see why women should not be successful as farmers, and announces that she is going to try the experiment if she can get a dozen women to assist her. She owns a large tract of land in northwestern Nebraska which she says she intends to give to 12 deserving widows of northwestern farmers. In return she will require them to cultivate it without man's assistance. She says she will start them out with all the machinery they need, a sufficient supply of cattle, horses, swine and poultry to serve as a nest egg, and money to last them until the first harvest can be disposed of. She admits that the climate is dry, but proposes to instruct her wards in the operation of a system of soil culture by which method experiments have proved the rainfall of the section is sufficient to insure bountiful crops. The nearest the women will be allowed to come to dealings with men is to sell the crops to them. If Mrs. Bemis ever learns that a man has been employed about the premises the farms will revert to her. Any member of the community who marries will also forfeit her title to a share in the property.—Chicago Chronicle.

Maintaining the Standard.

One of the causes of the deterioration of flocks of poultry is the practice of selling off the old hens and using pullets. Pullets will probably lay more eggs than will hens the first year, but chicks hatched from eggs laid by pullets are not as strong and vigorous as those produced from eggs laid by hens. It is also less expensive to retain the hens than to feed the pullets a whole year before they are old enough to lay. Hens are serviceable until five years old, and sometimes longer, the stock being less liable to disease and loss of vigor if cocks 18 months old and hens over two years old are used for breeding purposes instead of pullets that are mated with cockerels.

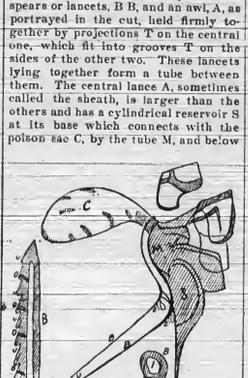
HIGH-CLASS POULTRY.

Why the Progressive Farmer Will Raise No Other Kind.

No man has a better chance to keep high-class poultry than the farmer. He has unlimited range for them, and this is conducive to health and best results in rearing the young. He produces at first cost every necessary food product that goes to keep a flock during the year, and no one who desires to purchase eggs for hatching would ever buy of a breeder who keeps his fowls penned up if he knew where he could get eggs from farm-kept fowls.

There is just as good a market for high-class poultry as there is for poultry for market, and the demand is always good for good stock. The farmer who keeps this kind of poultry has two chances to make money. His flock will be profitable as an investment at market prices, and he will make many sales without effort at much above market prices.

It is no trouble at all, as the writer knows from experience, to get from 50 cents to one dollar a dozen for eggs from high-class hens during the hatching season, and even at the smaller price there is an immense profit in the business.



With the better care that is always given to good stock comes a greater return in eggs and meat for the feed used, and here is an additional profit on the transaction.

There is no excuse in these days that justifies any farmer in allowing his flock of hens to remain mongrels. The man who does this is standing in his own light and does not live up to his opportunities. It does not need fancy houses, elaborate systems of yards nor extraordinary skill in breeding to make a success with fine poultry. Plain, hard common sense, such as is needed to raise good crops and conduct any farm successfully, is better than any number of nice theories which are of no practical value.—Farmers' Voice.

THE STING OF A BEE.

It Is a Very Complicated and Delicate Structure.

The organ of defense which worker bees possess is a very complicated structure. The sting is composed of two highly polished, sharp hollow spears or lancets, B B, and an awl, A, as portrayed in the cut, held firmly together by projections T on the central one, which fit into grooves T on the sides of the other two. These lancets lying together form a tube between them. The central lance A, sometimes called the sheath, is larger than the others and has a cylindrical reservoir S at its base which connects with the poison sac C, by the tube M, and below by a slit with the tube made by the joining of the three laucets. The smaller lancets, B B, have at their bases peculiar valves, E E. Their points are barbed, U U, in the sectional drawing, which also shows the tube in the lancet, and the openings, O O, connecting the tube with the exterior. These barbs catch and hold, causing the sting to be left in when it is used. The poison is driven through the openings and through the tube formed by the lance, into the object stung. This poison is an acid fluid which the bee secrets and stores in the sac C. Being acid an alkali, as ammonia or soda, will neutralize it and help to allay the pain and swelling.—Farm and Home.

STRUCTURE OF A BEE'S STING.

HINTS FOR BEEKEEPERS.

Shade the hives when the weather is warm.

Put starters of thin foundation in the section boxes.

Look out for robbers when the harvest becomes scarce.

Put the honey in the driest, warmest room about the house.

If exposed to cold or dampness honey will granulate in the cells.

Strong colonies at the proper time insure a good honey harvest.

If you work for extracted be careful not to extract too close.

A little pine tar smeared on a board will drive ants from the hive.

Where the honey is extracted a large number of extra combs are necessary.

The only way to keep drones for any length of time is to keep them in queenless colonies.—St. Louis Republic.

Good News from Missouri.

Robert Cornwell, a Barton county (Mo.) farmer, living near Golden City, after numerous experiments, thinks he has succeeded in developing a potato that will grow without vines. They grow entirely under ground, and will do away with the fear of potato bugs, which cost so much to destroy each season, not to mention the damage they do. A field planted with the vineless potato may be worked with the ordinary harrow. Should the new potato prove to be a good producer, as Mr. Cornwell hopes, it is likely to supersede the present variety.

DONKEY, DOG AND GOAT.

The Three Great Sights of a Transcontinental Journey.

"The three oddest things that I ever saw outside of New York," said a New Yorker who had gone overland to Denver and returned by water by way of Galveston, "were a donkey, a dog and a goat. The donkey had the native power of the single bob-tail car that goes up the hill on South Broadway, Denver. He was an amusing fellow. After I made my first trip up that steep hill, I was astonished to see the conductor unhitch the donkey and put him aboard the car. The dashboard was fitted up as a sort of stall, and he stood there sideways, when the car started back down the hill under its own impetus. The donkey's face took on a delighted expression as he found himself in the role of passenger. He really seemed to be grinning at the conductor and the passengers.

"I saw the dog as I was about to enter the Tabor opera house in Denver. The dog was called Bill, and he was part of the outfit of a cigar store in the opera house building. He was a black spaniel. He was rigged up in zouave trousers and jacket trimmed with gold braid, and had a tasseled fez on his head, and spectacles on his nose. The oddest thing about him was that he sat on his haunches, with his paws in the air, actually smoking a cigarette like a confirmed cigarette fiend. I found that he had been trained to smoke the cigarettes while the audience was going into the theater as an advertisement of his owner's business. That was the first time I had ever seen a dog smoking.

"I made the acquaintance of the goat in a tobacco factory in Key West. There were 200 Cuban girls there, nearly all of them pretty and all of them smokers or chewers of tobacco. The goat was their particular pet. He was the biggest goat I ever saw, almost as large as a Shetland pony, with big branching horns and perfectly tame. He playfully butted the girls or pranced around among them. His best trick, however, was the larceny of their dinner baskets. He used to go nosing around until he found a particularly choice luncheon. He would knock over the basket, seize the lunch and dash out doors with it. No amount of chastisement had ever broken him of the trick. Of course I saw wonderful scenery in the journey, but the donkey and the dog and the goat were by long odds the most interesting living things that I encountered."—N. Y. Sun.

NORWAY'S VOTING LAW.

It Is the Most Liberal of Any Country in the World.

The odelsthing, the Norwegian equivalent of a lower house, has passed the bill granting the right of franchise to Norwegian citizens temporarily residing abroad. If the lagthing indorses this action Norway will enjoy the distinction of having the most liberal voting laws of any country in the world. Although the bill has in view chiefly Norwegian sailors, its provisions are not restricted to this class, as was at first supposed.

Its main features are as follows: The voter must first prove that he has not been away from Norway longer than three years before the election day, and the ballot must not be cast longer than three months before the election. The ballot must be made out in the name of the party.

By all but members of crews of Norwegian ships the voting must be in the presence of the local Norwegian consul, the excepted class voting on board ship before the captain. This would seem to exclude all Norwegian sailors on foreign vessels who are unable to appear before a consul within the prescribed time. It is not at all certain the bill will pass the upper house, as considerable opposition has arisen because of the increased facilities for fraudulent voting offered by it.—N. Y. Post.

Misspelling a Historic Name.

Through the blunder of some unknown person, committed years ago, a glaring piece of inexcusably poor spelling is still on view in the finance committee room in the city hall, and is the subject of much unfavorable comment by historical scholars. The portrait of Rev. Henry Augustus Muhlenberg hung for many years in Independence hall as a tribute to the preacher-patriot's services during the revolution, with his name beneath it spelled "Henery Muhlenburg." The same egregious errors are now visible in the city hall. Rev. Henry Augustus Muhlenburg was one of the first Lutheran ministers in this country. On one occasion he carried a gun into his pulpit at Reading, and at the conclusion of the services invited all his male parishioners to follow him to Valley Forge, which they did. Dr. Muhlenburg was also the first speaker of the house of representatives of the United States after the constitution was adopted in 1783, and his name is at least worthy of sufficient remembrance to be spelled correctly.—Philadelphia Record.

Costly Plants.

"I suppose," said the amateur botanist, "that orchards are the most expensive plants in the world."

"I am not so sure of that," replied Mr. Dinwiddie. "I have seen the assertion that $500,000,000 is invested in electric-light plants in this country."—Pittsburgh Chronicle.

Too Favorable.

"I am afraid," said the optimist reluctantly, "that the flying machine our friend talks about is a mere fancy."

"No," replied the skeptic, "it isn't even that. I have heard of such a thing as a flight of fancy."—Washington Star.

"Parson," said the dying man, "do you believe in a deathbed confession?"

"Under certain circumstances," said the reverend gentleman.

"Well, it is this way. Years ago I was a passenger on the Great Consolidated Street railway."

"Yes, go on."

"Oh, I hate to tell it."

"Go on."

"And one day in a moment of vicious insanity, I beat them out of a nickel fare!"

He sank back exhausted.

"Listen," said the reverend man, "it may comfort you. Can you hear me?"

"Yes, yes."

"You needn't feel so worried about beating that gang of robbers out of a paltry nickel—I beat 'em every chance I get."

And the dying man passed away with a peaceful smile.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

B. & O. Improvements.

The work of straightening the track and reducing the grade at Tabbs Station on the second division of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad was recently completed, and the first train to use the new line was No. 1, the New York and St. Louis flyer. A heavy grade and three bad curves have been eliminated by this work. A mile east, at Meyer's Hole, a similar improvement has also been completed after months of work. Several reverse curves and a nasty and dangerous dip are done away with at this point. Near Myer's Hole, at Tahlers, the alignment of the track is being materially changed, and, as in the other two improvements, bad grades and sharp, annoying curves are being removed. This part of the work will be done in sixty days and then a series of very dangerous places will have been entirely removed. This work in its entirety means the hauling of several additional cars in each freight train, besides reducing the danger of derailments to almost nothing. The second division, running from Cumberland to Brunswick, will soon be in first-class condition and more cheaply operated than ever.

Tells Her Experience With Ovaritis.

A dull, throbbing pain, accompanied by a sense of tenderness and heat low down in the side, with an occasional shooting pain, indicates inflammation.

On examination it will be found that the region of pain shows some swelling. This is the first stage of ovaritis, inflammation of the ovary. If the roof of your house leaks, my sister, you have it fixed at once; why not pay the same respect to your own body?

Do you live miles away from a doctor? Then that is all the more reason why you should attend to yourself at once, or you will soon be on the flat of your back.

You need not, you ought not to let yourself go, when one of your own sex holds out the helping hand to you, and will advise you without money and without price. Write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., and tell her all your symptoms. Her experience in treating female ills is greater than any other living person. Following is proof of what we say:

"For nine years I suffered with female weakness in its worst form. I was in bed nearly a year with congestion of the ovaries. I also suffered with falling of the womb, was very weak, tired all the time, had such headaches as to make me almost wild. Was also troubled with leucorrhœa, and was bloated so badly that some thought I had dropsy. I have taken several bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and several of her Blood Purifier, and am completely cured. It is a wonder to all that I got well. I shall always owe Mrs. Pinkham a debt of gratitude for her kindness. I would advise all who suffer to take her medicine."—Mrs. Annie Curtis, Ticonderoga, N. Y.

SOMETHING NEW.

Candy Liver Medicine.

KEEPING abreast with the inventions of this age, we, by modern machinery, compress our powdered Dr. M. A. Simmons' Liver Medicine into tablets and sugar coat them.

Consumers can either swallow the tablets whole or chew them up and swallow with water. The candy sugar coating excludes the air, protects the purified medicine from microbic influences, prevents the possibility of deterioration from atmospheric changes, insuring perfect purity and full strength when taken, and makes it pleasant to take as candy. Tablets contain only the powdered Liver Medicine, same as sold in packages by Dr. M. A. Simmons and we his successors, since 1840.

PETERSBURG

Her Business Men and Industries --A Thriving Little City of Seven Hundred Inhabitants.

Berkshire, McWethy & Co.,

R. A. McWethy, junior member and general manager of this firm, was born near Petersburg, this county, in March 1855. He started out in life as a yeast maker with Tausky & Co., manufacturers of compressed yeast. When that firm moved to Cincinnati, Dick, as he is familiary known, engaged with J. Frank Grant as salesman in his large general store in Petersburg, which position he held for eleven years. In 1891 Mr. McWethy and Thomas Cowen, of Burlington, engaged in the general merchandising business at Ada, Ohio, for three years. In September, 1894, he organized the firm of Berkshire, McWethy & Co. He has been married twice. His first wife was Miss Mattie Lyon, whom he married in 1880. She died in 1889, and in 1891 he was united in marriage to Miss Katie Weindel, youngest daughter of John Weindel.

Mr. John W. Berkshire, whom every person in the county knows, is a member of the firm. He was born near Petersburg, his present home, on the 12th day of August, 1842. In 1862 he engaged in merchandising in Petersburg with his uncle, W. C. Berkshire. In October, 1863, he married Miss Fannie S. Walton, daughter of John H. Walton, an old and highly esteemed citizen of this county. J. B. Berkshire, our present Master Commissioner and Frank W. Berkshire, Chinese Inspector, stationed at Chicago, are his sons.

George R. Berkshire, another member of the firm, was born near Petersburg in the year 1844. He is a natural born politician, farmer and merchant, and when anything of a political nature is about to happen, "Robbin," as the boys call him, is always consulted. In 1873 he was married to Miss Louisa Parker, daughter of the late Hon. Richard Parker, who represented this county in the legislature for two terms.

The firm of Berkshire, McWethy & Co., is the largest and most prosperous establishment of the kind in the county, and is composed of men whose word is as good as their bond.

Dr. J. M. Grant,

A leading physician of the town, was born near Petersburg, February 15th, 1852. He is a son of Mr. W. H. Grant, an old and highly esteemed citizen of this county. Dr. Grant is a graduate of the Ohio Medical College, of Cincinnati, and also a graduate of the Jefferson medical College, of Philadelphia. He has a splendid practice, and devotes his entire time and energy to its advancement. His jovial, good natured, disposition in the sick room, has causcd many a smile to envelop the countenance of his patients. The Doctor is a consistent member of the Bullittsburg Baptist church.

Ralph Clements Tilley,

First saw the light of day thirty-five years ago in the town of Petersburg. He graduated from the Kentucky School of Medicine, class 1889, Alleopathic. Dr. Tilley has twice been married, his first wife being a daughter of Esquire M. B. Green, of Bellevue. His present wife was a daughter of State Senator Reed, of Louisville. In politics the Doctor is a dyed-in-the-wool Democrat. In religion he is a Methodist. Besides a large practice, the Doctor is the regular druggist for Berkshire, McWethy & Co., life and fire insurance agent, clerk, treasurer and tax collector for the town of Petersburg.

Buchanan & Co.,

Dealers in drugs, notions, paints, wall paper and jewelery. S. C. Buchanan is the senior member of the firm. Mr. Buchanan has been a resident of Petersburg for the last 20 years, and devotes his entire time and energy to the advancement of his vocation. He is married and has an interesting family to which he is very much devoted. E. P. Berkshire, the junior member of the firm, was born near Petersburg, and has resided here all his life, and no one in the community has more friends than Genc Berkshire. He is industrious and pleasant and it is a pleasure to deal with him. The firm of Buchanan & Co., was organized in the year 1893, and began business in a portion of the Smith building. In the spring of '96 they began the erection of their new building, and in the winter of the same year moved into their present quarters, which is the best equipped drugstore in the county.

Mr. E. T. Krutz,

Another one of Petersburg's energetic business men, was born in Switzerland county, Indiana, in 1844, he came to Kentucky when very young, and has been engaged in the general merchandising business all his life. Mr. Krutz commenced business in Petersburg in 1892, on the very limited capital of $200. Business has continued to grow till he now owns his own business house and dwelling and carries a stock of goods valued at $1,000. He has a splendid trade and is ready to meet any competition that comes up. He is energetic and pushing, and one of the closest buyers in the business. Mr. Krutz is a quiet unassuming man, and all who know him are his friends.

Gordon Brothers

Is another firm of Petersburg. They are young and energetic business men, and their success in the business world shows what pluck will do. Reese and Mark, as they are called by their numerous friends are both married and have interesting families growing up, and are devoted to their homes. Reese is a plasterer by trade, which business he followed till he engaged in his present occupation, that of merchandising. Mark and Reese began the general merchandising business in the building now occupied by E. T. Krutz. Their business continued to grow, and when the fire destroyed the Petersburg Mercantile Co's building on the corner of Tanner and First streets, Gordon Bros. purchased the vacant lot, and began the erection of their present business emporium. In the fall of 1896 they moved their stock of goods into their large and commodious, fire preof building, which stands to-day as a monument to their pluck and industry. This building is equipped with a large and commodious parlor hall, which has a seating capacity of 700, with stage and drop curtain.

Boone County Distilling Company.

Owned by Freiberg & Workum, office at 218 Front Street, Cincinnati, Ohio. This immense plant is situated in the western part of the town, on the bank of the Ohio river, and covers 15 acres of ground. They also own their own cooper shops, which cover nearly two acres of ground. They make their own barrels, employing twenty-five coopers. The pay-roll of the whole concern, when in full operation, amounts to $1,000 per week. The entire plant is filled with the most modern conveniences. The electric light plant in distillery has two hundred incandescent lights and arc lights. They operate their own malt house and make all the malt used on the premises. This is the most modern, and the best equipped establishment of the kind in Kentucky, and has a capacity of two thousand five hundred bushels, or twelve thousand gallons per day. All the grain and coal used by this firm is hoisted and hauled by steam, and that department of their business is a marvel of completeness. The firm owns their own steamboat the Levi J. Workum, and have an immense corn chute situated on the Ohio river and Big Four railroad just above the city of Aurora, Ind. The chute consists of a large steel pipe, running from the railroad to the corn boat on the river. The ordinary shipments of this well known distillery is one hundred and fifty barrels per day. They manufacture some especially fine brands, which are sold in every state in the Union; some shipments go outside the boundary of the United States. The firm of Freiberg & Workum is noted for its kindness to its employees, never failing to assist in cases of need. It has the same force of hands now as 20 years ago. Hon. T. B. Mathews has been general manager of this immense business concern for the past ten years. The same firm own and operate a large plant at Lynchburg, Ohio.

BEYOND THE VEIL.

Beyond the veil of flesh what lies
Of bliss supreme for you and me,
Awakening of glad surprise
To rapturous felicity?
Have we not seen a heavenly glow
Light up the pallid dying face?
Reflection radiant, we know
From some serener, brighter place;
And fancy it cannot be far
From where our loved and lost ones are.

And well we know, though prisoned here,
We never shall forgotten be,
That our beloved would linger near
In tenderness and sympathy;
Though glad, would grieve to see our grief,
Would comfort, counsel, as of yore,
Would quickly come to our relief
If 'twere permitted, as before.
Ah! may they not, could we but see,
Be close beside both you and me?

In that unknown our anchor lies,
Our hope, our expectation there;
Our longing souls it satisfies
To dream of what we soon shall share;
To feel that just beyond the veil
That hides them all from you and me
Await us friends that will not fail—
Reunions of eternity;
That what we but prophetic feel
The veil's removal will reveal.

THE PASSING OF THE CIGARETTE.

BY BREVET-MAJOR GOTHAM.

IT IS a bachelor's room. It does not require a feminine eye to prove this fact, accented, as it is, by the very evident disarray of bachelor's belongings and lay strewn about.

A shoe, last looks, precisely out from beneath a pair of trousers dangling from the back of a lounging chair that breathes comfort from every indentation; a set of very much used foils, whose nicked appearance prove many passages, companion a fowling piece of the latest pattern, and together with numberless canes occupy the corner next the door; pictures that smack of stage, track and pigeon traps cover the deep red linerusta of the walls. The center of the many-toned eastern rug occupied by an antique writing table, which, proud of its position, amply reflects on its polished legs the dancing flames of the logs that burn their way so cheerily on the grate of the ones of the large, open fireplace. It is the room's chiefest charm, and being, is guarded by the griffin headed andirons, that stand like brazen sentinels to the right and left, as if it was their mission to guard the blaze.

The door opens to admit the master, who closes it hastily, as if to shut out some one following untangible thing.

He wrenches impatiently at his coat, and tosses it aside to join its companion garment on the chair.

The man is good to look at; the score and a-half years he owns have had ample time to grave their lines of character upon the handsome face. White, brown, and of reckless cast, it is turned toward a far corner of the room where the shadows lay darkest.

A sound, almost a sigh, comes from between the thin lips and then he turns and writes; hours pass, yet he writes on until the rattle of the pen upon the table marks that the task is finished.

The addressed envelope blinks at him from the base of the clock where he carefully places it. "No one can fail to see it there," he says, softly.

Returning to the chair, he opens a large gree case and takes from its silvern surroundings of metal lace work a cigarette, the last it contains.

"The only one," he mutters, "and the last," then lights it.

The scented clouds roll lightly and gaily above the silent smoker for a brief space, then, half-consumed, he sees the cigarette into a queer recess, shaped like a Sabot. It splinters at the touch of the cold metal and goes out.

Crossing quickly to where an old cabinet leans its weight against the wall, he takes from one of the many drawers something that glitters in the firelight, and with a purpose, he walks rapidly to a doorway, parts the curtained portieres a moment and then is hidden by the black shadows beyond.

All dark! What's that dread noise? A muffled report has sounded from the room behind the curtains; their silken folds sway by a draught and open wide to admit rings of steel-hued smoke, and a pungent odor fills the inside room.

"Holy smoke! what's that?" cries the cigarette, raising its gray head from a little heap of warm ashes that has formed its bed.

"Eh! what's the matter?" queries the Pipe, in answer, lazily rolling over on its polished side.

"Why, you old light-weight," answers the excited Cigarette, "don't you know a pistol shot when you hear it?"

"My esteemed friend of the tissue-paper coat," retorts the Pipe, stirred to action by the other's marked unappreciation of the dignity that his last commands, "you are nervous. Pistol shot in this room? You are crazy! It's all from keeping late hours. Suppose: you were born to be lighted," and with a satisfied glance at the glittering silver bands, the Pipe turns over and prepares to resume his newly-interrupted nap.

"I suppose you think you are funny, Pipe!" sniffs the Cigarette, angrily, "perhaps you think that because you've been dug out of the ground and have enjoyed the benefits of a sea voyage, that you can lord it over me? Why, you old ash-sifter, I can give you cards and spades and beat you in a walk, for I am machine-made."

"Speak for yourself, Kid," growls out the Whist Pack, from his place on the desk, where he had been a silent spectator to the altercation. "Don't get gay with me—I only deal with kings and queens, and know my business."

"You know your business, do you?" gets in the Cigarette, now erect in the Receiver. "And everybody else's, too; don't you talk to me; you are nothing but an old rounder. I know a deal about you."

"Ha! ha!" roars the Pipe. "That's where he raps you, old fifty-two!"

The Whist Pack shuffles about uneasily, until a brilliant thought strikes him. "I may be half as black as I am painted," he remarks, calmly, "but I haven't got a fly in my mouth-piece."

The Pipe flushes under his tan. This is a home thrust, and for a moment he is speechless.

"Gentlemen, gentlemen, this will never do!" It is the silvery voice of the Case. "You should not quarrel in the presence of a lady, especially if she is as delicate as I am. It is very horrid of you!" and overwrought by her excitement, she bursts into tears.

"Come now, Miss Case, don't cry, there's a good girl; think of all we have been through together," soothingly whispers the Cigarette, "that's right." Then turning to the others: "Gentlemen, why should we quarrel? We are all here in a common cause and we all serve the Master." Everyone was silent at the mention of that name. "And another thing, gentlemen," the Cigarette resumed, with a pathetic break in his small voice. "I feel that my days are numbered, smoked out, you know, and before I depart for the place where all defunct stubs go, I would like to tell you a story. It is not very much, and as it, in a measure, concerns one who we all love"—and he paused to glance at the curtained door—"I would really enjoy relating it to you." "Certainly, certainly, I'm always ready for any new thing that comes to hand; so fire away, Cigarette; the night is young and the company pleasing"—and so saying the Whist Pack moved up another space in the rack to listen.

As the Cigarette was about to begin, he was interrupted by a new voice: "May I come in?" it said. "My name is Poker Chip." "Oh, I know you," said the Whist Pack, "you're true blue." "Gentlemen, and old friend of mine. Come over here by me, Chip. Now, Cigarette, 'old man.'"

Setting his head upon the rim of the receiver in a more comfortable position the Cigarette began:

"The first thing that I can remember is the fact that I was one of a number of very young leaves that were supported by the parent stem of a flourishing tobacco plant that flourished on the soil of a plantation way down in Cuba. I was very proud in those days, mainly, because my place was well up on our stem and I could see a great deal more of the world than my brothers who occupied places lower down.

HE WRITES ON.

"In this balmy climate I thrived and grew, notwithstanding the fact we were often neglected, by reason of the rebellion that was and is now raging in those parts. You see, my owner was a rebel and as he held a high commission, was often away for weeks at a time.

"One day, how well I remember it, we were wakened by the rush of many feet about us; dreadful noises filled the air, and we were so surrounded by thick smoke we could hardly see. From what I had gleaned by the slaves that tended us, I knew in a moment that a battle was raging.

"The din became louder; hourse shouts of command and cries of agony filled the air; now and then a thud upon the ground would tell me that some brave man had fallen. Many times we came very near being trampled on and crushed, but by some miraculous chance we escaped serious injury. I was just bending down to congratulate the stem for our escape, when with a rush a battery of Maxims—I think that is the name—came lumbering in our direction. I was conscious of being crushed down by the weight of a wheel, after that I knew nothing for many days."

The Cigarette paused to note the effect upon his listeners, but no one noticed that the Letter was following every word of the narrative.

"I suppose I was unconscious for a long time, for the next thing I can recollect was the fact that I was a very fine leaf of tobacco, and although marked, with many others, "high grade," I was thoroughly cured of my conceited manners and green ways.

"Not many days after this I was taken to a factory, where a very pretty dark-eyed girl wrapped me about a number of tender tobacco shoots, and then packed me, with others of like ilk, in a gaudy, but very handsome box. There were only 25 of us all told, and we were known as the Reina family. So, you see, gentlemen, that I have every right to be proud of my strain.

"My time grows very short, or I would go more into detail—but suffice it to say, I, like my esteemed friend, the Pipe, underwent the horrors of a sea voyage, and after knocking about a bit, was exposed for sale at a high figure, in the store of a fancy cigar dealer, whose shop was situated in the city of Washington; the place of presidents, senators and other tomfooleries."

"Quite right," broke in the Whist Pack; "you can always pick up a choice set of knaves there. This I know."

"Well, I was ultimately sold to a senator, who bought our whole box and took us home to his rooms. In the short time I was destined to stay there I saw so much devilry and intrigue that I was glad to be smoked. I ultimately met this fate in the mouth of a secretary, who almost consumed me at the poker table, where he lost a great deal of money. I was glad of this, for I hate gambling—oh, I beg pardon, Mr. Chip—I quite forgot."

"Not at all, Cigarette," said the Poker Chip, cheerfully; "I am used to abuse."

The Letter smiled sadly at the interruption, but no one noticed, and the Cigarette took a fresh start.

"The next morning, although a wreck, I was carefully picked out of the cuspidor, and, although half consumed, suffered the degradation of being almost finished off by the senator's colored servant. I found my way to the street at last, only to be picked up by an Italian and hurried away to be sold. I was one of a choice collection of stubs of various degrees of consumption, and a sorry spectacle compared to what I had been in my palmier days."

"Cut along, old chap; it's getting late," said the Pipe, and nodded his encouragement.

"Why bring up to you, friends, these sad days. I never can think of them without a shudder. I will let you imagine all my sufferings and skip along. One fine day I blossomed forth into a cigarette, and, packed in a dainty satin-lined case, was purchased by the loveliest girl I ever saw—wasn't she beautiful, Miss Case?" referred the Cigarette to that person, who was now sniffing audibly.

"Perfectly sweet," sobbed the Case, "and she wore such loves of hats."

Thus corroborated, the Cigarette took up his tale.

"Of course you knew her longer than I did, but I found out that, although her face was beautiful, her heart was full of black deceit. No one knew this but me and the master, and he—but I anticipate."

At this point the Letter made a movement as if to speak, but evidently thought better of it and remained silent.

"She gave the entire box of us to him on his birthday, and all my brothers who have gone before considered it a pleasure to be smoked by him, especially if it was in her presence.

"The rest is soon told, gentlemen; my yarn is about finished. To-night the woman gave the master back his love, and, although I was inside the Case, I heard it all and found out how weak and wicked a woman can be.

"She told him that she was about to marry that gray-haired old reprobate of a senator that owned me as a cigar. This broke the master's heart—I'm sure from what I know that she will be amply punished. My life is over, gentlemen—I am very glad to go; may your lot be happier than mine has proved to be," and the Cigarette was silent.

"Queer tale, that," said the Whist Pack, breaking the silence.

A new voice was heard from the mantel-piece that said, sadly: "I can testify that the Cigarette has told nothing but the truth." It was the Letter.—Military Gazette, Chicago.

WHAT FLATTERY WILL DO.

Experiences of a Young Lady Who Tried to Avoid It.

It was the afternoon of the club meeting, and the girl who prides herself on the earnestness of her aims and objects in life came into the room with the light of a noble resolve glorifying her countenance.

"I've been reading the loveliest book in the world, girls!" she exclaimed, enthusiastically, "and heuceforth I shall never flatter or deceive anybody. The author says that flattery is the worst of sins, and that—"

"Tell us your experience next week," interrupted the sarcastic maiden, grimly. "They'll be a lot more interesting than an account of the book's preachings, and besides—" But the earnest girl had flown off in indignation. And she was decidedly meek and crestfallen when next the club members met.

"You needn't laugh," she remarked to the sarcastic maiden, who was grinning expectantly, "for I believe what the book said was true, only we're not sufficiently developed to live by such an elevated standard. You know I said I should never flatter anybody again all my life. Well, that was last week. Now I'm going to flatter everybody. I've had enough of plain speaking to last me a lifetime. Last Monday I told mamma she was getting crow's feet, when I knew she wanted me to say she wasn't. Next day Mamie asked me how old I thought she looked, and I told her honestly. Mamma hasn't got over being vexed with me yet, and, as for Mamie, I don't suppose she'll ever speak to me again.

"Wednesday our pastor called and wanted my honest opinion of his last sermon. I told him, and he was awfully hurt. Friday I told my dressmaker that I considered her awfully careless with nice material, and she left the house in anger, with my new dress half done, and not a soul among us who knows how to finish it. Other dressmakers won't, you know, so what shall I do?

"That's the way things have gone all week. Now I'm going to say lovely things on principle again, whether they're true or not. You girls do all look perfectly stunning," she continued, sweetly, as her listeners sighed sympathetically. "I do think we have the prettiest set of girls in the city in our club, and the nicest."

And then she wondered that they didn't really seem grateful for the compliment. "They acted just as if they didn't think I meant it," she told her chum afterward.—Chicago Times-Herald.

SHARE OF WAGE-EARNERS.

Where the Working Man Comes In on the Dingley Tariff.

If the wage-earner does not organize to protect his own interest who will do it for him?

The republican party's reply to this question, asked by a reverend preacher, will be that organization on the part of the wage-earner is unnecessary for the protection of his own interests because those interests are entirely protected in tariff legislation.

But assuming for a moment the potency of tariff legislation to provide higher wage for the American artisan, the particular manner in which the artisan is to be protected and to gain his higher wage through the operation of the tariff law is faulty.

The tariff duty on bituminous coal, not laid, the republicans will explain, for the benefit of the mine owner, but for the benefit of the mine operative, was increased in the Dingley bill by 27 cents a ton, just as the glass schedule and all other schedules were increased to the McKinley rates.

But the tariff law leaves the interests of the laborer, for whose benefit, it is said, this tariff in its protective features is mainly laid, in the hands of the employer. It does not compel the employer to keep books and make sworn returns showing the amount gained to his business by the protective tariff nor the amount of such gain paid to employeesin the protected industries. It has resulted that the so-called principal beneficiary of protection, the laboring man, has not had his due share of the profits of protection. These have been secured to him in part only by his own organization. He cannot trust those beneficiaries of the tariff that the tariff maker trusts. The tariff maker says in effect to the captains of industry: "We charge you to see that labor gets the bulk of the profit we give you in this bill, a profit arising from our use of authority to legislate for the general welfare. We intrust the general welfare partly to you. We expect you to use it to the advantage of labor, which is our main concern."

Then the tariff maker goes off and foolishly rejoices in the work he has done, never having taken adequate steps to see that the captain of industry has performed his share of the compact.

So it is that even if the tariff for protection is the true policy it is not self effective in the protection of labor. It leaves the interests of labor in the hands of the greedy persons who procured the legislation, the great captains of industry who "hog," as the expressive phrase is, all that is in it for themselves and leave labor to get what it can only through its own organization.

And it is to such organization that labor in the protected interests owes the fact that it has had any other than living wage. The captains of industry have not made a fair divide of the profit of tariff taxation.—Chicago Chronicle.

THE REAL PROMOTER.

Education Alone Will Bring Prosperity.

It has always been admitted that the wages of skilled labor were higher in the United States than anywhere else in the world. The McKinleys and Dingleys have always insisted that they deserve all the credit for this happy state of affairs, and that the attempt to credit it to the superior skill and intelligence of the American workman was both silly and unpatriotic.

Now comes the nonpolitical Massachusetts bureau of statistics of labor with exhaustive and undoubtedly accurate tables of comparative wages that leave the McKinleys and Dingleys without a leg to stand on. The Massachusetts bureau, after compiling the wages in 99 occupations, finds:

1. That there are wider differences between the wages paid for the same kind of work in various parts of the United States than there are between the wages of the United States and of England or the continent.

2. That in the United States the workmen of Massachusetts receive the highest wages in every class of occupations—in those that pay poor wages at best no less than in those that offer labor the largest returns.

The first proposition shows that the chief cause for differences in wages cannot be tariffs, which of course operate equally upon protected manufactures everywhere. The second proposition shows that whatever this chief cause is it helps the workmen of Massachusetts more than it helps those of any other state.

What then is this chief cause?

The statistics of education undoubtedly furnish the clew to it. They show that Massachusetts gives each of her inhabitants seven years' schooling of 200 days each, while the average for the United States is 4 3-10 years of 200 days each.

Further, while the average wealth-producing power of each man, woman and child in the United States is 40 cents a day, the average wealth-producing power of each man, woman and child in Massachusetts is 73 cents a day—nearly double!

Education is the true advance agent of prosperity.—N. Y. World.

——Democrats need not look beyond the Fourth Indiana district for renewed courage and fresh hope. The unmistakable evidence is there of democratic buoyancy and harmony which augur party unity and victory. The democrats of the Fourth Indiana district have demonstrated that the party's old-time fighting spirit has returned. Now let democrats everywhere catch step and march resolutely on to the glories of victory that await them this year, next year and in 1900.—St. Louis Republic.

——As an evidence of how the tariff bill affects values and that there is a dawn of prosperity, the republican papers are printing tables to show that the trust stocks have increased in value over $200,000,000.—Peoria Herald.

THE STAR OF DINGLEYISM.

Prices on the Increase Under the New Tariff.

Consumers are thus early learning that under the Dingley bill they are confronted by a hard, tangible condition and not a mystical, intangible theory.

The prices of all the necessaries are going up without the least promise of an increase in the income of the wage-earners. New York grocers have advanced the price of sugar six-tenths of a cent a pound. This is just a starter. From this increase the sugar trust will reap a reward of $25,000,000, as the Dingley bill intended it should. There has also been an advance of from ten to twenty-five per cent. on all woolen goods. The new law has caused an advance in the price of hides, and an increase in the cost of boots and shoes from 30 to 50 cents a pair will follow. In brief, an advance soon of prices all along the line may be confidently looked for.

The upholders of the Dingley bill cannot deny the facts of increasing prices, and they try to justify the measure and the party's action in imposing it upon an already overtaxed nation by contending that it will ultimately result in raising the wage scale by the bare force of the necessities of wage-earners, and also in multiplying the opportunities for employment. This is the veriest rot. The McKinley bill did not raise wages or increase labor's opportunities. On the contrary, the industrial history of that brief period shows that wages decreased under the McKinley bill and that more trusts were formed than during any other corresponding time in the nation's history.

The sole and only business purpose of trusts is to control production by smothering competition. That proposition is too axiomatic to require argument or illustration. The rates of the McKinley bill were on an average ten per cent. lower than the rates of the Dingley bill. The latter measure will be proportionately a greater trust breeder. There is no sentiment in business. It will embrace its opportunity to cheapen its operations and increase its profits. This means an era of higher prices during the life of the Dingley bill than were ever known in this country in time of peace and when all of the productive energies of the nation were vigorous and eager to be allowed full sway.

Speaker Reed very correctly and succinctly summarized the causes of republican defeats under the McKinley bill once by declaring that "it was the women shoppers who did it." When the American people again get a whack at the republican party Mr. Reed's quick perception and ready wit will have another opportunity for display. As he views the wreck the thought is bound to suggest itself to his mind that the greed and rapacity of trusts have caused it.—St. Louis Republic.

SUCCESS OF DEMOCRATS.

Favorable Signs in Several Important States.

The prospects for democratic success in Ohio and Iowa are growing brighter as the active opening of the campaign approaches.

Republicans are frightened at the outlook, and are whistling to keep their courage up. The record of the republican party since it went into power is such that its leaders fear to face the people. Their fostering of trusts, their gifts to combines and their subserviency to monopolies make a precarious platform on which to stand before the people.

Add this record of corrupt legislation to that of the republican party on the money question and the burden will be too great to bear. In the words of the New York World: "The republicans have sown broadcast the seeds of new discontent. Democracy has but to be true to itself to reap from this sowing an abundant harvest."

Of course, the world is opposed to binetallism, but it sees the downfall of the republican party in its slavish obedience to the behests of the trusts and its disregard for the welfare of the people.

Success in Ohio and Iowa for the democracy would be a tremendous victory, because all the powers of corruption would enlist themselves in behalf of republicanism. Defeat would not carry with it discouragement to the democratic forces, for the real battle is before them in 1898, and victory then will mean a conquest in 1900, carrying with it freedom, happiness and prosperity for the nation.—Chicago Dispatch.

PARAGRAPHIC POINTERS.

——When prosperity returns it will not be through the custom house, but through the "golden harvest fields."—Indianapolis News.

——The trouble with the farmers' pockets these days is that no matter how much is poured into them as the result of the harvests it always runs out through the holes made by the tariff.—Chicago Chronicle.

——Extravagance grows with what it feeds upon. It becomes a power in legislation that is almost irresistible. The new tariff bill will not supply revenue sufficient to meet such expenditures. Its promoters admit this. Mr. Aldrich and Mr. Dingley have finally agreed that the deficit for this year will be not less than $30,000,000. The chances are that they have underestimated this deficit.—Louisville Post.

——The Hanna system means that all responsible public offices shall be purchased by aggregated wealth for incumbents who will loyally serve their masters; that neither honor nor oaths nor the direct specifications of the law shall count for anything where the interests of aggregated wealth are concerned; that even crime itself is to be treated with respect if committed by men who count their wealth by millions and whose conspiracies against need are for the gratification of greed.—N. ANTIQUITY OF THE ROSE.

Over a Thousand Species Known to Botanists.

The antiquity of the rose is so great that all account of its origin has been lost. It is not mentioned in the Biblical writings earlier than the reign of Solomon, but the allusion to it then made is such as to indicate that the flower had already been known, for the essence of roses was extensively used in Jerusalem and Judea during the reign of the luxurious and much-married king. In Egypt the rose is depicted on a number of very early monuments, believed to date from 3000 to 3500 B. C., and in the tomb of an Egyptian princess, disinterred a year ago in the south of Egypt, several hermetically sealed vials were found, which, when opened, contained genuine attar of roses, so that the modern claims for the discovery of this delicious perfume are vain. Rose water, or the essence of roses, is mentioned by Homer in the "Iliad." Homer and Solomon were nearly con-

Both the Greeks and Hebrews probably borrowed the idea of its manufacture from the Egyptians, and these, for aught anybody can tell, may have had it from the Indians or from the Chinese, for the latter claim for each of their discoveries and inventions a most marvelous, not to say incredible, antiquity. The rose is one of those flowers which by the people of every land are taken for granted as so well known as to need no description and hardly mention, for it is a singular fact that every continent on the globe, with the solitary exception of Australia, produces wild roses. Even the frozen regions of the north, where the summer lasts but two or three months, and is at best a season which may be described as very late in the fall, produce their wild roses, and travelers through Greenland, Kamschatka and northern Siberia found, in the proper season, an abundance of blossoms, while the crews of whaling vessels which call at Spitzbergen come off shore with bouquets of the native Spitzbergen rose. All wild roses are not of the same kind, for there are over 1,000 species of the wild rose known to botanists, and the varieties are innumerable.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Italian Sign Language.

As illustrating the almost incredible extent to which the Italians—the Sicilians, especially — can communicate with gestures, grimaces, and what is called the sign language generally, Alexandre Dumas relates that he was one evening in the theater at Palermo with a gentleman of that city named Arami, when his attention was attracted to what appeared to be, and in fact were, conversations carried on between the boxes and the orchestra. Presently Dumas' companion recognized an acquaintance on the other side of the house, and began exchanging with him eager motions of the hands and eyes. When it ended Dumas begged to know what had been said, and was informed that the gentleman was a friend of Signor Arami who had been away for three years. "He told me," said Signor Arami, "that he had been married in Naples, and then had traveled for three years with his wife in Austria and France; that a daughter was born and died; and that he had arrived by steamboat yesterday, but could not bring his wife to the opera with him because she had suffered so much from sea sickness as to be unable to come." Dumas was so astonished that he went privately and verified this account; and he adds other equally long and complicated conversations which came under his notice at Syracuse and Naples.—N. Y. Sun.

His Explanation.

FARMERS AND WHEELMEN.

Why They Should Work Together in the Good Roads Crusade.

Otto Dorner, of Milwaukee, Wis., chairman of the good roads bureau of the League of American Wheelmen, recently delivered an excellent good roads address before the Chautauqua assembly at Dixon, Ill. His remarks related especially to the attitude of the league towards the farmers, and its essential features, embodied in the following article, cannot fail to be of general interest:

Now the great question before us is, said Mr. Dorner, how shall we obtain better country highways. The question is not, do we need good roads, but how shall we get them? Road building in the United States has been left entirely in the hands of the farmers and in charge of the local town authorities. These local authorities as a rule have no knowledge of the science of road building, and 50 years of experience has shown a great deal of labor wasted and vast amounts of road taxes collected in vain.

In many places our roads to-day are no better than they were 20 and 30 years ago. A radical improvement in the system itself must be made.

The League of American Wheelmen has been the subject of much criticism on account of its agitation for better highways. We have been accused of selfishness in the matter.

It is believed by many that we wheelmen expect farmers to load themselves up with taxes that they might build roads for the convenience of bicycle riders. No greater mistake could be made. We of the League of American Wheelmen who are engaged in this agitation for better roads feel that the farmer to-day bears his full share of public taxes, and that they should not be unnecessarily added to. We feel that a mistake has been made in the past in expecting farmers alone to pay for building roads, and in leaving the entire responsibility for our roads in their hands. The farmers of the United States are but a fraction of our population, and they are by no means the only ones who will profit by the construction of good roads. It is claimed that in the state of New York every farmer is obliged to build roads for eight persons out of the state population. Why should not the other seven contribute to their cost?

OTTO DORNER.
(Known as the Apostle of Good Roads.)

While good roads would save the farmers immense amounts in hauling products, this saving would indirectly benefit the whole population. Neither is the farmer the only one who travels the country highways. Country merchants, doctors and professional men, peddlers, pleasure seekers, and last but not least the wheelmen, would be directly benefited by good roads. It is unjust, therefore, that the farmer alone should pay for building these roads.

I am glad of the opportunity to say to a gathering of farmers that the League of American Wheelmen proposes to help them in bringing about a proper division of the cost of good roads, so that the city people, the capitalists, merchants and manufacturers, the wealthy corporations, railroad, insurance and telephone companies; in fact every class of people, shall contribute to the cost of building them. The League of American Wheelmen believes that many of our country roads should be built by state aid; that a part of the cost of good roads should be paid out of a State tax, which would be levied upon all property and all classes of people alike, so that every taxpayer shall contribute a proportionate amount, according to the amount of property he owns. We propose that the states shall help to build roads, and to divide their total cost between the people of the locality, who are most directly benefited, and the adjoining property owners whose land rises in value as a result of the improvement, and the state, as representing the entire population. This is not a Utopian plan; it is not a theory only, but has been adopted in practice with great success in New Jersey, in Connecticut, in Rhode Island and, in a modified form, in Massachusetts. New Jersey has become famous for the fine roads she has built. These were constructed by a state aid system under which their cost is divided about as I have indicated. The farmers of New Jersey are enthusiastic over this state aid system, and the towns and counties are glad to pay their share of the cost of these roads so long as the state pays its part. The country districts in New Jersey are overwhelming the state authorities with petitions to assist in the improvement of local roads, and the legislature cannot appropriate funds for the purpose sufficient to meet the demands from the farmers. The New Jersey commissioner of public roads tells me that a large part of his time is occupied listening to the pleadings of farmers that the roads in their districts shall be the first to receive the benefit of state aid.

Our suggestion of state aid is now also being advocated by the leading representative farmers of the United States as the proper solution of this great road-building question. The farmers' national congress has passed resolutions in favor of state aid, and Mr. John M. Stahl, the able and energetic secretary of that organization, is one of its warmest advocates. He has written extensively upon the subject, and has assisted us in our work for state aid before the legislatures. In New York state, in Connecticut, in Pennsylvania and in Wisconsin, the League of American Wheelmen and the farmers' organizations have worked hand in hand for state aid. This is the strongest endorsement which could be given to the efforts of the League of American Wheelmen, and shows that they are aimed in the right direction.

All classes alike are beginning to realize the great economic importance of permanent highways. Farmers feel that they have too long been compelled to build and improve country roads at their own expense, and they are entitled to state support in this great necessary public improvement. Upon these lines, and upon these lines alone, the good roads improvement is bound to succeed, and will succeed, and upon these lines the League of American Wheelmen proposes to keep up its agitation, with the help of the farmers of the United States, until our common roads, neglected until now, the stepchildren, as it were, of a great republic, shall have received at the hands of our legislatures some of that tender care and nursing which has been extended in the past to canals, to steamship lines and to railroads, many of which have grown up almost entirely at public expense.

FEEDING DAIRY COWS.

Conditions That Will Maintain a Full Flow of Milk.

One of the important items in making dairying pay the best profits is to supply such conditions as will best maintain a full flow of milk. It is not the cow that gives the most milk for a short season after calving and while the pasturage is at the best, that gives the most profit, but the cow that gives a good even flow the greater part of the year. While there is much in habit there is more in feed and management. A cow that has been neglected, especially as regards her feeding, during the middle or latter part of summer, usually commences failing in the quantity of milk she will give until in six or seven months after calving she goes dry.

Experience in the management of cows has proved that it is much easier to maintain a good flow of milk by commencing to feed in good season than to allow the milk flow to begin to fail and then attempt to bring her back to a full flow again. Hence it is always best to keep a watch on the pastures, and whenever they begin to fail to commence feeding. Some dairymen feed the cows a little mill feed night and morning even when pasturage is at its best.

But on most farms all through the growing season green feed is much the cheapest. The second growth of clover, millet, sowed sorghum or fodder can be cut off and fed as needed, and if care is taken to feed it ... flow of milk can be maintained. More than with any other kind of stock good feeding is necessary with the milch cows. It is only from the surplus food over and above what is needed for the support of animal life that the milk is made and liberal feeding is necessary if a full flow is maintained. With care in good season the habit of milk-giving during the greater part of the year can be established, and this is always a valuable trait in the dairy cow.

The best time to commence to establish the habit of long milk-giving is when the heifer is first giving milk, but if regulated at that time and the young cow is allowed to go dry early now is a good time to begin. Feed well and milk regularly. With care and persistence this defect in the early training may be overcome. But be sure she has plenty to eat all through the season.—St. Louis Republic.

CURED OF LYNCHING.

How a Texan Had His Feelings Changed About Hanging Men.

"No," said the Texan, "I hain't had a hand in a hangin' for a long time an' ef the Lord fergives me fer what I have had to do with them I won't do it again.

"You see it was this a-way: Long about five years ago, come next August, and it was hotter'n Phil Sheridan in Texas that year, me and four er five of the boys come across a peaked-lookin' feller one day with a hoss that we knowed didn't belong to him. We stopped him very polite and ast him where he got it, and he said he was a stranger there and had nothin' but a wagon about seven mile back, and off the road, with a dead hoss hitched to it and a sick little gal in it likely to die, and he was out seein' ef he couldn't find a doctor er a woman er somebody to do somethin', fer the little gal was all he had on earth and he couldn't stand to have her die like that. He told us he had picked up the hoss we found him ridin' because he was not able to walk fast enough, and wouldn't we fer God's sake tell him where he could find somebody to see the little gal, and then ef we wanted to squar him up with Texas fer takin' the hoss, he wouldn't have a word to say.

"Well, we had heerd that kind of a story many a time, and the first one that had been spread out before us saved the man's life and lost us a hoss and a subscription fer the sufferers that we took up, and we had been learned a lesson. So when this chap gave us a racket like that we give him seven minutes fer pra'r and swung him up.

"That was the end of it fer the present, but about a month after that me and one of the boys happened to be ridin' along the road where that feller told us about his little gal, and we seen something that I reckon I won't forget ef I live to be 1,000 years old. There was only a ramshackle old wagon with a skeleton of a horse in the shafts, and layin' on some old rags in the wagon was the little bones of a child, all picked clean and white by the buzzards, just like the hoss was.

"I kinder choked up when I seen that, and my pardner done the same, and while I was standin' there thinkin' he reached down under the side of the wagon bed and picked up a slip of paper pinned to the wood. It was wrote on with a lead pencil, and was mighty near faded out, but what was left was this—taking from his pocket very carefully a silver box, from which he took a small and crumpled sheet of paper bearing upon it the line, in a child's hand: 'Dere pa i cant wate no longer for you to cum Because I—' That was all there was to it," he concluded, "and then me and my pardner looked at each other and never said a word. There was a big funeral for the little gal and her pa and the pore old hoss that died in the harness, but it'll take a good day more'n any funeral to set me straight with myself and put my feelin's like they was before I found them bones and this little scrap of writin'. And I don't feel the same about swingin' a man up fer stealin' a hoss, neither."—Washington Star.

DOG ACTORS.

Heroic and Important Actions in the Play Performed by Canines.

A stirring melodrama, in which all the heroic and important actions were performed by dogs, was played in Glasgow, Scotland, recently. The manager is an American. His production is called "Signal Lights."

The dog Towser, after the murder of an old squire by the villain, changes the knives lying beside the body, thereby saving the hero from a charge of murder; the dog Leo prevents the hero from the would-be assassin's pocket; the St. Bernard Bruno rescues the heroine from drowning; and a tramp who comes to the villain's assistance is tackled by the bulldog Ned.

But this is not all. Act IV., which presents the "great railroad sensation," is thus described on the playbill:

"The girl, Romp, is fastened with strong ropes to the railway line—the train is fast approaching—the villain changes the signal from 'danger' to 'all right'—the signalman has been chloroformed in the hut, but his faithful dog, 'Duke,' rushes in and tears the chloroformed handkerchief from the face of his prostrate master—the dog 'Towser' rushes in and changes the signal to 'danger'—the dog, 'Prince,' also enters and unties the rope which binds his mistress to the line, and drags her from the track as the train comes steaming on, and stops through the changing of 'The Signal Lights.'"

In the last act the dog Hero steals an important will from the desk of the villain and hides it in a box, "thereby preventing the estate of Romp Henderson falling into the hands of her persecutors."—N. Y. Journal.

Queer Happenings.

While one man may fall from the roof of a house and escape unhurt, another will receive a fatal injury from merely stubbing his toe. Frank Pommer, a wealthy New Yorker, lost his life because some one stepped on his foot, blood poisoning following the bruise. Dennis Cummings fell 11 stories down an elevator shaft and was uninjured. Mrs. Margaret Ryan, of Philadelphia, fell out of bed, broke her hip, and died of the injury. Last summer in Camden a man was drowned in water that was hardly knee deep, having fallen from an attack of vertigo. Another man remained afloat in mid-ocean half a day and was rescued. Nobody can explain why things happen as they do. They simply happen, that's all.—Philadelphia Press.

FINDS A REMARKABLE MICROBE.

Prof. Rand's Discovery May Mean Much to Medical Science.

What may prove to be one of the most interesting and important discoveries of modern times has been made by Prof. A. F. Rand, of New York city, in the form of a microbe hitherto unknown to science.

It is most minute, yet displays an activity that is astonishing, devouring all within which it comes in contact energetically. Especially is this true of the human blood, a drop of which it seizes upon with savageness.

They attack the red corpuscle, and it may be that this discovery might lead to important results in the institution of disease, which these microbes may be directly responsible for, since they seize upon the blood of sickly persons in preference to that from perfectly healthy organisms.

The first discovery was made in the east, but the professor removed to Sterling, Col., in order to study them in a milder climate. They propagate by the million in a half darkened room, but a ray of light means death.

The mouth is the greatest organ discernible in the microbe. Beyond this Prof. Rand has not yet gone with his investigations, which may mean so much to the world of science in general.

FOR A CHRISTIAN JUBILEE.

Cardinal Jacobini Calls Upon Catholics Throughout the World.

The Rome correspondent of the New York Freeman's Journal has a cabinet letter written by Cardinal Jacobini and addressed to all Catholic bishops throughout the world, proposing one of the most widespread series of religious events probably ever held. These extraordinary religious services, it is intended, shall commemorate the close of the nineteenth and the beginning of the twentieth century. The project put forth by Cardinal Jacobini is the result of the desire to respond to the wish of Pope Leo XIII. to consecrate the transition from one century to the other by "an extraordinary invocation of the Divine assistance of Jesus Christ, as a happy prestige of peace and concord." The letter shows that the idea has the "full approbation of his holiness, and Catholic delegates from all nations assembled in congress in Rome to promote its realization." The communication prays the cooperation of various diocesan heads in the direction of the creation of the national committees to act with the main body.

DAUGHTER BORN TO WHITNEYS.

Cornelius Vanderbilt Welcomes Advent of His First Grandchild.

A daughter has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney at Newport, R. I. Mrs. Whitney is the daughter of Cornelius Vanderbilt, and this is his first grandchild. Mrs. Vanderbilt was expected to arrive from Europe before this, but will not come for another week.

Harry Payne Whitney, eldest son of William C. Whitney, was married to Miss Gertrude Vanderbilt, the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, at The Breakers, the Newport home of the Vanderbilts, on Tuesday, August 26, 1896. The ceremony is said to have been the most magnificent Newport has ever witnessed. Mr. and Mrs. Whitney spent their honeymoon in the Berkshire hills and Lenox.

At the latter place Mrs. Whitney was thrown from a horse while riding in the park and was badly shaken up.

It is lighted by electricity, which also furnishes motive power for any tools that may be used. In tipping over the cases of ballast the bell rises to the surface itself.

The duelling pistol now occupies its proper place, in the museum of the collector of relics of barbarism. The pistol ought to have beside it the pestle that turned out pills like bullets, to be shot like bullets at the target of the liver. But the pestle is still in evidence, and will be, probably, until everybody has tested the virtue of Ayer's sugar coated pills. They treat the liver as a friend, not as an enemy. Instead of driving it, they coax it. They are compounded on the theory that the liver does its work thoroughly and faithfully under obstructing conditions, and if the obstructions are removed, the liver will do its daily duty. Bullittsville.

On the 12th inst. the Ladies' Aid Society of the Bullittsburg Baptist Church gave a most enjoyable entertainment in the interest of the Ludlow Baptist Church. It was given upon the lawn at the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Duncan. The veranda was transformed into a stage, brilliantly lighted with Japanese lanterns, and for one hour a group of frieuds sat enraptured with the lovely music, both vocal and instrumental, rendered by our own girls and boys, assisted by Mr. Alvin Raushaw, of Covington.

The first upon the programme was a chorus, rendered by seven young ladies and three gentlemen. The audience showed their appreciation of the music by their hearty applause.

Next was an instrumental duet—"Revel of the Witches"—by Miss Zayda Gaines and Miss Nellie Duncan. It was a beautiful piece of music, played strictly in accordauce with the rules of the art.

A quartette—"Sweet Savior Mine"—by Misses Grace Grant and Zayda Gaines, and Messrs. Alvin Raushaw and Courtney Walton. The wedding of the voices composing this quartette produced music that would soothe a savage breast, would soften rocks and cause water to flow from a lover's eyes. Miss Grace has a sweet, lovely soprano. Miss Zayda, has a deep, rich contralto, thoroughly cultivated. Courtney, a light, clear, mellow tenor, and Mr. Henshaw, a full, strong, sonorous basso, carefully cultivated and completely under control.

Instrumental quartette, by Zayda Gaines on mandolin, Mr. Will Graves on guitar, Dr. Hays on picalo and Mr. Fannie Riley on piano. This was more loudly encored than any music of the evening, and well deserved it.

Vocal duet—"Life's Dream is O'er"—by Misses Grace Grant and Zayda Gaines. This song made me so wholly insensible to surrounding objects that ere I was aware of it, Miss Bessie Cropper was reciting "The Modern Lochinvar." This was the hit of the evening. Miss Bessie recited it beautifully, correctly and expressively.

Next, an instrumental duet, by Misses Beulah and Zayda Gaines. It is only necessary to say that both ladies are spleudid musicians.

Vocal solo—"Lucky Jim"—by Mr. Ranshaw. Mr. Ranshaw was the hero of the entertainment, and while he was singing about "Lucky Jim," I thought how much more appropriate it would be for him to sing Lucky Alvin. Three weeks ago he entered our social circle as a lamb, to-day he leaves it as a lion. In that short time he captured the hearts of all the ladies and excited the envy of all the men comprising our social circle.

Vocal quartette—"Moonlight"—Mrs. Fannie Riley, Miss Grace Grant, Miss Zayda Gaines and Mr. Raushaw. This was a very beautiful song, artistically rendered.

After an instrumental quartette on mandolin, guitar, picalo and piano, all present were invited to partake of a free lunch. A novel way of serving the lunch was adopted by the ladies. Two small baskets containing a lunch, were tied together, and the name of a lady present was placed in one of them, the gentleman selecting a pair of these baskets was expected to lunch with the lady whose name it contained.

Mrs. N. S. Walton and Miss Maggie Grant, of Grant county, were the lucky ones. They drew the beaux of the evening.

The entertainment was a financial as well as a social success. The receipts were about $20.

Everyone connected with the entertainment performed their part well, the ladies of the Aid Society, as committee on arrangements, Miss Zayda Gaines as musical manager, and Mr. and Mrs. Duncan and their two charming daughters, as host and hostess.

The Big Whale at Lawrenceburg Fair.

The big Whale that has been viewed by so many, and was at Chicago during the World's Fair, will be at the Lawrenceburg wharf during the week of the Fair. This will give those who have not seen this great monster a fine chance to view this leviathan of the deep as well as go to the Fair. No man, woman or child should fail to see it—it is worth going miles to see; this is no fake, but a real, genuine whale, 65 feet long, weighed, when captured, 75 tons, measuring 35 feet around the body, its tongue weighed 3,500 pounds. 25 people can stand in its mouth at one time. See it by all means—it costs you only 15 cents, your child, 10 cents.

What it Will Do.

I began taking Bouiton's Cough Remedy and began to improve with the first dose, and within three weeks was entirely well. I can not say enough in favor of Boulton's Cough Remedy. Respectfully,

MRS. E. J. MARSHALL.

We are under obligations to Mrs. D. M. Snyder for the premium nutmeg at the Harvest Home, and a large watermelon that was exhibited. They were delicious.

Last Sunday lightning struck and burnt a barn on the Hamel Carter farm in the Hebron neighborhood. It was full of farm produce belonging to John L. Conner.

TRY ME:

Snow Flake Patent Flour, Boone county straight flour. Also have plenty of mill feed and coal at very low prices. Cash for wheat and flour exchanged for wheat. BEN BELDON.
Petersburg, Ky.

Our farmer friend, Jack Sandford, was in town, last Friday. Owing to the drought his popcorn balls will not mature in time for the Florence fair. His toothpick crop is also a total failure for same reason, but if the cold weather does not interfere, he will have a good lot of stovewood for sale in the spring.

The principal social event of the town for some time was the cotillion party at J. M. Lassing's, last Thursday night. A large crowd was there, and among those present were young ladies and gentlemen from Bullittsville, Petersburg, Bellevue and Union. The festivities were continued until about 4 a. m. Friday.

In a letter from John W. Gaines, of Utzinger, who is now in Harper county, Kansas, he says they have there the finest crop of wheat and the poorest crop of corn he ever saw. The corn was destroyed three or four weeks ago by the hot winds, but there's enough old corn on hand to supply the demand. Forty or fifty bushels of wheat to the acre is a common yield. He says he has his share of wheat and burnt corn.

Next Saturday the Democrats of this county will assemble in precinct meetings at their respective voting places to select delegates to the county convention on the 30th inst., to nominate a candidate for county representative. So far there does not seem to be much interest manifested in the canvass, although there are six avowed candidates, with about the same number of dark horses submitting to the grooming process. The county convention may be a very interesting little assemblage.

The repairs on the Boone House are under way. The contractor, J. B. Berkshire, with his corps of industrious assistants are pushing the work, and in a few weeks they will have the old building metamorphosed into a good looking hostelry. The old building has approached the century mark, and has needed remodeling for many years. When the work now in progress is completed the old landmark will present a more commodious and modern appearance, and mine host Crisler will be in a position to accommodate the public.

The second annual exhibition of the North Kentucky Agricultural Association—the Florence Fair—begins next Wednesday morning, and continues four days. The directors have improved the grounds considerably since the last fair, and the accomodations for man and beast are now equal to those of any fair in the State. An abundance of water is a necessity at a fair, and to meet this demand a good well, several cisterns and a pond have been constructed, and the supply of water will be equal to any demand that can arise. With a liberal premium list and the excellent accommodations, there is no doubt but the fair this year will be much better than the last one, which was a success in every department. The directors feel assured that the attendance next week will be large, and that the exhibition will surpass the expectations of the public.

The literary exercises of the Epworth League last Friday evening were very interesting, and were witnessed by quite a good sized audience. The little folks who took part are entitled to praise for their singing, recitations, &c. They added largely to the success of the exercises.

The subject of "Attention" was then introduced and very ably discussed by Prof. J. H. Craven.

The next subject before the Institute for discussion was "Habit," introduced by Miss Lizzie Kipp, after which came "Memory," by Prof. Geo. T. Jack.

A recess of 10 minutes was taken, after which Prof. Newton closed the discussion on the subject "Attention" and introduced and ably handled the subject of "Penmanship." Adjourned.

The Institute met Tuesday morning, pursuant to adjournment, and was called to order by the Superintendent, and after a song by the Institute, Miss M. F. Hamrick, of Lexington, Ky., read an excellent paper on "The Motives and Will." Miss Lizzie Gordon followed with a short but interesting essay on "Imagination." Prof. B. W. Nelson then introduced the subject of "School Management" by reading a short and very carefully prepared essay on the subject, after which the Instructor gave a short talk to the Institute, covering all the ground gone over by the teachers.

The Common school studies were discussed after the morning recess. The following teachers were enrolled this morning: Miss Harriett Bedinger, C. C. Richmond, Hale Keency, G. S. Haun, W. E. Cook.

SHERMAN'S ANSWER

To Japan Reiterates the Position Heretofore Taken By the Administration

As to the Propriety of Annexing Hawaii to the United States—The Interests of Japan, However, will Be Safeguarded—Postal Service for Klondike

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—The Canadian government and the United States have agreed upon co-operation in augmenting the postal facilities for the Klondike region and the result will shortly be evidenced in a substantial doubling of the mail service from the coast into that district. The reply of Canada to Acting Postmaster General Shallenberger's proposition to establish an exchange of mails at Circle City and Dawson City reached here Thursday. It is a counter proposition made by Canada, the latter agreeing to perform the service from Dawson City down to Dyea by means of a contract of her own, with reimbursments to be made by this government for its share of the service.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—Secretary Sherman has submitted to the Japanese government an answer to Japan's last note relating to the annexation of Hawaii to the United States. The answer was delivered to Mr. Hoshi, the Japanese minister, last Saturday. It is in reply to Japan's note of July 10, which up to that time had not been acknowledged.

Sherman's answer is marked by its friendly expressions toward Japan, which gives special satisfaction in view of the somewhat strained relations resulting from the previous correspondence. Two features are brought out by the answer—it reiterates the position heretofore taken by the secretary of state as to the right and propriety of annexing Hawaii to the United States. With this, however, is coupled an assurance that the interests of Japan in Hawaii will be fully safeguarded. It also expresses satisfaction at the plan of arbitration between Japan and Hawaii, on the question of Japanese immigration to Hawaii.

The answer is largely an elaboration of Mr. Sherman's former letter, and the policies expressed in no way differ from those previously laid down by him.

Minister Hoshi has cabled the substance of the answer to the Tokyo government and the full text of the answer has been forwarded. It will not reach Japan until September 7, and no action may be taken until the text is before the Japanese foreign office. The Japanese legation is reticent over the dispatch, although there is no effort to conceal the satisfaction felt over the friendly spirit displayed throughout Mr. Sherman's answer. The attention of the Tokyo government has been particularly directed toward these expressions of good will.

STEEL ARMOR PLATE

READING, Pa., Aug. 20.—J. H. Carpenter, founder of the Carpenter steel works, this city, of which he was formerly general manager, has prepared a statement showing that steel armor plate can be furnished to the government at a trifling figure compared with what is now being paid. Mr. Carpenter is a well known steel expert and inventor and was formerly in the United States navy. The carpenter steel works, from which Mr. Carpenter has retired, have up to this time furnished the government with nearly $1,000,000 worth of projectiles, and a $500,000 order is now being filled. His price is so far below the government limit of $300 a ton that the Bethlehem and Carnegie companies say they can not meet it with their Harveyized nickel steel plates, as to occasion the armor plate board much surprise.

Mr. Carpenter claims that by the new (pneumatic) process, steel of the best physical properties and chemical conditions can be uniformly made and much waste avoided.

DETRICK TRAGEDY.

It is Claimed the Murder Mystery Will Soon Be Solved.

BELLEFONTAINE, O., Aug. 20.—Detective Archambault, of Cincinnati, who is working on the Detrick murder case, states that he believes he has a positive clew to the perpetrator of the crime, and that the mystery will shortly be solved. He will give no intimation as to who he believes is the guilty party.

There are some indications now that the alleged admission of Tiny Ford that he killed the Detricks is but an attempt to place the crime on him in order to secure the reward. Nellie Ellsworth, the little girl, under a running fire of questions from a reporter Thursday, broke down and cried. She said that Minnie Stewart had told her to tell the story about Ford. The Stewart girl has not been seen recently.

It is said "Tiny" was in a poker room in this city late on the night of the Detrick murder, and will have no trouble in proving an alibi if his companions are not afraid of telling the truth for fear of getting into trouble for gambling.

Strikers Close a Shoe Factory.

THREE BOMBS

Exploded in Three Different Points in Constantinople—The City Almost in a Panic Over the News.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 19.—The city was almost in a panic Wednesday night over the news of bomb explosions attempted or accomplished Wednesday afternoon at three different points. The explosions are attributed to the Armenians. At 3 o'clock a bomb was thrown just outside the police headquarters in the Para district. It failed to explode. Almost at the same moment an Armenian, whose name it is believed is Garavbet, was arrested at the Imperial Ottoman bank, in the Galata district. He was carrying a package of explosives which he was trying to ignite.

A second bomb was exploded in a private road between the vizierate (offices of the grand vizier) and the state council house. One man was killed and several others were severely injured. The explosion shattered windows in the vicinity and did other slight damage.

The police have made a number of arrests. Reports of the outrages spread quickly through the city and caused the greatest excitement. The police and the guards at the sultan's palace were taking extraordinary precautions Wednesday night, which have given color to the rumor that the bomb-throwing is a part of a widespread plot.

The most abject terror prevails in the precincts of the palace. In many parts of the city, particularly in the vicinity of the police headquarters and state council house, all the shops were closed, and it was necessary to call out the entire police force and the military; before anything like calm was restored. The Armenian who was arrested at the Imperial Ottoman bank was trying, it is reported, to place the bundle of explosives near one of the main entrances. The crowd who saw him delivered by the bank officials to the police would have made very short work of him if they had not been prevented.

The police are very reticent as to the reason for summoning the palace guard and closing all the doors and gateways, but it is rumored that a similar outrage was attempted within the palace limits and that the approaches were barred to prevent the exit of the would-be perpetrator.

THE CONTRIBUTIONS

To the Needy Miners of the Brazil District Are Falling Off.

BRAZIL, Ind., Aug. 19.—The contributions to the needy miners of this district are falling off in a most distressing manner. Coming from all parts of the state and all sources outside of this city, only six dollars was received Tuesday to feed the 7,500 hungry and distressed. Wednesday was the regular distribution day at the commissary, but so little was received that it was decided to not open the commissary at all. This city is still donating liberally, but is unable to look after the entire number.

The plant of the Central Iron & Steel Co., of this city, has reopened, giving employment to between 300 and 400 men. The mill is using West Virginia coal, and the efforts of the miners to stop it have been fruitless.

GEN. LONGSTREET.

Reported That the Aged Veteran is About to Marry Miss Ellen Dortch.

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 19.—It is reported that Gen. James G. Longstreet, the veteran of many wars, is engaged to be married to Miss Ellen Dortch, assistant state librarian. Miss Dortch is 29 and the general 76, but he looks younger and carries himself with a sturdy air.

Miss Dortch is one of the most prominent women in the state. Through her influence the "Dortch" bill, legalizing women librarians, passed the legislature and she is a candidate under it to succeed Col. John Milledge as state librarian. Both deny the rumor, but their friends declare that there is small doubt of its truth.

President Faure's Exciting Start for St. Petersburg.

PARIS, Aug. 19.—The departure of President Faure on his vist to the czar at St. Petersburg Wednesday was marked by a scene of greatest excitement, accompanied by the circulation of the wildest kind of rumors. After his departure a bomb exploded along the route the president had followed, and although no damage was done and in spite of the fact that nobody was hurt the most intense excitement prevailed for a long time afterwards, and the sensational reports had it that those who exploded the bomb had intended an outrage of a more serious nature.

Captain and Mate Murdered.

BOSTON, Aug. 19.—A cable received in this city from Buenos Ayres says Capt. J. W. Whitman and Mate William Hansburgh, of the schooner Olive Pecker, which sailed from this port on June 27, have been murdered by the crew. The principal owners of the vessel are J. P. Ellicott & Co., of Boston, who also sent out the barkentine Herbert Fuller on which Capt. Nash and his wife and Mate Bamberg were murdered. The Pecker was built at Belfast, Me.

The John A. Dix Sinks.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 19.—The former government boat, John A. Dix, recently turned over to the Louisiana naval reserve, sank Wednesday morning at the foot of Jackson street.

No Such Letter Received.

PLATTSBURG, N. Y., Aug. 19.—President McKinley and party returned to the hotel from the yacht Washita at 7 o'clock Tuesday night. Secretary Porter, when asked regarding a report that Secretary Sherman had written a letter of resignation to President McKinley, said that no such letter had been received by the president.

Gen. Weyler Denies It.

HAVANA, via Key West, Fla., Aug. 19.—Capt. Gen. Weyler denies that he resigned or that he has any present intention of resigning. Heavy rains are failing in all parts of the island.

OPERATORS MEET.

The Conference, it is Thought, Will Bring About One of Two Results.

Either Arbitration to Settle the Trouble, or the Mines Will Be Started With Imported Men—They Have Asked for a Conference With the Miners' Officers.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Aug. 20.—The meeting of the coal operators Thursday and Thursday night will bring about one of two results—either arbitration will settle the strike or the mines will be started with imported men. Friday will decide which course shall be pursued. The operators are evidently in favor of arbitration in preference to a forcible opening of their mines. This was evidenced Thursday when Messrs. Murray and Osborne, representing the meeting, wired National President Ratchford at Columbus asking if Saturday next would be suitable for a conference at Pittsburgh of both sides.

The Rend and Robbins interests Wednesday night telegraphed Ratchford asking him to come to Pittsburgh to try and settle the strike. District President Dolan followed the telegram to Columbus, and is endeavoring by personal persuasion to bring about such a meeting. Dolan Thursday telegraphed that Ratchford was willing to confer but preferred not to meet with the Pittsburgh operators only, but an interstate representation. The telegram sent by the meeting Thursday insisted that Indiana and Illinois would not consent to a conference and it now remains with President Ratchford to say whether or not he will meet with the Pittsburgh operators and trust to the others to follow the decision there made.

It is believed that a conference will be held here on Saturday, because just after the session of the operators had adjourned, Col. Rend received a telegram from his son Joseph, who is in Columbus, saying:

"Dolan says Saturday was selected for conference. Executive board will be in session Friday."

It is inferred from this that Ratchford has concluded to attend the conference.

When Mr. Dolan went to Columbus Wednesday night he was given absolute authority by Rend, Robbins and others to arrange for unqualified arbitration, and he has been working to this end all day.

Should the arbitration meeting not be arranged for, it was decided by the operators at their meeting Thursday night that immediate preparations for starting their mines non-union shall be begun. The meeting adjourned until Saturday morning to give time for Ratchford to answer officially.

Should Ratchford's reply be adverse, mines will be started in a few days. Machine mines will be selected for the initial movement, as none of the pick mine owners care for hostilities to begin at their mines.

From expressions used by operators Thursday night, they are more determined than ever to start their mines, peaceably or otherwise.

MINE OFFICIALS

Laying the Plans for a Grand Coup—A Conference of All Federated Unions to Be Called.

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 20.—The officials of the United Mine Worker's have awakened to a full realization of the fact that a crisis is at hand in the great strike and are preparing for a final effort. The proceedings of the meeting of the national executive board have been guarded with the greatest secrecy, but enough has been learned to indicate that plans are being laid for a grand coup. It was learned at midnight from an official source that a resolution was adopted by the national board providing for the calling of a conference of all federated unions at St. Louis, August 30. The purpose is to secure the co-operation of all these organizations.

They will be asked not merely for sympathy, but to join in the great strike. The plan is to tie up traffic on the railroads and in other channels of business, so that the supply of coal may be effectually cut off and thus force the operators to negotiate for a general settlement of the wage question. Failing in this the miners' officials do not intimate what course will be taken.

J. B. FORD,

A Noted Criminal, to Be Extradited From England to the United States.

LONDON, Aug. 20.—A burglar, known as Edward Simpson, now serving a term at Workwood Scrubs prison, has been identified as J. B. Ford, one of the most notorious criminals in the United States, and wanted in several American cities for a great variety of crimes.

On the application of the United Stated embassy, an extradition warrant was issued for him at Bow street police station Thursday, charging him with forgery in Cincinnat, where he operated extensively under the name of Charles Fisher.

Ford, alias Fisher, alias Simpson, will be extradited in November next, on the expiration of his present term of imprisonment.

Time Record Lowered.

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—A. W. W. Evans, of New Brunswick, N. J., the amateur long distance wheelman, has lowered the time record from New York to Philadelphia and return to 3 hours, 42 minutes and 30 seconds.

Confesion That May Clear a Life Convict.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Aug. 20.—Henry Smith, a Negro convict, has made a confession in which he exonerates Morgan Johnson, another convict, who is serving a life sentence for the alleged murder of Guard Pomp Ball in 1885. Smith says the murder was committed by himself and three other convicts, named Patterson, Griggs and Ray. Ball was in charge of a gang of convicts who were being worked on a railroad in the eastern part of the state, and the murder was committed on a train. Smith has made a statement to Gov. Bradley asking that Johnson be pardoned

THE VETERANS.

One of the Greatest Parades Ever Seen in Troy, N. Y.—The City Ablaze With Welcome for McKinley and the Army of the Potomac.

TROY, N. Y., Aug. 21.—President McKinley and Secretary Alger arrived in the city at 9:30 o'clock Friday on President Oliphant's private car attached to the regular train which left Plattsburg Thursday night. At the station he was met by Adj. Gen. Tillinghast and Gov. Black's military secretary, Col. Treadwell. There was a crowd and plenty of cheering but the president refused to speak and entered a carriage and was driven at once to the Troy house, which will be his headquarters. At 10 o'clock he was taken with his party to see a great collar factory, with over 2,000 girls and women employes at work.

Senator Edward Murphy accompanied the president and Secretary Alger to the factory, and the proprietors showed them through. Every one of the 2,000 employes was decorated with a flag and many of the machines were also adorned with the national colors. In each room, except the laundry and machinery room, the operatives stood up when the president entered and cheer vociferously. After the inspection he said: "It was not only a novel, but to me a very wonderful sight." At the conclusion of the inspection the president and escort went across the river to the Watervliet arsenal, where the great and interesting work of shrinking a gun jacket upon a gun was witnessed. The national salute was fired and the guard turned out, and President McKinley expressed satisfaction at the busy condition of things. As the party crossed the river every boat within a mile of the city water front blew a salute.

Following closely upon the arrival of President McKinley the various army corps, composing the Army of the Potomac, met independently at headquarters, heretofore established for them, and held their business meeting. The corps comprising the Army of the Potomac, were the Third, Second, Twelfth, Ninth, Fifth, Eleventh and Sixth, officered as follows:

Third Corps—Capt. Isaac P. Gragg, of Boston, president; Gen. Rusling, of Trenton, N. J., vice president; secretary, E. L. Welling, of Pennington, N. J., and the office is a permanent one. The treasurer is Maj. Wm. P. Shreve, of Boston.

Second Corps—President, Gen. John R. Brooke, U. S. A.; vice presidents, Gen. R. N. Batchelder, U. S. A.; Gen. John Gibbon and Col. Thos. E. Barker; secretary and treasurer, Col. Charles W. Scott, historian, Gen. Francis A. Walker; executive committee, Capt. Gustavo Magnitzky, Capt. W. H. Driver, Capt. A. Siverney, Maj. F. C. Love, Col. S. P. Corliss.

Twelfth Corps—Capt. Walker, of Boston, president; C. W. Boyce, of Buffalo, vice president; Surgeon John J. H. Lowe, Mt. Clair, N. J., secretary and treasurer.

Ninth Corps—Col. Andrew D. Baird, of Brooklyn, president; Gen. H. H. Thomas, vice president; Maj. L. C. Brackett, of New York, secretary and treasurer.

Fifth Corps—President, Gen Fitz John Porter, U. S. A., retired; first vice president, Gen. A. P. Martin, U. S. A.; second vice president, Capt. R. Burnet Smith, late U. S. A.; secretary and treasurer, Brevet Lieut. Col. A. M. Clark, U. S. V.; executive committee, Capt. John C. White, U. S. A. retired; Brevet Maj. L. N. Tucker, 18th Massachusetts Volunteers; Private George A. Sawin, 22d Massachusetts Volunteers.

Eleventh Corps—Gen. Louis P. Di Cesnola, of New York city, president; Capt. Herbert Dilger, of Luray, Va.; Capt. A. B. Searles, of Pawtucket, R. I.; Capt. Chas. A. Paddock, of New York city, vice presidents; Capt. Francis Irsch, New York city, secretary; Col. A. C. Hamlin, of Bangor, Me., historian.

Sixth Corps—Maj. A. B. Valentine, of Bennington, Vt., president; Capt. A. M. Beattie, of Lancaster, N. H., Capt. Jas. H. Love, of Jersey City, and Col. Rob't L. Orr, of Philadelphia, vice presidents; Sergt. Henry C. Larowe, of Brooklyn, recording secretary; Capt. George E. Brown, of Portland, Me., corresponding secretary; Col. Samuel Truesdell, of Brooklyn, treasurer.

The parade in honor of the president and the Army of the Potomac was one of the largest ever seen in troy. Nearly 1,800 guardsmen were in line and about 1,000 survivors of the late war. The three national guard companies of Troy acted as escort to the presidential party and Gov. Frank S. Black and staff. All along the line of march the parading column was greeted by the thousands that lined the pavements and filled every available point of vantage.

TROY, N. Y., Aug. 21.—The only active part that the president took in the proceedings of the reunion was in a visit to the Ninth corps, of which he is a member. The corps gave him an ovation and finally elected him honorary president. The president in a few words accepted the honor, signed his name to the register and left the room with the corps' badge upon his breast. He stated that he was a sergeant in the Twenty-third Ohio regiment of the Ninth corps under command of Rutherford B. Hayes.

A Somnambulist's Jump.

CARROLLTON, Ky., Aug. 21.—Ex-Assessor W. W. Whitehead jumped from a third-story window in his home Thursday night while asleep. Result, a broken arm and dangerous internal injuries.

Dollar Wheat in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 21.—The wheat market Friday was the most exciting ever experienced in the history of the exchange. Quotes jumped up 4¾ cents and brought the price beyond the dollar mark. There were sales of No. 2 red at 101 and No. 2 Pennsylvania red was quoted at 102. This is the highest quotation here in many years.

Minister to Russia.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—The commission of Ethan A. Hitchcock, of Missouri, as minister to Russia, was made out at the white house Friday. The appointment dates from August 10.

BLOODSHED.

A Conflict Between the Workers and Strikers Near Pittsburgh.

The Aggressive Workers Escaped Before the Men in the Oak Hill Camp Were Aware of the Fight—Riot Among Negro Workmen at Camp Unity.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Aug. 23.—Religious services were held in the strikers' several camps Sunday, and all were largely attended, but notwithstanding the religious air pervading the camps, a conflict between workers and strikers took place in the afternoon, during which three strikers were badly hurt, but none are in a serious condition. Five of the men who are working for the New York and Cleveland Gas Coal Co., Sunday afternoon went to William Seamon's boarding house, about one-half mile from Oak Hill tipple, where a number of strikers are quartered, for the purpose of persuading the strikers to go to work. The meeting was a stormy one and resulted in Antonio Podasky being shot near the heart, the bullet going almost through his body. Grongron Pimold was shot in the eye and Botiste Dalmese was cut with a razor. The injured men are all strikers. This was the only disturbance recorded at the camps Sunday. The aggressive workmen escaped before the men on the Oak Hill camp were aware of the fight.

The report that Sandy Creek camp will be abandoned was denied by the strikers Sunday and they say 30 men will be sent there from Plum Creek and Turtle Creek.

In addition to the general missionary work for the week the leaders have decided to direct especial work to the prevention of operations at the Sandy Creek mine. The strikers say they will resume their marching tactics Monday morning, claiming that under the ruling of Judge Goff in the West Virginia cases they are given this right.

The sheriff does not say Sunday what course he will pursue in the morning should marching begin, but thinks he is ready to meet every emergency.

Sympathy for the strikers by the farmers and citizens is not diminishing in the least. Sunday there were about 700 visitors to the camp at Sandy creek, many of the farmers who came bringing wagon loads of provisions. Citizens of New Texas sent word that they had plenty of food for the men and wanted them to call on them when needed.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Aug. 23.—Unity, a camp of Negro workmen employed in building the new Pittsburgh, Bessemer & Lake Erie railroad, is keeping up its reputation for riot and bloodshed. Sunday night comes the report from there of a small sized riot, and three or four individual fights, during the progress of which one man was fatally shot and innumerable wounds inflicted on others. It is said that nearly or quite all the Negroes in the camp are armed with revolvers and razors, and are a generally lawless set of men. The record of the day's doings is briefly as follows:

Tom Cash, nicked-named "Powder and Ball," was flourishing a 45-caliber revolver, when John Kelley came along and made some slighting remark at which Cash took offense, and he blazed away at Kelley, the bullet entering the abdomen, cutting its way clear through the stomach and intestines. Kelly is bleeding internally and will die before morning. George Walker and Emanuel Lindsay quarreled over a disolute woman who frequents the camps, and Walker was shot, but not seriously wounded. Next William Matthews and George Smith became involved in a quarrel about something which nobody but themselves know of and Matthews received two bullets from Smith's revolver, one in the arm and another in the leg.

The whole was climaxed by a general fight in which ten shooters engaged. A Negro called Rags was shot in the head and a number of others received shot and razor wounds which were dressed by themselves or friends after the battle was over.

NASHVILLE MAN

Kills His Wife and Brother-in-Law and Then Fatally Wounds Himself.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 23.—J. B. Rich, a young white man, shot and killed his wife Sunday night at the home of her mother in east Nashville. He then killed his brother-in-law, shooting him twice. Then he left the house and while in the yard shot himself twice inflicting wounds from which he is expected to die. The pistol used was a 45-caliber revolver. Rich a week ago filed a bill for divorce against his wife, alleging infidelity. Sunday he was arrested charged with kidnaping one of the children and it is supposed the arrest enraged him and induced him to go to the house of his mother-in-law.

"The Raising of Lazarus."

LONDON, Aug. 23.—Henry Tanner, an American Negro who has been studying painting in Paris for some years, has won the greatest distinction that has come to a member of his race in that field. He recently exhibited in the salon a work entitled "The Raising of Lazarus," which received signal praise from the critics and has been purchased by the French government for the Luxembourg. The artist is a son of a missionary of the African Methodist church. He has studied under Constant.

Fertilizing Works and Schooner Burned.

WOODBURY, N. J., Aug. 23.—The main building of the J. P. Thomas & Sons Co., fertilizer manufacturers on Mantua creek, near Paulsboro, were burned Sunday. The loss is estimated at $250,000, upon which there is about $100,000 insurance. The buildings covered three acres and contained expensive machinery. Only three of the smaller buildings were saved, which included the office and acid house. The schooner Addie B. Bacon, of Philadelphia, which was discharging a cargo at North Carolina dock, took fire and is nearly a total loss.

ENCOURAGEMENT

For Many Persons Who Consider Their Case Hopeless.

Escape by the Skin of Their Teeth, Any Way to Get Into the Gospel Wagon and Away From the Clutches of the Devil.

Dr. Talmage's text Sunday was Job xix., 20, "I am escaped with the skin of my teeth."

Job had it hard. What with boils, and bereavements, and bankruptcy, and a fool of a wife, he wished he was dead; and I do not blame him. His flesh was gone and his bones were dry. His teeth wasted away until nothing but the enamel seemed left. He cried out, "I am escaped with the skin of my teeth."

There has been some difference of opinion about this passage. St. Jerome and Schultens, and Drs. Good and Poole and Barnes have all tried their forceps on Job's teeth. You deny my interpretation and say, "What did Job know about the enamel of the teeth?" He knew everything about it. Dental surgery is almost as old as the race. The mummies of Egypt, thousands of years old, are found to-day with gold filling in their teeth. Ovid, and Horace, and Solomon, and Moses wrote about these important factors of the body. To other provoking complaints Job, I think, has added an exasperating toothache, and putting his hand against the inflamed face he says, "I am escaped with the skin of my teeth."

A very narrow escape, you say, for Job's body and soul; but there are thousands of men who make just as narrow escape for their soul. There was a time when the partition between them and ruin was no thicker than a tooth's enamel; but, as Job finally escaped, so have they.

Paul expresses the same idea by a different figure when he says that some people are "saved as by fire." A vessel at sea is in flames. You go to the stern of the vessel. The boats have shoved off, the flames advance; you can endure the heat no longer on your face. You slide down on the side of the vessel and hold on with your fingers until the forked tongue of the fire begins to lick the back of your hand, and you feel that you must fall, when one of the life boats comes back, and the passengers say they think they have room for one more. The boat swings under you—you drop into it—you are saved. So some men are pursued by temptation until they are partially consumed, but after all get off—"saved by fire."

But I like the figure of Job a little better than that of Paul, because the pulpit has not so much to do with it, and I want to show you if God will help, that some men make narrow escape for their souls, and are saved as "with the skin of their teeth."

It is as easy for some people to look to the Cross as for you to look to this pulpit. Mild, gentle, tractable, loving, you expect them to become Christians. You go over to the store and say, "Grandon joined the church yesterday." Your business comrades say, "That is just what might have been expected." As of the firm of mind." In youth, this person whom I describe was always good. He never broke things. He never laughed when it was improper to laugh. At seven, he could sit an hour in church, perfectly quiet, looking neither to the right hand nor to the left, but straight into the eyes of the minister, as though he understood the whole discussion about the eternal decrees.

He never upset things nor lost them. He floated into the kingdom of God so gradually that it is uncertain just when the matter was decided.

Here is another one who started in life with an uncontrollable spirit. He kept the nursery in an uproar. His mother found him walking on the edge of the housetop to see if he could balance himself. There was no horse that he dared not ride—no tree he could not climb. His boyhood was a long series of predicament; his manhood was reckless; his midlife very awkward. But now he is converted, and you go over to the store and say, "Arkwright joined the church yesterday." Your friends say, "It is not possible! You must be joking." You say, "No, I tell you the truth. He joined the church." Then they reply: "There is hope for any of us if old Arkwright has become a Christian!" In other words, we will admit that it is more difficult for some men to accept the Gospel than for others.

I may be preaching to some who have cut loose from churches, and Bibles, and Sundays, and who have no intention of becoming Christians themselves, and yet you may find yourself escaping, before you leave this house, as with the skin of your teeth." I do not expect to waste this hour. I have seen boats go off from Cape May or Long Branch, and drop their nets, and after awhile come ashore, pulling in the nets without having caught a single fish. It was not a good day, or they had not the right kind of a net. But we expect no such excursion to-day. The water is full of fish, the wind is in the right direction, the Gospel net is strong. O, thou who didst help Simon and Andrew to fish, show us how to cast the net on the right side of the ship.

Some of you, in coming to God, will have to run against skeptical notions. It is useless for people to say sharp and cutting things to those who reject the Christian religion. I can not say such things. By what process of temptation or trial or betrayal you have come to your present state I know not. There are two gates to your nature—the gate of the head and the gate of the heart. The gate of your head is locked with bolts and bars that an archangle could not break, but the gate of your heart swings easily on its hinges. If I assaulted your body with weapons you would meet me with weapons, and it would be sword-stroke for sword-stroke, and wound for wound and blood for blood; but if I come and knock at the door of your house, you open it and give me the best seat in your parlor. If I should come at you now with an argument you would answer me with an argument; if with sarcasm, you would answer me with sarcasm; blow for blow, stroke for stroke; but when I come and knock at the door of your heart you open it and say, "Come in, my brother, and tell me all you know about Christ and Heaven."

Listen to two or three questions: Are you as happy as you used to be when you believed in the truth of the Christian religion? Would you like to have your children travel on the road in which you are now traveling? You had a relative who professed to be a Christian and was thoroughly consistent, living and dying in the faith of the Gospel. Would you not like to live the same quiet life and die the same peaceful death? I hold in my hand a letter sent me by one who has rejected the Christian religion. It says: "I am old enough to know that the joys and pleasures of life are evanescent, and to realize the fact that it must be comfortable in old age to believe in something relative to the future, and to have a faith in some system that proposes to save. I am free to confess that I would be happier if I could exercise the simple and beautiful faith that is possessed by many whom I know. I am not willingly out of the church or out of the faith. My state of uncertainty is one of unrest. Sometime I doubt my immortality, and look upon the deathbed as the closing scene, after which there is nothing. What shall I do that I have not done?". Ah! skepticism is a dark and doleful land. Let me say that this Bible is either true or false. If it be false, we are as well off as you; if it be true, then which of us is safer?

Let me also ask whether your trouble has not been that you confounded Christianity with the inconsistent character of some who profess it? You are a lawyer. In your profession there are mean and dishonest men. Is that anything against the law? You are a doctor. There are unskilled and contemptible men in your profession. Is that anything against medicine? You are a merchant. There are thieves and defrauders in your business. Is that anything against merchandise? Behold, then, the unfairness of charging upon Christianity the wickedness of its professors. We admit some of the charges against those who profess religion. Some of the most gigantic swindles of the present day have been carried on by members of the church. There are men standing in the front rank in the churches who would not be trusted for $5 without good collateral security. They leave their business dishonesties in the vestibule of the church as they go in and sit at the communion. Having concluded the sacrament, they get up, wipe the wine from their lips, go out and take up their sins where they left off. To serve the devil is their regular work; to serve God a sort of play spell. With a Sunday sponge they expect to wipe off from their business slate all the past week's inconsistencies. You have no more right to take such a man's life as a specimen of religion than you have to take the twisted irons and split timbers that lie on the beach at Coney Island as a specimen of an American ship. It is time that we draw a line between religion and the frailties of those who profess it.

Do you not feel that the Bible, take it all in all, is about the best book that the world has ever seen? Do you know any book that has as much in it? If you think, upon the whole, that its influence has been beneficent? I come to you with both hands extended toward you. In one hand I have the Bible, and in the other hand I have nothing. This Bible in one hand I will surrender forever just as soon as in my other hand you can put a book that is better.

I invite you back into the good old-fashioned religion of your fathers—to the God whom they worshiped, to the Bible they read, to the promises on which they leaned, to the consolations which they hung their eternal expectations. You have not been happy a day since you swung off; you will not be happy a minute until you swing back.

Again, there may be some who, in the attempt after a Christian life, will have to run against powerful passions and appetites. Perhaps it is a disposition to anger that you have to contend against, and perhaps, while in a very serious mood, you heard of something that makes you feel that you must swear or die. I know a Christian man who was once so exasperated that he said to a mean customer, "I can not swear at you myself, for I am a member of the church, but if you will go down stairs my partner in business will swear at you." All your good resolutions heretofore have been torn to tatters by explosion of temper. Now there is no harm in getting mad if you only get mad at sin. You need to bridle and saddle those hot-breathed passions, and with them ride down injustice and wrong. There are a thousand things in the world we ought to be mad at. There is no harm in getting red hot if you only bring to the forge that which needs hammering. A man who has no power of righteous indignation is an imbecile. But be sure it is a righteous indignation, and not a petulancy that blurs and unravels and depletes the soul.

There is a large class of persons in mid-life who have still in them appetites that were aroused in early manhood, at a time when they prided themselves on being a "little fast," "high livers," "free and easy," "hale fellows well met." They are now paying in compound interest for troubles they collected 30 years ago. Some of you are trying to escape, and you will—yet very narrowly, "as with the skin of your teeth." God and your own soul only know what the struggle is. Omnipotent grace has pulled out many a soul that was deeper in the mire than you. They line the beach of Heaven—the multitude God has rescued from the thrall of suicidal habits. If you this day turn back on the wrong and start anew, God will help you. Oh, the weakness of human help! Men will sympathize for a while, and then turn you off. If you ask for their pardon, they will give it and say they will try you again; but, falling away again under the power of temptation, they cast you off forever. But God forgives seventy times seven; yea, seven hundred times; yea, though this be the ten thousandth time, He is more earnest, more sympathetic, more helpful this last time than when you took your first minster.

If, with all the influence favorable to a right life, men make so many mistakes, how much harder is it when, for instance, some appetite corrupts its iron grapple into the roots of the tongue, and pulls a man down with hands of destruction! If, under such circumstances, he break away, there will be no sport in the undertaking, no holiday enjoyment, but a struggle in which the wrestlers move from side to side, and bend, and twist. Bad watch for an opportunity to get in a heavier stroke, until with one final effort, in which the muscles are distended, and the veins stand out, and the blood starts, the swarthy habit falls under the knee of the victor—escaped at last as "with the skin of his teeth."

The ship Emma, bound from Gottenburg to Harwich, was sailing on, when the man on the look-out saw something that he pronounced a vessel bottom up. There was something on it that looked like a sea-gull, but was afterward found to be a waving handkerchief. In the small boat the crew pushed out to the wreck, and found that it was a capsized vessel, and that three men had been digging their way out through the bottom of the ship. When the vessel capsized they had no means of escape. The captain took his pen-knife and dug away through the planks until his knife broke. Then an old nail was found, with which they attempted to scrape their way up out of the darkness, each one working until his hand was well-nigh paralyzed, and he sank back faint and sick. After long and tedious work the light broke through the bottom of the ship. A handkerchief was hoisted. Help came. They were taken on board the vessel and saved. Did ever men come so near a watery grave without dropping into it? How narrowly they escaped—escaped only "with the skin of their teeth." There are men who have been capsized of evil passions, and capsized mid-ocean, and they are a thousand miles away from any shore of help. They have for years been trying to dig their way out. They have been digging away, and digging away, but they can never be delivered unless now they will hoist some signal of distress. However weak and feeble it may be, Christ will see it, and bear down upon the helpless craft, and take them on board; and it will be known on earth and in Heaven how narrowly they escaped, "escaped as with the skin of their teeth."

In the last day it will be found that Hugh Latimer, and John Knox; and Huss and Ridley were not the greatest martyrs, but Christian men who went up uninterrupt from the contaminations and perplexities of Pennsylvania avenue, Broad street, State street and Third street. On earth they were called brokers, or stock jobbers, or retailers, or importers; but in Heaven, Christian heroes. No faggots were heaped about their feet; no inquisition demanded from them recantation; but they had mental tortures, compared with which all physical consuming is as the breath of a spring morning.

I find in the community a large class of men who have been so cheated, so lied about, so outrageously wronged that they have lost their faith in everything. In a world where everything seems so topsy-turvey they do not see how there can be any God. They are confounded and frenzied and misanthropic. Elaborate arguments to prove to them the truth of Christianity or the truth of anything else touch them nowhere. Hear me, all such men. I preach to you no rounded periods, no ornamental discourse, but put my hand on your shoulder and invite you into the peace of the Gospel. Here is a rock on which you may stand firm, though the waves dash against it harder than the Atlantic, pitching its surf clear above Eddystone lighthouse. Do not charge upon God all these troubles of the world. As long as the world stuck to God, God stuck to the world, but the earth seceded from His government, and hence all these outrages and all these woes. God is good. For many hundreds of years He has been coaxing the world to come back to Him; but the more he has coaxed the more violent have men been in their resistance, and they have stepped back until they have dropped into ruin.

Try this God, ye who have had the bloodhounds after you, and who have thought that God had forgotten you. Try Him, and see if He will not pardon. Try Him, and see if He will not save. The flowers of spring have no bloom so sweet as the flowering of Christ's affections. The sun hath no warmth compared with the glow of His heart. The waters have no refreshment like the fountain that will slake the thirst of thy soul. At the moment the reindeer stands with his lip and nostril thrust in the cool mountain torrent the hunter may be coming through the thicket. Without crackling a twig under his foot he comes close by the stag, aims his gun, draws the trigger and the poor thing rears in its death agony and falls backward, its antlers crashing on the rocks; but the panting hart that drinks from the water brooks of God's promise shall never be fatally wounded and shall never die.

A MARRIAGE which recalls some of the marriages in England in the days when a newly-made husband was lured by the law responsible for anything his bride wore on her wedding day took place at the end of last month in a North Carolina high road, in Johnson county. The bridegroom and his bride were barefooted. He wore a hat and a shirt and a pair of trousers only, and she wore only a calico dress and a poke bonnet. It is recorded in the parish records that one Annie Sellwood was married at Chiltern All Saints in 1714 "wearing only her shift." But her husband had a legal reason for wanting her only in that garment.

NEW SUSPECTS

In the Detrick Murder Mystery at Bellefontain—Two Men Will Be Asked to Account for Themselves the Night of the Tragedy.

BELLEFONTAINE, O., Aug. 19.—Quietly and without any excitement "Tiny" Ford, the suspected murderer of the Detricks, and Ed Faughty were brought before Mayor Wright Wednesday morning, charged with stealing a copper kettle. Both were represented by Attorney Hamilton, who entered for them a plea of guilty. Each was fined $5 and costs and sentenced to 20 days in jail. Neither spoke a word and both were taken back to jail, no one being allowed to speak to them.

It now looks as though Ford's alibi will go glimmering. A newly discovered witness tells a startling story.

Prosecutor West says that Ford claims that he went to bed about 9:30 Monday night, but they have traced him from 8:30 to 11 o'clock. He was seen eating peanuts at 8:30, and at 10 o'clock he and Faughty went to a barn in the west end, the direction of the Detrick home, where they met three other men. They got into a one cent ante poker game and were still playing poker at 11 o'clock, when the witness who tells the story left.

He knows both men well and is positive they were there. Faughty was seen in jail, but denies that he was there, saying he went to bed at 8:30. Those who know him say he has never gone to bed at that time for years.

The articles found Tuesday were taken in charge by prosecutor West, who says the marks on the cloth are undoubtedly blood stains.

Prosecutor West settled the matter of the handwriting in the statement found on Deerwester. He compared it with other writing of Deerwester's and it corresponds.

A sensation was created when ex-Sheriff Sullivan Wednesday walked into Davis' jewelry store with a silver watch and had the numbers examined. A nephew of Deerwester had sold it to a livery man Monday for 50 cents. Davis says it is not the watch stolen from Detrick.

Certain members of the Detrick family suspect two men, who will have to account for themselves Monday night.

Sam Detrick, the deceased's brother, said Wednesday that David had for some time feared some one and kept a loaded shot gun on hand. The deceased once said: "If they come (he pluralized) I will not kill them, but I will fill their legs with birdshot."

He would not tell anyone whom he meant. This gun was found loaded after the murder, each shell containing about 150 birdshot.

SCIENTIFIC MEN

In Washington Eager to Glean Reliable Information From the Andree Polar Expedition.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—A special to the Herald from Washington says:

Scientific men in Washington are greatly interested in Andree's polar expedition, and are eager to glean from any reliable quarter information concerning him. Prof. Wm. Harkness, of the Naval Observatory, in discussing [illegible] said in an interview.

"I have no reason to doubt that Andree may have reached as far as 83 degrees north latitude. There is nothing so remarkable in that. Nansen, for instance, went as far, or further; but I am inclined to think the Christiana story is unreliable. I will not say that it is impossible for a carrier pigeon to cover the 600 or 800 miles indicated over icy seas, but it would be only one chance in a thousand if the bird took a direct route, and if its vagaries were very extended it would die before long for lack of food. Under the best possible chances a bird perhaps might cover the distance in from 12 to 20 hours, resting on the floating ice en route.

"One strong reason for doubt is that the latitude and longitude of the place where the pigeon is reported to have been shot are not given in the dispatches, and that is so contrary to nautical custom as to give rise to suspicion. Then, granting the pigeon was found and shot and the alleged letter obtained, it seems very improbable that a captain so well acquainted and so much interested in Andree's plans as this one is said to be should refuse to give the letter into hands that would carry it directly to civilization, but carry it with him further into the Arctic region. He would naturally have been glad to give any such important news to the world as quickly as possible."

It was written by Edward Thorp and came overland, saying that he had cleaned up $136,000 in the Klondike in eight weeks and was coming home on the steamer Portland, which is due in Seattle on August 26. Thorp left Seattle one year ago, having gone north with a drove of cattle.

MINE WORKERS

Issue a Call for a Conference of Organized Labor, to Be Held in St. Louis August 30, to Consider the Miners' Strike.

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 21.—The national executive board of the United Mine Workers adjourned Friday after having issued the call for the conference of organized labor to be held at St. Louis, August 30.

Following is the call for the conference:

To organized labor, its various divisions and subdivisions, and to all reform, social, educational and scientific bodies, who condemn government by injunction and the use of force to coerce the people and deprive them of their rights as American citizens:

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 20, 1897.

To the Organized Labor of the Country, Greeting: The great miners' strike has gone beyond a struggle for living wages. A crisis in the affairs of the nation has arrived in which all patriotic people must determine whether they will accept and consent to live under the tyranny and oligarchy of wealth, or whether the institution of free government, the principles of free speech and peaceable public assemblage are to be preserved.

The present struggle has assumed a contest for the preservation of civil liberty and constitutional rights.

The tyrannical and un-American injunctions of the federal and state courts are revolutionary against the first principles of free government and derogatory to the inherent rights of the masses, endangering the public peace and destroying the personal security and individual liberties of the common people.

The courts have deserted the temple of justice, and now stand forth the defiant bulwark of conflicting capital. Their arbitrary rulings have set up one standard of rights for the rich and another for the poor. They decree that capital is always right and labor always wrong. They have made it unlawful for starving working people to appeal against tyrannical treatment, present grievances or propose just and peaceable terms for the redress of insufferable wrongs.

The present great miners' strike is an expression of discontent that originated in poverty and starvation. It was born in the sorrow and destitution of hungry women and children, it was the last protest of impoverished and enslaved labor, and it presents to the world a cause as righteous and humane as ever inspired the souls of a Christian people. Our philanthropic heart of this great nation has responded in sympathy with the miners' appeal for the right to receive a respectable living for the most arduous and hazardous labor in the world. Their appeal for a small share of the wealth they create and for the right to enjoy some of the fruits of advanced civilization finds a responsive chord everywhere in the commonality of mankind, and if it were a struggle between miners and mine operators only, liberty would triumph over oppression, industry over greed, and right over wrong without the necessity of this call.

But it is no longer a mere struggle between employe and employer. The judiciary has assumed the indefensible claims of the operators and the struggle is between tyrannical courts and the whole people. The courts, although under oath to serve the rich and poor alike, have volunteered to defend the sordid interests of the rich as against the God-given rights of the poor, and have threatened to turn the Gatlings guns and the Winchesters of criminals and thugs against all who dare to protest against their despicable, restraining orders. The judiciary is prostituted to the bidding of oppressive capital, has placed the rights of property above the rights of persons, and has discriminated against the many in the interest of the few.

That 350,000 miners should be condemned to lives of drudgery and starvation by the arbitrary rulings of the courts, is an insult to a beneficent creator, an outrage upon free government, and a disgrace to the Christian civilization under which we live.

These recent injunctions and their extreme application against the lawful rights of the poor, the arrest and incarceration of hundreds of innocent, inoffensive people, the general employment of armed thugs to overawe, harass and coerce the miners, have no exasperated the people in localities where applied, that we feel that we can no longer be responsible for the public peace, and to the end that a just and equitable settlement of differences between employers and employes may be effected, the public peace, the liberty of the masses, the sacred inalienable rights of free government preserved, and the courts estopped from these outrageous perversions of constitutional rights, we appeal to that higher, more humane and patriotic sentiment of great plain people—who in times of trouble have always proven the true arbiters of every difference between diversified interests and contending elements in the government of human society. We appeal to the liberty-loving people of this great nation to send accredited delegates to St. Louis, Mo., where a mass convention will be held Monday, August 30, 1897. The object of the convention will not be to merely protest against the usurpation and tyranny of the courts, but to formulate plans to compel a return to the principles of free government, and put said plans into practical operation.

Our people have suffered all the evils that are sufferable and we are given the alternative of submitting to injunctions of court and cowardly entreating our miners to return to the hovels of misery and shame, or appealing to the patriotic hearts of America to consider our cause and force a verdict in accordance with the just claims of suffering humanity. We have chosen the latter and will accept the verdict with that fortitude and resignation becoming every liberty-loving patriot of this great nation.

This call has been indorsed by Samuel Gompers, president American Federation of Labor, and J. R. Sovereign, general master workman K. of L.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Aug. 21.—The coal operators in their meeting Friday night after waiting in vain for an answer from President Ratchford to their telegram asking for a conference here Saturday to arbitrate the strike question, issued the following statement to the public shortly after midnight.

"The operators now have exhausted every effort to make amicable settlement, but the miners refuse either to meet in conference or to arbitrate. The position taken by Ratchford occasions great surprise to the operators. He insists in bringing in all competitive states when he knows the operators of other states under no circumstances will attend a joint conference.

In making this demand Mr. Ratchford is seeking to delay a settlement in hope that he may bring to his aid all the labor organizations of the country and assume such political influence as will frighten the politicians into insisting upon a settlement of the strike without regards to the merits of the case.

He has always insisted that the Pittsburgh district is the key to the situation, and the operators hold out to him an entire month from which is suspended the key he sought. Mr. Ratchford is using the Pittsburgh miners as a cat's paw to scratch political chestnuts off the idle coal tippies in this district.

Mr. Ratchford must arrange a conference at once for arbitration of the troubles in the Pittsburgh coal district, or he must stand accused of inconsistency and insincerity. Public opinion will certainly hold him responsible for the destitution which must inevitably prevail in the district during the coming winter."

HUMAN SHIELD

Will Be One of the Features of the G. A. R. Encampment.

Thousands of Veterans and Their Friends Pouring Into the City—Ample Accommodation for All—Candidates to Succeed the Commander-in-Chief.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 23.—Buffalo is all ready for the army of veterans who are on their way here to attend the thirty-first annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic. During the night hundreds of veterans and their friends arrived, and Sunday they were coming in by thousands. It is estimated that nearly 8,000 strangers were in town Saturday and that from 15,000 to 20,000 came in Sunday.

The various railroads entering Buffalo report that in addition to the hundreds of regular trains, schedules have been prepared for 245 specials to arrive here by Tuesday noon. Among the prominent arrivals are J. Cory Winans, of Commander-in-Chief Clarkson's staff; J. S. Lewis, past junior vice commander, and Daniel Ross, of Wilmington, Del., a candidate for junior vice commander-in-chief.

Camp Jewett, as the city of tents is known, is all ready for its inhabitants and while it will not be formally opened until 4 o'clock Monday afternoon, a number of posts are already installed.

Ample arrangements have been made at the camp and elsewhere for the care of the sick. Three hospital tents have been erected at Camp Jewett, each in charge of a competent staff of physicians.

The honor of flying the first pennant from any tent at Camp Jewett belongs to Reno post, No. 64, of Williamsport, Pa. A detachment of 11 members arrived Saturday, and was assigned to tents 27-29. Clayton P. White, of Williamsport, was the first veteran to arrive, and is quartered on the steamer Idaho, which has been assigned to the naval posts.

Among the later announcement of candidates to succeed Commander-in-Chief Clarkson are the names of John C. Lineham, of New Hampshire; Geo. H. Ennis, of Massachusetts; James A. Seaton, of Chicago, J. P. S. Gobin, of Pennsylvania, and J. F. Mack of Ohio.

Col. Winans, of Commander-in-Chief Clarkson's staff, estimates the number of visitors to Buffalo during the week at 200,000, making the largest encampment ever held. In speaking of the choice of the veterans for the next encampment, Col. Winan's said that so far as his information went, there was but one choice among the delegates, and that was Cincinnati. There seems to be a feeling, he said among some of the eastern people that San Francisco wants the encampment but that is a mistake. San Francisco is preparing to make a bid in 1899. With regard to the encampment held in Richmond, Va., he asserted there is nothing in it. The people down there do not want it and the veterans do not care to go there. The chief objection, he said, was the certainty of unpleasant complications over the color line. Notwithstanding this view the Yonng Men's Business association of Richmond has opened headquarters here and is making an effort to secure the encampment.

Col. Winans says Pennsylvania will send the most people to the encampment, while New York second and Ohio third in attendance.

One of the most brilliant features of the encampment will be the living shield, which will be produced on Wednesday, the day of the parade.

Four thousand children from the schools, who have been under rehearsal for weeks, will form the shield, which will stand on Chippewa street, just below Delaware avenue, at the point where the line of march turns from Chippewa street into the avenue. Its position will be such as to face the marching columns for the two blocks.

The platform upon which the children will sit will be built squarely across Chippewa street, cutting off all traffic. It is to resemble a large grand stand, the seats grading upward as the elevation increases.

This will give the shield the appearance intended, namely, of resting on an easle. The seating space will be square and the figures, dressed in red, white and blue, will be so arranged as to form the outline of a shield, with red and white stripes, and with white stars in a blue field, surrounded by a border of black. Boys in black garments are to form the black background, while boys and girls, dressed in red, white and blue, will fill in the stars and stripes and the field.

These Children of the Shield will be devided into two reliefs to avoid the fatigue of remaining in position for about seven hours. The first 2,000 will take their places in the morning just before the column moves, and will remain in position until about half of the procession has passed. Then they will be relieved by the second division, which will remain in position until the last man in the New York state department, at the left of the line, has passed.

The Children of the Shield will all day long sing national anthems and patriotic songs to the accompaniment of music.

"REGIE CONTRACTS"

Their Effects Upon The Tobacco Interests Of Kentucky.

[A. G. RICE.]

In the line of a movement that is of vital importance to the interests of the tobacco growers of Kentucky, as well as to the state at large, a bill was introduced in Congress on the 19th of March authorizing the President:

"To make such an investigation as would elicit all the facts in reference to the restrictions put upon the sale of American tobacco in foreign countries under what is known as "regie contracts" and to enter into negotiations with the governments of those countries with a view to obtaining a modification or removal of such restrictions."

This question has received considerable attention in both branches of Congress and it has remained for a Republican administration, a Republican Senate and a Republican House of representatives to provide for Kentucky that recognition of her principal product so essential to her welfare and to which she is so justly entitled. This bill, having passed both the Senate and the House, the results of the endeavors of our chief executive, strengthened by the very effective discretionary-retaliatory powers embodied in the Dingley tariff bill, should certainly inaugurate a revolution in the production of that article in which the interests of Kentucky and her people are so largely centered.

For almost a century past restrictions have been put upon the sale of our tobacco in foreign markets. These restrictions continue in nearly all the European countries,—England and Germany being the only open European markets, or, in other words, the only markets to which a dealer or producer in this country can sell and ship direct to a dealer abroad through the regular channels of trade, thus availing himself of the advantages of competition and the varied conditions of demand.

Extensive exportations of American tobacco are made now to these restricted countries, but it is under this system of "regie contracts" which absolutely precludes all competition by purchasers and places the tobacco dealers and growers of the United States entirely and absolutely at the mercy of the foreign buyers. There is designated by each of these restricted countries a certain syndicate or agent who alone is authorized to purchase tobacco and through whose hands all of our tobacco destined for that particular country must pass. This tobacco is then turned over to the government, the transaction paying the syndicate a profit commensurate with the fabulous price paid for the privilege of purchasing, and under the immediate direction and supervision of the government it is sold to the consumers at an enormous advance over the price at which it was purchased; the government of France, for instance, securing an annual revenue of over $60,000,000 from this source alone. England, it is true, obtains even a larger revenue, but this is done by an Imperial excise tax of seventy six (76) cents per pound and we are allowed an open competition in that market with all other nations (there being no tobacco produced in England) and under this system more of our tobacco is sold in England than in any other foreign country.

As the situation stands today, England and Germany take 55 per cent or more than half of the tobacco we export and it may readily be seen from this how extended a trade we could control if we were afforded a similar access to the markets of all the other countries of the world. In other words, European nations, with the two exceptions cited, have converted the American tobacco trade to their respective domains into vast government monopolies, absolutely controlling price, quantity, and quality—and by these means, demand—which reacts in the long run to the impoverishment of the tobacco producers of Kentucky.

The restrictions already referred have reduced the price at which tobacco is held by the producer to a point at which the crop barely defrays the actual cost of production. No other product of the United States is so dependent upon foreign demand as tobacco; the price of no other commodity is so sensitive to foreign market conditions, or so easily depressed by foreign manipulations. The United States produced in 1896, 403,004,320 pounds of tobacco. Of this crop there were 314,931,691 pounds of unmanufactured tobacco exported, besides over $300,000,000 worth of manufactured domestic tobacco. Thus, we are forced to go abroad to find a market for 80 per cent, or four-fifths of our product and it is easily discerned why Europe practically determines the value of tobacco in our home market, this being done for the sake of the enormous revenues she derives at the expense of our own growers. By the imposition of taxes upon tobacco to the extent of about seven or eight times the price paid for it, Europe collects annually a revenue of about $260,000,000. The high prices at which it is necessarily sold in Europe naturally retards consumption and to that degree reduces the demand, from which the United States, and particularly Kentucky, is the greatest sufferer. These conditions in turn have a tendency to reduce the price of the product in our home market to the demoralization of the industry in this country. Taking the figures for the fiscal year of 1896, our tobacco exported to the free markets brought an average of $9.60 per hundred pounds, while that exported to "regie contract" countries brought only $7.55. There was thus a loss on tobacco sent to restricted countries of $2 per hundred, which on the 131,201,968 pounds, thus exported would amount to more than $2,600.000. These "regie contracts," however. have a far more extended price-reducing influence than that conveyed in the above figures. They destroy competition in purchasing and owing to the enormous profits derived from its sale by governments and syndicates, tobacco is held at a price which puts it beyond the reach of the average class of consumers—consumers especially of the particular grades of tobacco raised in Kentucky. For the past twenty years we have exported an average of 4 per cent of our corn crop, 30 per cent of wheat, about 1 per cent of our oats. Compare these figures with tobacco of which we are now exporting about 50 per cent and what better illustration could we have of the vast influence exercised by European countries over our tobacco interests and incidentally of the enormous losses which we have incurred through the agency of the "regie contract."

It has been variously estimated by experts that these influences have decreased the price of tobacco in our home market from $2,00 to $6,00 per hundred. From a careful calculation it would seem that fair treatment in the markets of Europe should raise the price of our tobacco about $5,00 per hundred. Four dollars per hundred would be a very conservative estimate. Four dollars per hundred would mean a total annual increase in the value of our average tobacco crop of about $25,000,000, or about $10,000,000 in the Kentucky product alone. Let each Kentucky tobacco raiser take the forcgoing figures of $4,00 per hundred pounds as the reasonable increase in price to follow the abolition of the "regie contract" system and sit down and figure the practical results on his one crop. He will find something startling. That is what it means to Kentucky, but it means even more by far. The removal of the monopoly contracts by European countries would cheapen tobacco to the consumer and hence increase the number of consumers. Increased consumers in Europe mean increased acreage in Kentucky, and increased acreage means a higher ratio of profit. It also means more labor, more money in circulation and greater individual prosperity.

Kentucky, during the past year, has produced over 40 per cent of the entire tobacco crop of the United States. Her tobacco crop exceeds in value that of any other excepting corn and with fair prices her acreage would be more than doubled. Her tobacco interests have been discriminated against since legislation began. Tobacco has been made to contribute more towards the expenses of the national Government than any other product, except liquors, in which Kentucky is also one of the principal sources of revenue. It is not a widely known fact, but nevertheless true that in internal revenue Kentucky contributes more towards the maintenance of the United States Government than any other state, with the possible exception of Illinois, and this despite her comparatively small area, her low ratio of population and her small assessed valuation as a state. Since 1890 the state has been assessed upwards of $140,000,000 in revenue taxes, an average of over $20,000,000 per year, or more than 13 per cent of the total receipts of the government from internal revenue. Compare this annual average of $20,000,000 with the three and one half millions which is expended annually for the support of her own state government, which includes every expense incurred.—the governor's salary, the legislature, the public school system and internal improvements, the reduction and interest of the state debt, the maintenance of her public institutions and charities, every dollar spent for every character of enterprise which tends to the uplifting and upbuilding of Kentucky as a state—and no fair minded man can fail to discern why our beautiful blue grass commonwealth is entitled at the hands of our great National Government to a recognition of one of her characteristic productions, to a recognition which would contribute more to the alleviation of her farmer, her laborer, her mechanic, her merchant and every other citizen of the state than all the legislation which the past fifty five Congresses have been able to accomplish.

WALTON, KY. August 21, 1897.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

I want to answer "Democrat." He is entitled to a manly answer, or, endorsement as may follow, because it is probably the only political statement of recent publication in in your columns worthy of extended notice. He starts out with the statement "both good men and loyal Democrats." It must be true. He said it himself. No one could make such a salutatory unless fully advised. It's a modest, frank statement of facts. No one could afford to make such a public announcement of virtue unless provable. The signature, "Democrat," robs it of egotism. He has merged himself and friend into the body politic. They have lost their identity. It's well. The Democratic party has political aspirations. The most good to the most people." A government for, of and by the people." I wish I could write the word people in such blazing italics that personal ambition would be consumed by their warmth, and fulsome flatterers be as dross. Of course you are right. The people are talking. A bribe given is a bribe taken. And there's where we meet on common ground. Individuals are as chaff that the wind driveth away. Principle is God given, and eternal. I am arguing from the text Rueben Conner, J. E. Botts, Nathan Walton and other good men are simply integers. Like any one else he, J. E. Botts, or for that matter, Rueben Conner and N. S. Walton, it honest and true—a statement undeniable affirmatively—are the exponents of a principle. In touch with that they are to be trusted. While making Democracy under such interpretation the guiding star, it is not good sense to loose sight of its details. "You cannot strengthen the cable of the ship of State by splicing it with tarred yarn." Neither can you expect a principle to be futhered when the leaders have for their object personal gain. I want to be dignified in the discussion, because the subject matter is crystallized thought from Jesus Christ to the present. As a matter of detail I refused to sign the petition in favor of J. E. Botts, because his position was diametrically opproved to mine on the money question, and not because I or any one else who is acquainted with him would believe that he was the agent of any corporation in furtherance of such corporation against the laborer, or swayed by any motive outside of the wellfare of his party and people. "Democrat" does himself an injustice not Mr. Botts, by his insinuations. To confess the truth the support of a man who is honest and fearless in his statements on any question uninfluenced by hope of reward, undismayed by threats is worth a whole theater full who change their opinions for political emolument or private gain. Such characters are the strength and bulwark of freedom and liberty. No party can afford to antagonize such an element. The spirit should be fosterd and encouraged. While it may not be good politics or good sense to put such an one on picket duty, it would be infinitely safer than to trust one who runs with both the hare and hounds for profit. My principle criticism of Democrat "is that he discusses men instead of appealing to that higher sense of justice composed in the one sentence "universal brotherhood of man." G. F. GAINES.

A vigorous compaign is to be made in the State this fall by the Democratic party. A Frankfort special to the Louisville Dispatch says:

"A member of the Democratic State Central Committee writing to a well-known politician at this place, says a meeting of the committee will be held at Lexington, soon, at which some important arrangements for the campaign will be made. A big list of appointments for well known Democratic orators will be made up and will be announced shortly afterward. An effort will be made to get the Hon. W. J. Bryan to make several speeches in the State during October, and other outside speakers may also be obtained. Among the home orators who will be kept constantly on the stump and whose services are assured in advance are ex-Senator Blackburn, ex-Gov. John Young Brown, ex-Congressman James B. McCreary, W. T. Ellis and W. J. Stone, Congressmen Rhea, Settle, Berry, Smith Wheeler fand Fitzpatrick, Gen. P. W. Hardin, Senator William Goebel, Chas. J. Bronston, Geo. S. Fulton, the Hon. John D. Carroll, the Hon. G. G. Gilbert and a host of others, making the list too long for publication.

"Later on in the campaign the Executive Committee, which will be named with Chairman Johnston at its head, which is to look after the campaign management, will issue a liand book of information showing up the gross incompetency and corruption of the Republican administration in Kentucky, the larger part of which will be devoted to the expose of scandals in the penitentiary and asylum management,"

The following interesting items are taken from the Lyre, an enterprising newspaper published in the Alaskau gold country:

Dawson Pettibone has finished his new well in the rear of the kitchen. It now has eleven feet of ice water in it, and he has washed over $85,000 in dust from the dirt taken out.

Aleck Cameron put in a new fireplace in his cabin this week, but he will now have to build another one. After he had completed it he built a roaring fire, but there was so much metal in the stone that it melted and ran all over the floor. He now has a gold-plated floor, but no fireplace.

There was a bull movement in dog meat yesterday, the price closing at 68 cents above the opening figure. It is supposed to be due entirely to professional speculation.

Bill Jacobs made a pretty good strike on the Little Juniper this week. He struck plenty of gold at a depth of three feet, but as the lumps were too big to carry, he closed up the hole and has taken another claim further up the creek.

The high wind yesterday raised considerable dust. Jack Buckenbill, who was out on the Eldorado road with his team, says he was nearly blinded by it. When he came home he coughed up $73 88. One of the greatest needs is street sprinkling.

Large numbers of dead catfish are seen floating in the river every day. When examined it is found that every one of them has from six to eight ounces in gold dust in its stomach. This carclessness in allowing loose gold to escape into the river will ruin the fishing unless stopped.

While Ike Stigman, the esteemed proprietor of the Big Strike saloon, was fishing in the river yesterday his boat struck a snag; it proved to be a 600-pound nugget. He will have it taken out and will use it as a horse block in front of his place. Ike is always bound to have the best things going.

The Widow Larkin yesterday met with a misfortunc which will, we are sure, call forth the sympathy of the public. During the heavy rainstorm in the afternoon a regular torrent rushed down the gully back of her house and washed so much gold dust into the pig sty that the pig was smothered. A subscription has been started for her benefit.

Our esteemed townsman, Bud Gravel, placed upon our desk yesterday a handsomely shaped nugget. It weighed twenty-seven pounds. We are pleased to see that Mr. Gravel, who is one of our best citizens, is doing well. He is one of the syndicate who expect to buy a quart of whisky on Saturday night.

THE gold bugs claim that the gold standard has much to do with the boom in wheat, while the advocates of a high tariff give the Dingly bill the credit for the rise.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXII. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1897. NO. 45

THE canvass for Clerk of the Court of Appeals in this State is going to be a warm one.

A VERY large quantity of whisky is on its way to Klondyke. It will take some time to thaw it out after it reaches its destination.

HON. E. E. SETTLE, of Owen county, is so well pleased with the office of Congressman that he has announced himself a candidate for reelection.

ARE you going to assist in making the Boone fair a success this week? It is a great place for renewing old acquaintances and making new ones.

THE Courier-Journal is becoming so sensitive that a short paragraph in a country paper, criticising its course, often brings forth a column or two in reply.

NEW trusts are being organized very rapidly since the Dingley tariff bill became a law. It is no longer denied by anybody that the new tariff law will foster trusts of all kinds.

IT is believed that Dr. Hunter enjoys the excitement consequent upon a contest for the office of United States Senator so much that he will be a candidate to succeed Senator Lindsay.

THE Chicago Tribune, Republican has trained its political telescope on Kentucky, and sees things that prompts it to ask: "Is the Republican party of Kentucky controlled by spoilsmen and office-seekers?"

H. L. MARTIN, a gold bug candidate for State Senator in the Woodford district, will not permit his name to go under the log cabin, which might inspire some hope of success in a contest that is otherwise sure to bring defeat to him. He can not stand everything.

WALTER FORRESTER, Gov. Bradley's assistant Adjutant General, has told so much truth about the Louisville Republican organization through his paper, the Capital, that a Republican meeting has been held in that city, and reolutions adopted requesting Governor Bradley to bounce Forrester out of office.

AN open confession is good for the soul, therefore the Capital, Gov. Bradley's organ, feels much better after making the following confession:

"If Republicanism in Kentucky means what it appears to mean at this writing, the people will see to it that Republicanism in the future shall remain only as a useful minority."

THE State Capitol of Texas is the largest state building in the United States, and the seventh in size among the buildings of the world. It is a vast Greek cross of red Texas granite, with a central rotunda covered by a dome 311 feet high. It was begun in 1881, and finished in 1889, having cost about $3,500,000. It was paid for with 3,000,000 acres of public land, deeded to the capitalists who executed the work.

The shanty boat desperadoes and thieves are becoming a burden upon the people living along the Ohio river that cannot be borne much longer, and a war of extermination may be necessary for security from their depredations.—Rising Sun Recorder.

It is strange that the Recorder prides itself on its love of law and order should suggest mob law as a proper remedy for an annoyance that could be abated by the enforcements of laws already provided. What's got the Recorder?

HON. REUBEN CONNER, who was chosen, last Monday, by the Democrats of this county to represent them in the Lower House of the next General Assembly of Kentucky, has been a member of the House twice and of the Senate once, and now has the nomination for a third term in the House, a record of which any man should be proud, and a series of honors never before conferred on a citizen of this county—and seldom upon a citizen of anyother county, for that matter. Mr. Conner has won his way to the hearts of his people by his honest, unassuming conduct in his dealings with them, and his faithful performance of every public trust committed to him. He is a man of the people, and his signal triumph over the other distinguished gentlemen whose names were presented to the convention Monday, is an undying testimonial of the people's admiration of him as a man and a Democrat.

[Capital]

The Republican press of the United States is vigorously denouncing the "Republicans of Kentucky" for the "slap in the face" given to President McKinley in the denunciation of the civil service system by the recent State Convent on in Louisville.

In behalf of Kentucky, the Capital repudiates the charge that the Republican party of Kentucky spoke through that aggregation of hungry pie-hunters who assembled as a State Convention. The Republican party of Kentucky is composed principally of Kentuckians; that convention did not represent any party. It was a convention gotten up by the A. P. A. pie hunter with whom Mark Hanna stupidly allied McKinley's campaign and to which Hanna, through the President, is bartering away all of the respectability of the party in this State. The nearest approach to a representative Republican in that convention was Judge George Denny, of Lexington, who was not even in sympathy with the McKinley campaign committee in Kentucky, but who openly opposed Col. Breckinridge, who was nominated for the sole and avowed purpose of helping McKinley.

The Republican party machinery in this State is turned over to the most corrupt domination to which any political organization in Kentucky was ever subjected. The A. P. A. gang to which Deboe acknowledges allegiance, and to which all of the present political bosses cater, has arrayed against it, all of the decent Republicans who have given the matter any thought. The Louisville convention simply voiced the principles that have actuated all of the crowd that joined with Hunter to get office by selling out principles to the silverites, the Populists, the A. P. A.'s or any other who could be fooled, cajoled or bribed. For two years the small calibre politicians who have assumed to run the Republican machine in this State have been of the opinion that the getting of office is the only aim of politics, and the promising of office is the best means of getting votes. The result is mal-administration of public affairs, the corruption of the legislature, and the disgrace of the State in the eye of the Nation, and at last the well-earned contempt of Republicans everywhere for the miserable spectacle of a State convention composed of office seekers, frantically declaiming against the civil service system, notwithstanding the fact that the National Convention claimed the credit for establishing this system and proclaimed its intention of maintaining and extending it.

That asinine performance was not chargeable to the intelligent Republicans of Kentucky; it was the exhibition of a mob of vote-sellers who are standing around the successful candidate's house yelling for their pay.

For Kentucky, the Capital denies that that convention represents one of the great political parties of this great State.

Cincinnal Tobacco Market.

The sales this week were comparatively light and the bidding as quick as at any time this year, with little, if any, change in price. While some of the manufacturers were not as liberal buyers as they have been, the speculative element took their place at once. and as good results as ever were reached. Under these conditions a break in prices can hardly occur, and the future of the trade looks at least as encouraging as the present.

Fancy tobacco received very much more attention than heretofore, and quite a number of hogsheads passed the $20 mark, one hogshead at the Globe bringing $30, the highest price realized in any market in years.

There is also more demand for color, and we think there is an advance in the price of Bright Lugs and trash. Stocks in the market have slightly increased, but receipts are falling off somewhat, and with fair sales there will probably not be much more increase.

Good rains in nearly all the tobacco growing districts have helped the crop considerably, and what has been planted will probably make a good yield, so that from the present outlook the crop will not be any further curtailed than it already is through the lessened acreage.

EVERYBODY was satisfied with the result of the convention, Monday. Of course they are—whatever a Democratic convention does is all right.

THE Alaskan gold fever does not abate, and the rush to Alaska continues.

Pith of the Press.

The contrast between Cleveland and McKinley is very much in favor of the latter's good nature and efforts to please.—Philadelphia Item.

There has been talk of withdrawing Bushnell because of his growing unpopularity. Ohio has 27,000 negro voters, and they are in open revolt.—Versailles (Ohio) Policy.

As we understand this Civil Service matter, the Ohio Republicans are with McKinley in theory; but, when it comes to practice, Grosvenor is the man for their money.—Albany Argus.

There are two reasons for not investigating the sugar scandal. In the first place, nothing would be learned, and secondly, it would be mighty awkward if there should be.—Detroit News.

As President McKinley has succeeded in raising the price of wheat 20 cents while on his vacation, what may we look for when he gets back to regular 10 hours at the desk?—Chicago Record.

Ex-Governor Boles, of Iowa, is prospecting for a Presidential nomination, but be is taking the wrong end of the route, unless he wants to encounter the boom of Hon. Henri Watterson.—Louisville Dispatch.

According to the ruling of the Government experts, only the pictures of dead statesmen can be placed on the Treasury notes. This will afford an opportunity to advertise the occupant of Wolfert's Roost.—N. Y. Journal.

Pension Commissioner Evan, is trying to explain the abnormal increase in the applications for pensions, is ingenous enough utterly to ignore his demagogic administration of the bureau of which he is the head.—N. Y. Journal.

Mr. Dingley seems to have overlooked the fact that American substitutes for coffee are coming into use. Coffee is on the free list, and the infant industry of manufacturing healthful coffee substitutes will doubtless perish.—St. Louis Post Dispatch.

President McKinley says that prosperity has come to stay. He divides the praise, for the fact between Mother Nature and one William McKinley and his protection policy, with a slight tendency to give William a little the best of it.—St Louis-Republic.

The farmer's wife who takes 10 dozen eggs to market and gets less sugar for them than she got for 8 dozen three months ago will not study a long time before she understands how a tariff bill that increases the price of sugar depreciates the price of eggs.—Omaha World-Herald.

[Argus]

The people of this great country boast a great deal about the free American citizen, whose independence and free will cannot be controlled by any individual. What nonsense it is to announce this as a fact. There is not a city, county or State to-day that is not controlled by a boss as absolutely as a king controls and directs the monarchy and his subjects. We have the political boss that controls the voters at every election in every city and county. The bosses change because they demand too much, but their power exists for years before they are struck down by some other boss that comes to the front and fools the voters just as others have done in days gone by. This is American politics. It is filled with statesmen that think they are leaders, but they are only the followers of some mind that holds the "boodle." This little word draws large crowds, and while the speaker is denouncing the boodler on the stump, in his room, after he has concluded, he receives the boodle that makes him talk. In fact the American seems never to have originated an independent thought, word or act. Make the voter believe you are a winner, and you can break up parties just as you can break chinaware with a hatchet. We have our star-eyed Goddess, our silver tongued Breckinridge, our brainy Lindsay and Carlisle, yet they never achieved a victory except through some boss. They have been pressed to the front and kept there just as the mule is compelled to draw the load his owner places on his shoulders, because the political Master has directed them to do so.

THE candidates who were defeated Monday, are all good Democrats, and as such cheerfully accept the result.

NEXT Monday is Labor Day.

THE object of the new home for working girls just opened in Denver, Col., is to give comfortable quarters to young women who are working for such slender wages as $4 or $5 a week. Furnished rooms are offered for only $2 a month. There are pleasant reception rooms, to which all working girls are freely invited; and the home, which has 32 rooms, has already 15 inmates.

George Peabody's fad was the promotion of education. His gifts amounted to more than $10,000,000. Asa Packer had the same fad, his benefactions amounting to about $4,500,000 He founded Lehigh university.

A LONDON paper claims that teak is the most durable wood known for structural and mechanical purposes. It is hard, yet light, easily worked, and, though porous, shrinks little, and because of its oily nature does not injure iron. In southeastern Asia it is much used in ship building. The wood is frequently girdled a year before it is felled, and thus exposed to sun and wind it seasons more rapidly than when cut green.

WHEN the steamer Queen was about to sail for Alaska from Seattle a few days ago, in the height of the rush to Klondike, a man rushed down to the purser and exclaimed excitedly: "Look here, I paid for a stateroom for myself and wife, and when I got there I found an old cow sticking her head through the window." "I am very sorry, sir," said the purser, "we are very crowded, but I will do the best I can for you. John!" (turning to a deck-hand) "go up on deck and turn that cow around!"

GAMBLING is universal in Burma and on market days respectable looking men may be seen seated in a booth, or some other shelter, selling tickets from little books for the lottery of the "thirty-six animals," a diagram of which hangs behind him to assist the investor in making his choice. In a central spot is a tall bamboo, from the top of which dangles a small box containing the name of the winning animal for the day. This is hauled down at a certain hour and the winners declared.

A SELF-INFLATING tire has just been invented. It is an alternating inflating and deflating tire, working automatically. If the tire is empty, or has little air in it, the weight of the rider and the machine compress the tube, more especially the bore of the thinner part lying in the rim to the end of which the valve is attached. This part is flattened under the pressure, and as the wheel goes round the pressure travels along it, leaving behind it a vacuum into which the air flows through the valve.

DR. SANDWAS, a French physician, claims to have discovered a new system for increasing the range of a singer's voice as much as two full notes in the upper or lower registers. He obtains this change by inhalations of various aromatic vapors. Those of Curacao liquor are said to add volume to the high register, while vapors of a distilled extract of pine needles will benefit the lower notes. Steaming coffee and rum will stimulate the voice in general, strengthening the middle range particularly.

GOVERNMENT experts have just completed their valuation of the pictures and art treasures of one kind and another bequeathed to the English nation by Lady Wallace, who during her lifetime was barred from presentation at court and subjected to much unkindly ostracism by English society. The value is set down officially at the enormous sum of $22,000,000. The government has decided to keep the collection where it is—that is to say, in Hertford house, which the state is now about to acquire for the purpose.

A NEW theory of sunstroke has recently been expounded and is of particular interest at this season, when the source of the world's heat is getting in its hottest work. This theory is that what is called sunstroke is in fact the creation within the blood of the victim of a specific poison that acts upon the nerve centers or ganglia and so affects the brain and other organs of the body and often causes death. The poison is created by a sort of chemical reaction, and is thought to be made possible by certain conditions of the kidneys.

SPURIOUS mummies have from time to time been palmed off upon the public, and a doubt arose in a Vienna museum as to the validity of one daughter of the Pharaohs in their collection. It occurred to them, in view of the general hollowness of life, that the young lady might have been manufactured in Birmingham. So they turned the Roentgen rays upon her, and saw at once through the many folded wraps the amulets which the Egyptians placed upon the bosoms of their dead, thus proving the genuineness of their specimen.

A HOSPITAL has been opened in London for the treatment of wounds, ulcers and kindred ailments by oxygen gas. The new method of treatment was suggested by the Zulus. When they are wounded they climb an eminence and expose their wounds to the pure air of the mountain tops. After the Turco-Russian war it was noticed also that the invalids sat with their wounded limbs bare on the deck. Scientifically developed, and with the addition of oxygen—one part of oxygen to one part of purified air—that is the principle now adopted at the oxygen home.

PITTSBURGH FIRE.

The Loss Will Amount to One Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars.

Two Firemen and Two Boys Killed by Falling Walls—Seventh Avenue Hotel Endangered and a Panic Ensued—Explosion in the Cellar Caused the Fire.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Aug. 27.—Fire Thursday evening caused the loss of $165,000 worth of property, two firemen and two boys killed, and created a panic in the Seventh Avenue hotel.

About 6:30 o'clock flames were discovered in the five-story building at 637 Smithfield street, occupied by Edmundson & Perrines' furniture establishment, and gained such rapid headway that the building was a mass of flames before the engines reached the scene. In a very short time the building was entirely destroyed. The fire originated from the explosion of a gas engine in the cellar.

The building is T shape, running back from its Smithfield street front to a ten-foot alley in the rear, separating it from the Seventh Avenue hotel, the extensions extending to Seventh avenue and Strawberry alley. The guests of the hotel, numbering 150, were nearly all at supper at the time the flames were seen pouring from the rear windows of Edmundson & Perrine's building. A small sized panic ensued and a grand rush was made for the exits. Fortunately no one was hurt, but the excitement was high for a time and the hallways were soon filled with trunks and baggage of guests who were all endeavoring to save themselves and belongings. The fire burned the kitchen and part of the dining room of the hotel, but was extinguished before reaching the sleeping apartments and all the guests returned to the house after the fire.

A portion of the rear wall of the furniture store fell into the alley catching two firemen, one of whom, John Noolan, was pretty badly hurt, but not seriously so. Several buildings adjoining the burning building was damaged by water, the aggregate loss amounting to abont $5,000. The other losses are: Edmundson & Perrine, $100,000 on stock, insurance $42,000; John Daub, owner of building, $50,000; insurance, $7,000; Seventh Avenue hotel, $10,000, fully insured.

At 11 o'clock, after the fire had been subdued and the firemen were rolling up their hose, the Strawberry alley wall of the Edmundson & Perrine fell bursting under the debris two firemen, Zeke Glover and Harry Holt. Two boys who were watching the firemen work are also supposed to be under the falling wall. A large force of men were put to work at once to get the victims out. As the wall was three stories high, the progress of the rescuers was slow. At 11:50 Holt's dead body was recovered and Glover's was recovered soon afterward. Both men were married and lived in Lawrenceville. The hunt is still going on for the bodies of the two boys.

MOUNT ST. ELIAS.

The Expedition to the Summit Determines Two Facts of Importance.

VICTORIA, B. C., Aug. 27.—The expedition of Prince Luigi, of Savoy, to the summit of Mount St. Elias has determined two facts of prime importance to the scientific world. It has ended once and for all that Mount St. Elias' altitude is 18,120 feet. The figures are subject only to such slight corrections as may change the total 30 or 40 feet either way. The expedition has also answered definitely and in the negative the questions so long asked by scientists as to whether or not St. Elias was at one time a great volcano.

There is not the slightest indication of volcanic action anywhere. A new glacier was discovered by the explorers from the eminence of Mount St. Elias, between the Augusta mountains and Great Logan. It takes its course apparently to the sea and was named by the prince "Colombo."

The route was absolutely unknown. Advancing up these glaciers and moraines took 39 days or until July 4, on which day the prince declared for the entire party a general holiday.

At Pinnacle Pass was found the first evidence of Russell's expedition in 1891, in the shape of a tent bottom and a single rusty fork. Finally the foot of the divide connecting Mount St. Elias and Mount Newton was reached with a supply of provisions to last 12 days. The elevation was 8,000 feet.

The Americans in the party raised the stars and stripes over the camp in the great hills and Prince Luigi and his party cheered again and again in honor of the flag.

To Erect Smelter Works at Vancouver.

VANCOUVER, B. C., Aug. 27.—Word has been received here that a London syndicate, which has undertaken a proposal to erect a smelter here, has received the necessary capital and will commence construction work this winter, the works to be in operation by June next. The capital of the company will be £250,000, and besides the smelter, a refinery will be built. The smelter will have a capacity of 350 tons daily.

Advance in the Price of Wheat.

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—Wheat shot upward Thursday as if a volcano had burst under the market. September, which closed Wednesday night at 96¾, started Thursday on the regular board with sales all the way from 98½ to $1. Within five minutes it was selling at 103.

Brought a Large Amount of Gold.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 27.—The steamer Mariposa, which arrived Thursday from Sydney, via Honolulu, brought a consignment of $2,250,000 in English sovereigns in 94 treasure boxes for the Anglo-Californian and London, Paris and American banks of this city.

Sir Osborne Morgan Dead.

THE AFRIDIS

Causing Considerable Trouble on the Frontier of India—Khyber Pass Falls and the Kurram Valley Threatened.

LONDON, Aug. 26.—The latest dispatches received from the front indicate that the situation on the frontier is getting worse. It is evident that the Indian government must face a grave crisis involving heavy expenditure and probably great loss of life.

The government is confronted with the following state of affairs:

Khyber Pass has fallen into the hands of the Afridis; the posts in Kurram valley are threatened by the powerful tribe of the Orakzais; the Mohmand tribsmen are meditating a renewal of hostilities around Fort Shabkadr, while thousands of troops are engaged in crushing the revolt in the Swat valley and two large brigades are holding the Tochi valley where the Mahsud-Maziris are again restless.

The authorities are convinced that Fort Ali-Musjid could only have fallen after desperate fighting, as the native garrison of Khyber rifles was made up of men who rendered valuable assistance in the Black mountain expedition of 1888. The fall of the fort is a very serious blow, for it isolates Fort Lundi-Kotal, which is at the extreme end of Khyber pass, garrisoned by 800 Khyber rifles, and necessitates the prompt reconquest of the pass.

This is certain to prove a formidable task, of which the British troops had a foretaste on Monday, when a body of artillery, cavalry and infantry left Ft. Barra, south of Peshawur, in order to repel the Afridis, who were then advancing down the Bazai valley. The troops returned early Wednesday morning and reported that many of the men had dropped out for want of water, none being procurable along the route, while the Afridis, although shelled by the British, maintained their position on the heights, threatening the loyal village of Kadam and the British position, Fort Jamrud, at the mouth of the pass.

Fort Jamrud is held by a strong force of British and native troops and the British front extends about 33 miles from Shabkadr along the north side of the Cabnl river and southward to Peshawur, where the troops are massing as the base of a demonstration against the Orkazai, who occupy the region south of the Afridis, but have not yet joined the belligerent proportions of their northern neighbors. There is an uprising, however, of small parties, which is proving troublesome near Kohat, and it is expected that both tribes will try to close the Kohat pass. Numbers of tribemen are moving up toward Khyber from Kohat and that district, making the salt tariff the pretext for hostilities.

IMPORTANT DECISION

In Regard to Importing Goods Into the United States in Norwegian Vessels.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—Assistant Secretary Spaulding has decided that cargoes imported into the United States in Norwegian vessels from any country, are not subject under our treaty with Sweden and Norway to a discriminating duty of ten per cent. While specific cases have not yet been brought before the department of Swedish, German, Austrian, Belgian, Brazilian, Danish, Italian, Dutch, Russian and Turkish vessels, the terms of our treatics with these nations are said to be such as to exempt them from discriminating dnty. Whether the new tariff act should be construed as imposing the discriminating duty in certain cases on British, French, Portuguese, Japanese vessels and vessels of other national ities has not been determined by the attorney general, who now has the matter under consideration.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—The president has appointed William R. Holloway, of Indianapolis, to be consul general at St. Petersburg, Russia, the commission being dated August 21.

Fell Into a Geyser.

LAKE HOTEL, Yellowstone Park, Wyo., Aug. 26.—George B. Ernshaw, a prominent Philadelphian, came near losing his life while at Fountain hotel walking into one of the geyser pools in the rear of the hotel. He was walking backwards, beckoning to some friends, when he tripped on a stick and fell backwards into one of the bottomless boiler geysers. He fell upon a ledge under five feet of water and was rapidly slipping off its conc to certain death when he grasped a pole over hanging the edge of the pool and by the assistance of those near by was rescued. He was badly burned. Post Surgeon Godfrey dressed his burns which are not believed to be fatal.

Summit of Mount St. Elias Reached.

SEATTLE, Wash., Aug. 26.—A special to the Post Intelligencer from Nanaimo, says: Prince Luigi, of Savoy, and party of Italians reached the summit of Mount St. Elias, July 31, at 12 o'clock noon. The altitude indicated by the mercurial barometer is 18,100 feet. It is the most successful expedition ever undertaken. The party was 51 days on snow and ice without sickness or accident. The Italians are returning on the Topeka.

Another Condemned Murderer at Large.

WELCH, W. Va., Aug. 26.—Eight prisoners broke jail here Tuesday night and made their escape. Seymour Grey, who was to be hanged a week from Thursday, was among the fugitives, as were two Negroes who murdered a policeman at Keystone. The jailer did not learn of the delivery until Wednesday morning.

Steel Works to Start Up.

CHICAGO, Aug. 26.—The Illinois Steel Co. has signed the amalgamated scale and the big mills at Chicago, Milwaukee and Joliet will start up after nearly two months of idleness. The amalgamated (Youngstown) scale provides for a 15 and 10 per cent. reduction in the wages of steel and iron workers respectively.

Chief Coulin Retired.

PROMINENT PART

Taken by Miners' Wives and Daughters Against Working Miners.

Large Parade and Meeting Held at Turtle Creek Without Molestation—Under the Injunction Marches, Headed by Brass Bands, Can Not Be Stopped.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Aug. 27.—The wives and daughters of the striking miners at Dearmit's Oak Hill mines, near Turtle creek, took a prominent part Thursday in the demonstration against the working miners.

Early Thursday morning a dozen or more women gathered at the camp, and with flags and banners marched along the roads leading toward the tipple.

On their way they met a number of miners going to the pit and they greeted them with yells and jeers. They derided the miners who were working and ridiculed them in a manner which caused many of them to hang their heads in shame. The women say they will make a demonstration every day hereafter.

At Bunols, the mine owners are gradually gaining on the strikers. Fourteen men returned to work Wednesday and Thursday. W. J. Brennan, attorney for the miners, is preparing his answer to the bill of the New York and Cleveland Gas Coal Co. in the proceedings against the miners' officials and strike leaders for contempt of court. The bill will declare that the camp and marching is not for the purpose of intimidation or menace to any one, but merely to indicate to the men in the mines that miners generally are on a strike and to indicate their strength by a show of numbers.

Gus Datte, who is in charge of the sheriff's deputies at Plum Creek, was told Thnrsday by the sheriff's attorney that nnder the injnnction he could not interfere with marchers who paraded with a band at their head. The only ones he can stop are those who are intimidating the workmen.

A large parade and meeting was held at Turtle Creek Thnrsday night without molestation from the deputies.

NEXT ENCAMPMENT

Will Be Held in Cincinnati—The Vote Was: Cincinnati 526, San Francisco 214.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 27.—The struggle for the next convention and commander-in-chief is now on. New York will vote almost solidly for San Francisco in 1898 and for Isaac F. Mack, of Sandusky, for commander-in-chief. Col. Mack has a good lead, but Cincinnati is as strong, apparently, as he is, and the clash may prove fatal to one or both.

The encampment was formally opened by speeches of welcome by state and municipal officers, appropriate responses being made by officers of the G. A. R. Gov. Black opened the speechmaking with a felicitous address bidding the distinguished guests welcome to the Empire state. A cordial welcome to the city of Buffalo was extended by Mayor Jewett. Gen. A. D. Shaw bade the comrades welcome on behalf of the department of New York, and President Augnst F. Schen, of the citizens' committee, acted as spokesman of that organization.

Cincinnati has been selected for holding the next encampment. The vote (unofficial) was: Cincinnati 526, San Francisco 214.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 27.—The president of the United States was refused admission to the Grand Army camp Thursday morning, although he had come at the special invitation of the veterans and everything was in readiness to receive him.

The incident proved one of great mortification to the Grand Army leaders and excited indignation among the members of the local committee. To the president at first it was a trifle annoying but a few minutes after the episode he was having a hearty laugh over it and excusing the official who refused him entry, by saying that the man was perfectly right to obey orders, no matter who demanded admission.

The reason for the refusal was that the sentry had been ordered to admit no carriage to the camp.

When nominations for commander-in-chief were declared in order Isaac F. Mack, of Sandusky, O., was nominated by Delegate Brown, of Ohio; J. P. S. Gobin, of Lebanon, was nominated by Delegate Stewart, of Pennsylvania; George H. Innis, of Boston, by Delegate Wetherbee, of Massachusetts, and John G. Linehan, of New Hampshire, by Delegate Cogswell, of New Hampshire.

Mr. Wetherbee later withdrew the name of Mr. Innis. The first ballot resulted: Mack, 253; Linehan, 181; Gobin, 296, no choice.

The vote on the second ballot was never announced officially but as cast it stood: Gobin, 358; Mack, 249; Linehan, 123. Before the result could be announced by the tellers, the ten Missouri votes that had been cast for Mack were withdrawn and ordered changed to Gobin, who had received the other 12 of the 22 votes belonging to the state. This gave Gobin 368 votes and enough to elect. Illinois and other states began to order their votes changed, but while this was in progress R. B. Brown of Ohio who nominated Mack, asked unanimous consent that the adjutant general be instructed to cast the vote of the encampment for Mr. Gobin, making his election unanimous. The encampment then adjourned until 9 o'clock Friday morning.

Hot in Kansas City.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 27.—Hundred degree weather was experienced here and throughout Kansas Thnrsday. A good breeze lessened the suffering. No prostrations are reported.

THE PRESIDENT

Surprised the Cleveland People by His Early Arrival From Buffalo on Board the Comanche.

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 28.—President McKinley surprised the people of Cleveland by his early arrival from Buffalo Friday morning. He became the guest of the people of this city and will remain snch until next Wednesday.

The reception of the president was not as elaborate as had been planned. There was no presidential salute fired by the naval reserves from the old revenue cutter Andrew Johnson; the cannon of steam and sail craft did not belch forth in deafening sonnds in welcome of the president; banners and flags did not flntter in the breeze in honor of his coming.

There was reason for the absence of all this ceremony, which had been planned on an elaborate scale. It was lacking because the presidential party arrived in Cleveland several hours ahead of time, or rather, the time anticipated by those who had planned the local reception.

The Comanche, which brought the presidential party from Buffalo, arrived inside of the Cleveland harbor at 2:30 o'clock. There she lay at anchor until 7 o'clock, when she steamed into the inner harbor and made fast at the dock of the Pennsylvania Co.

Senator Hanna was somewhat surprised to know that elaborate preparations had been made for the reception of the president, and said he had advised against it Thursday by telegraph, stating there was no certainty of the hour of their arrival. He asked that the naval reserves and the Tippecanoe club be notified of the arrival of the Comanche and invited the newspaper men aboard the yacht.

The presidential party was scattered about the boat in groups of twos and threes. President and Mrs. McKinley were midship looking across the muddy Cuyahoga and conversing with Col. M. T. Herrick. The president's appearance gave indications of perfect health.

The party repaired to Senator Hanna's residence where breakfast was served. It is probable that a public reception will be held later in the day.

MURDERER SMITH

Captured, After the Longest Chase by Detectives on Record.

PORT TOWNSEND, Wash., Aug. 28.—The steamer Portland due from St. Michaels has on board a murderer, who was captured by detectives half way around the world. He is in irons and under the constant watch of two Pinkerton detectives. The prisoner, William Smith, was pursued over the continent to Juneau, to Dyea and across the Chilcoot pass, over the lakes and down the rivers to the gold fields of Klondike, where he was taken into custody.

Smith was a storekeeper in a small town near Cedar Rapids, Ia., up to several months ago. One night the store was burned and in the ruins were found the charred body of a man. Smith's relatives claimed that he was burned to death in the fire. His life was insured for $35,000 and a demand was made for the money. An investigation led to the belief that the body was not that of Smith but that of a watchman. The theory was at once advanced that Smith had committed murder and burned his store in the hope that the body would be roasted beyond recognition, and his relatives obtain the insurance money after he had disappeared. Pinkerton men were put on the trail, and after the longest chase on record captured Smith at Dawson July 23. He was taken to St. Michael's to await the sailing of the Portland.

DEBS TALKS.

A Sympathetic Strike That May Paralyze the Country—The Most Important Convention of Labor Ever Witnessed.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Aug. 28.—Eugene V. Debs has given the following statement to the press:

"From information I have, it is safe to predict that the St. Louis meeting next Monday will be the most important convention of labor this country has ever witnessed. I am no alarmist, but I do not hesitate to say that if the people do not take cognizance of the awful and widespread suffering of the miners and their families, and adopt prompt and effective measures for their relief, something will occur to shock them into a realization of their obligations to their fellow beings.

"What will be the result of the St. Louis meeting I am not prepared to say. I may venture the prediction that the injunction and its free and indiscriminace use in relation to organized labor will be the engaging theme. The injunction is the deadly bludgeon of corporate capital, and labor throughout the country is aroused to this fact. The heart of all labor is with the miners. From end to end of the country workingmen demand relief for their suffering fellows, and it will require little effort to precipitate a sympathetic strike that will simply paralyze the country. "EUGENE V. DEBS."

The New Commander Holds a Reception.

BUFFALO, N.Y., Aug. 28.—Gen. Gobin, commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, held a reception at the Iroquois hotel Friday night. Many notable persons called to congratulate him. Gen. Gobin stated that in his election as commander-in-chief he had reached the height of his ambition. He was going to work with all his might towards a reform in the financial system of the G. A. R.

Veterans Wouldn't Carry the Union Jack.

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 28.—A visiting detachment of 150 members of the Grand Army of the Republic from Buffalo marched up Yonge street carrying the stars and stripes before them. It is a violation of a city ordinance to carry a foreign flag in this city unless a British flag is also carried. A policeman stopped the procession and told the marchers of the violation. They bought a small union jack, but not one of them would carry it. Finally a small boy was hired to do that duty, and the veterans continued on their way.

"AS IF BY MAGIC."

Miss David's Strong Endorsement of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. She Wishes That Every Afflicted One Could Try This Remedy.

From the News, Hamilton, Ohio.

From no one in this city has Dr. Williams' Pink Pills received more unstinted praise than from Miss David, of No. 18 North B Street, Hamilton, Ohio. Seldom one hears of such favorable results from the use of medicine, as was effected in the case in question.

Miss Davis, who is a modest and unassuming, but most charming little lady, is prompted to make a public statement of her case, solely as an act of charity to others who are unfortunate enough to be afflicted, and no one among Miss David's large circle of friends and acquaintances could possibly question the lady's motive in making such a statement. Miss David has resided in this city for years and is connected with the Traber family, one of the oldest and most honored in Butler county.

Speaking to a News representative, Miss David said:

"Although I have resided in Hamilton for quite a while, I am originally a native of Pennsylvania, and it was while on a visit in Philadelphia a number of years ago, that I suffered a very severe attack of diphtheria, it being in the most malignant form. Subsequently, my whole system became affected in sympathy, as it were, and it was only a short time until I became so debilitated and run down that I had given up all hope of recovery. I tried many remedies and spent much money in an effort to regain my health, but to no avail.

"One day in looking over a Philadelphia paper, my attention was attracted to the Pink Pill advertisement, and I resolved to give it a trial. Not anticipating results so soon, you can imagine my great joy and pleasure to soon notice beneficial results. The old numb feeling in my limbs, for I had also received a partial stroke of paralysis, gradually disappeared as if by magic—and my whole system was soon on the mend. In fact, at the very outset the medicine worked a wonderful change in my whole body and thanks to the efficacy of the little Pink Pills, I am a greatly improved woman to-day. I only wish that everyone afflicted could try this remedy for I feel certain that a speedy cure would be the inevitable result."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppression, irregularities and all forms of weakness. In men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork or excesses of whatever nature. Pink Pills are sold in boxes (never in loose bulk) at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists, or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

A New Departure.

"I know it is unprecedented, my dear," said the popular minister to his wife, with a look of firm determination upon his face. "I know the public will consider me a sensational, unorthodox innovator, but something must be done to fill the church and bring me into notice."

"But," said his wife, "consider what an abnormal, extraordinary and unparalleled thing it is you propose. I have never been in favor of your discussing in the pulpit subjects that will startle and invite criticism from the congregation and public. Why not confine yourself, as other preachers do, to matters that they naturally expect from a minister of the gospel?"

"They no longer attract attention," said the minister. "The people now demand something new and electrifying, and I think I have hit upon a plan of discourse that will create a furore in the religious world. I have called it to abandon the old beaten paths and give them something next Sunday that will come like a thunder clap upon the congregation."

"Very well," said his wife, with a sigh of resignation, "if you have fully determined to take a text from the Bible I will try no longer to dissuade you."—Chicago Tribune.

ALABAMA LADIES

DON'T DIE

Mrs. M. A. Garrett

Oak Lowery, Ala., writes: Have used Dr. M. A. Simmons Liver Medicine in my family for 10 years, with good results. I think it is stronger than "Zeilin's" or "Black Draught."

Cramps

Are caused by an irritation of the nerves. They are sometimes, frequently the result of uterine disease. There are pinching, gnawing and contractive pains in the region of the stomach extending to the back and chest. They are often the symptoms and effect of indigestion. Dr. M. A. Simmons Liver Medicine should be used to stimulate the digestive organs and Dr. Simmons Pain Pills will come to give immediate relief and permanent cure.

After the old proprietors of the article now called "Black Draught" were by the United States Courts enjoined from using the words consisting our trade name—does not signify require that they stand on their own trade name and marks (if any) of their article, and not seek to appropriate the trade for our article called for and known as Dr. Simmons Liver Medicine by publishing the picture of another Dr. Simmons on their wrappers and fiercely advertising that their article "Black Draught" was established in 1840, that being the year in which our article was established, while no one ever heard of "Black Draught" till after 1876. Why do they advertise that falsehood and associate their article with ours (having the picture of Dr. M. A. Simmons on it) by their publication of the picture of another Dr. Simmons, if not done to unfairly appropriate our trade? Is not the motive apparent?

Prof. E. P. Riley

San Antonio, Tex., says: My wife has used Dr. M. A. Simmons Liver Medicine many years for Sick Headache and never fails to buy a package when she expects to travel. It saves one from taking injurious drugs. For 15 years it has been a necessary medicine in my house.

Caution. Don't be fooled into taking cheap worthless stuff. If the merchant tells you "It is just the same" as M. A. S. L. M., you may know that he is trying to sell you cheap stuff to make a big profit by palming off on you a wholly different article.

GOLD HUNTERS

Are Advised to Keep Out of Klondike Until Spring.

None But the Most Hardy Can Withstand the Rigorous Climate, Both Summer and Winter, and They Must Have Abundance of Clothing and Food.

SEATTLE, Wash., Aug. 30.—H. N. Stanley, who went to St. Michaels for a news association, returned so this city on the steamer Portland. He says:

"I have been seven weeks at the mouth of the Yukon, at St. Michael, where I saw all the miners coming out and interviewed them. As a result, I feel it my duty to advise everybody to stay out until next spring. Wild, and in many cases exaggerated reports have been circulated since the first discoveries were made. The strike, however, was, and is one of the greatest if not the greatest in the worlds history. Probably $2,000,000 was cleaned up this spring, and next spring I look for from $5,000,000 to $7,000,000. The fields have hardly been opened up as yet, but those going in now must bear in mind that everything in that region was staked long before any reports reached the outer world, and that those going in now must prospect for themselves, buy claims from the present owners, or work for the owners.

"No new strike had been reported up to the time of my leaving and another may not be made for five years, although Alaska is an enormous country and will yet, I believe, produce more gold than we dream of. But it is also in many ways a bleak, barren, desolate country—a country incapable of supporting any great amount of animal life and a country of such rigorous climate, both winter and spring that none but the most hardy can possibly live in it. Even they must have abundance of food and warm clothing.

"I am aware there is a popular impression that supplies can be bought in the vicinity of the mines. They may at present buy at six times Seattle prices, but they are taken at even those figures faster than they can be got in, and before winter is half over, if the present population stays in, there will be actual starvation.

"The avegage man requires about one ton of carefully selected food and clothing for a year's supplies. In the summer of 1896 about three thousand five hundred tons of supplies went up the river, and the new population of 1,500 to 2,000 suffered from want. Of this 3,500 tons, probably 1,500 tons were rum, tools, furniture and supplies other than provisions. This season, allowing the most favorable circumstances, not more than 4,000 tons of supplies can be got up the river, fully half of which is rum and tools, as well as supplies other than food. There are more than three times as many people there than last winter. Figure it out for yourself.

"Grub was completely cleaned out this spring, and last winter there was such a scarcity that moose hams sold for $30 each, flour $120 per hundred, bacon $1 a pound ... happen this winter? Why will not people actually starve to death?

"As to shelter, 90 per cent. of Dawson was living in tents in July. Labor is scarce and houses can not be built. How are 7,000 people to withstand the rigors of a nine months' winter of semi-darkness, when the mercury goes 70 degrees below zero?

"I am told that there is plenty of grub at St. Michael. So there may be, but after September 15 it might as well be in New York city, for to try to transport it by dog train or sled over 2,000 miles of icy river is absolutely impossible. There is not, nor will there ever be a dog train that can take enough to feed itself over 1,200 miles. Relief is therefore impossible. Over the divide in the winter would be quite as difficult."

MOTHER AND DAUGHTER

Burned to a Crisp by a Kerosene Explosion—Five Houses Destroyed.

TAMPA, Fla., Aug. 30.—Marie, the 14-year-old daughter of Mrs. Frances Valdez, of Port Tampa city, went to the kitchen to start a fire Sunday afternoon. She poured on kerosene and instantly there was a deafening explosion, followed by the girl's agonizing cries as she ran from the room on fire.

Mrs. Valdez at once went to her daughter's assistance. While she was attempting to extinguish the flames her own clothes caught fire and the two ran screaming from the house. Both were burned to a crisp.

The house caught fire from the flames and was destroyed. A small boy was burned in the house. His body is not yet recovered.

The fire spread rapidly and five houses owned by the Plant Investment Co., were burned, there being no fire protection. The department from Port Tampa turned out but could do no good, there being no water on hand. Loss about $2,000.

Smuggled Tobacco.

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—A special to the World from Colon, Columbia, says: Cases of goods shipped here from the United States will be opened to prevent the smuggling of tobacco, the protective duty on which is so high that merchants do not openly import it. The authorities have seized several cases marked "Lard," which contained tobacco.

Stole His Mother's Cow.

BUENA VISTA, Ky., Aug. 30.—Ellsworth McGraw and Berty Holsinger are fugitives from justice and warrants are out for their arrest. McGraw is a desperate character and has done time for shooting his own brother. Young Holsinger has respectable parents who own a little farm three miles south of this place. Becoming hard up for money, young Holsinger was persuaded by McGraw to steal a young cow from Holsinger's own mother, which he did. They took the animal to Cattlettsburg and sold it for $18. Holsinger's parents will have both boys prosecuted.

THE CAPITAL.

The Construction of Locks and Dams in the Monongahela—The Annapolis Ordered to Pensacola to Relieve the Helena.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—Acting Secretary Meiklejohn Friday heard parties interested in the contract for the construction of locks and dams on the Monongahela river. Some time ago the contract was awarded to James McCarron, who thus far failed to furnish the bond required. Two extensions of time have been granted and the acting secretary has refused to grant a further extension. The Houston Construction Co., of Philadelphia, whose bid was $664,634, and about $42,000 higher than McCarron's is the next lowest bidder and is asking the secretary to award it the contract under the law which authorizes the secretary to award contracts to the lowest responsible bidder. Secretary Meiklejohn is considering the advisability of re-advertising for bids, but protests have been made against any further delay in beginning the work.

Orders have been issued sending the Annapolis to Hampton Roads to be inspected, whence she will go to Pensacola to relieve the Helena. The latter will come to Norfolk for her final trial before going to the China station. The Nashville will go to Jacksonville to relieve the Wilmington, which must also have a final trial run, when she will probably go to the south Atlantic station.

The state department has received a letter from the United States consul at Barranquilla stating that the Colombian government has suspended the export duty on coffee shipped from that country after August 1.

The state department has again received information that the steamer Dauntless was about to fit out a filibustering expedition from Savannah, Ga. The usual telegram to government officials to be on the watch for her have been sent.

Consul Wilsike informs the state department that a new tariff will go into effect in Nicaragua October 1. A commission having the matter in charge has recommended the free importation of sugar, cacao in grain and ground, coffee in grain and ground, rennet for the coagulation of milk, fresh fruits in their natural state, hog lard and table salt.

The department is also informed that Nicaragua will adopt the decimal system of weights and measures.

THE TREATY

Between Russia and France Will Not Be Published at Present.

PARIS, Aug. 28.—Nothing is known as to when the terms of the alliance between France and Russia will be announced, but it is rumored that they will not be published yet.

The German press illy conceals its surprise and chagrin at the conclusion of the treaty under an assumed nonchalance and with the assertion that it makes no difference, as the czar will not sanction any scheme for French revenge upon Germany.

The Austrian press likewise endeavors to minimize the importance of the treaty.

The Pester Lloyd declares that it is "a tandem bike alliance, in which Russia steers in the pathway of peace."

The Opinione, of Rome, refuses to believe that any change has taken place in the European status quo unless the terms of the alliance are published, proving the change.

THE NEW EXPLOSIVE.

Mirex, It is Claimed, Will Revolutionize Modern Warfare.

CHICAGO, Aug. 28.—"Mirex," a new explosive, which the inventor claims will revolutionize modern warfare, was tested in Lake Michigan Thursday night with satisfactory results. A brass cylinder, measuring four by one and one-quarter inches and loaded with the new explosive, was thrown in the water. At the depth of five feet it exploded, sending a column of water 20 feet into the air. Another one exploded at the depth of 15 feet with the same results, the depth at which the explosion would occur being announced in advance by the inventors. The inventors claim that mirex can be thrown from a cannon to any distance and will explode in the water at the depth desired. The ingredients are a secret. John H. Edelman, a wealthy former Philadelphian, is said to be backing the inventors.

High Diver and Jumper Dead.

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—Matthew Mendes, who had given exhibitions of high diving and jumping throughout the country and in Europe, is dead of hasty consumption, aged 23 years. On April 20 last Mendes, at the St. Nicholas ice palace, in this city, jumped from a tower 90 feet high into a tank 16 feet long and three feet deep. In doing so he dislocated his back bone and broke several ribs. He was cured of his injuries, but his constitution was soon weakened so that consumption set in and caused his death.

Mess Beef for Japan.

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 28.—A million and a half pounds of mess beef for use by the Japanese army and navy is being prepared in this city by the Armour Packing Co. The shipment is the largest single beef order ever filled by a Kansas City house. The first shipment has been made in a special train of 30 cars over the Chicago Great Western railroad. At St. Paul the cargo will be transferred to the Canadian Pacific railroad for Van Conver, whence it will go by steamer to Nagasaki.

British Steamer Reached.

GIBRALTAR, Aug. 28.—The British steamer Glengyle, Capt. McGillivray, bound from London for China and Japan ports, is beached at Getares bay near here, badly damaged from collision with the British steamer Corona, in the straits. The Corona sought refuge in this port with her forepeak full of water, after having rescued the Glengyle's passengers.

Bolivans Invade Peru.

LIMA, Peru, via Galveston, Tex., Aug. 28.—Col. Pando, of Bolivia, with a force of 600 men, has invaded the Peruvian province of Sandia.

LABOR LEADERS

Gathering at St. Louis to Attend the United Conference.

Petty Jealousies May Be Put Aside and a Grand Amalgamation Formed—Mr. Sovereign Thinks the Miners' Strike is Nearer Won Than Many Believe.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 30.—The attendance of labor leaders upon Monday's united labor convention was Sunday night considerable of a disappointment to the local committee on arrangements, but they hope that Monday's arrivals will materially increase the list of those expected. The most important arrivals of the day were J. R. Sovereign, grand master workman of the Knights of Labor; W. C. Pearce, secretary and teasurer of the United Mine Workers of America, Columbus, O.; E. Askew, secretary of the National Mineral Miner's association, Ispheming, Mich., and Sylvester Keilliher formerly secretary of the A. R. U. and at present publisher of the Social Democrat, Chicago. Mr. Sovereign fought shy of reporters until nearly 11 o'clock Sunday night, when he was cornered in the La Clede and submitted to an interview.

"It is simply impossible to forecast what this conference will do," said Mr. Sovereign. "Nobody can tell what its outcome will be. It seems to me, however," he continued, "that all labor organizations realize that the time has come for them to put aside all petty jealousies and form one grand amalgamation. Whether this organization will be effected here, I can not even surmise. Organized labor has been working for some time on the line of securing legislation which will benefit the working classes but it has brought us no benefit. We will now get to work in an endeavor to remove the cause of our failure in legislative circles and hope for better results."

Branching off into the miners' strike, Mr. Sovereign said:

"This miners' strike is nearer won than many people believe. If ever there was a real grievance and a just cause for striking, it was in this strike and I believe they will yet win.

"If," said Mr. Sovereign in conclusion, "they don't win, it is the last strike I will ever go into on these lines." What new plan of action Mr. Sovereign had he declined to say.

The other arrivals of the day were G. C. Clemens, of Topeka, Kas., who bears credentials from Chairman Briedenthal, the state chairman of the populist state committee of Kansas; A. H. Claiborne, of Springfield, Mo.; E. B. Webster, national treasurer of the Patriots of America, Chicago; Frank Stephens, the noted single tax advocate of Philadelphia; L.S. Dieckey, treasurer of the National Single Tax league, of Chicago, and J. R. Finn, also of Chicago. Jas. M. Carson, president of the United Mine Workers of Illinois, has been here since Friday.

The object of Monday's conference as far as can be ascertained from the various opinions given out by the local committee are to devise some means for the relief of the striking miners of the country and to protect against "government by injunction," or in the words of the call itself, "the object of the convention will be not merely to protest against the usurpation and tyranny of the courts but to formulate plans to compel a return to the principles of free government, and put said plans into practical operation."

Secretary H. V. Steinbiss, of the Building Trades Council of St. Louis, who has the work of preparing for the convention, said Sunday night:

"The object of the meeting is to settle the miners' strike. We want justice, and we are going to have it, but not in defiance of the principles of American liberty. We are patriotic and we want what is for the best interests of the entire country. I received the call which was issued by President Ratchford and Secretary Pearce. It was indorsed by Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor; J. R. Sovereign, general master workman Knights of Labor and Eugene V. Debs. It was sent by Mr. Pearce, who asked me to help Mr. Carson, who was coming here to arrange for the convention.

BOYS IN BLUE.

Magnificent Parade of the Grand Army Veterans—There Were at Least Fifty Thousand Men in the Line.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 26.—When the morning gun on the ramparts of Ft. Porter boomed its salute for the new day the sun was obscured by banks of fleecy clouds at the east, which darkened into blackness at the west. A heavy mist rose from Lake Erie and hovered over camp Jewett and was carried back cityward by a fresh breeze from the west. But the sun soon broke through the clouds and gave promise of a brilliant day.

Drums beating the reveille brought the comrades from their tents. Aides de-camp, in the gold lace of the national guard of New York, were dashing about the streets on their rearing horses, looking with anxious care to the divisions to which they had been assigned. Men and women, and even children, began to post themselves behind the long wire screens that had been spun out along the line of march during the night like an immense spider web. Every moment the space along the front of the sidewalks grew less, and soon those who had secured first place against the wires began to feel the pressure of the crowd from behind, which squeezed them and held them prisoners for the hours that the parade would take in passing.

In the corridors of the Iroquois hotel spurs were jingling and sabres clanging as the officers of Gen Clarkson's staff hurried to the headquarters of the commander-in-chief to report to Col. J. Corey Winans, chief-of-staff.

From east and north there came at intervals the rattle of drums and the clear note of the bugle. The posts of the Department of Illinois and some of the department of Wisconsin were early on the march. The music and the tramping of the marching feet brought cheering crowds to the little detachments as they passed, and the hum of expectancy grew into a roar of excitement as the time for the moving of the procession grew nearer.

Excursion trains on every one of the many lines leading into Buffalo began to pour thousands of recruits into the already congested thoroughfares, and the railroad stations took on the appearance of human beehives, from which a swarm was flying. The street cars, as they pushed slowly down to the center of the city, by temporary side street routes, were filled to the point of distress.

Gen. Clarkson and his staff rode from the Iroquois hotel to the Hotel Niagara, as soon as the staff had assembled on Eagle street. In front of the Niagara the staff drew up in line and Gen. Clarkson waited upon President McKinley to escort him to the head of the column. At 10 o'clock the president left the Niagara, accompanied by the escort. Along the way to the point of formation the president was cheered to the echo.

At 10:30 o'clock the command to march was given and the procession moved.

Amid the roll of innumerable drums and the blare of the trumpets the Grand Army of the Republic, headed by the president of the United States, took its triumphant way through the cheering humanity. The sidewalks on each side of Main street, as far as the eye could reach, were filled with a solid mass of people. From every window faces beamed out and the the roofs had a population equal, if not greater, than that of the windows.

At North street the last wheel in the triumphal march was made. A few blocks more of great mansions and croppled lawns and the men in the advance columns could see the national colors that marked the reviewing stand at the circle.

It was 3:47 when the last post of the Ninth, or last division, moved, and 4:30 when they passed the reviewing stand, and the presidential party left the stand took their carriages for their homes. It is estimated that over 45,000 veterans were in line.

At the reviewing stand a large gaily decorated compartment in the middle of the 3,000 seats for spectators had been set apart for the president, the governor, the secretary of war and other distinguished guests. Archbishop Ireland was the first comer to receive recognition from the assemblage, a hearty cheer being accorded to him as he took his position on the stand. Gen. Ruggles, the adjutant general of the army, and Gen. Sickles were recognized. Senator Mark Hanna came to the stand early but few people seemed to recognize him and such greeting as he received was from friends in the McKinley portion of the stands.

President Borda Assissinated.

MONTEVIDO, Aug. 26.—During a national fete which was held here Wednesday, President J. Idiarte Borda was shot and killed by an assassin.

The weapon used by the assassin was a revolver.

Senor J. Idiarte Borda was elected president of Uruguay for the term extending from March, 1894, to 1898. The fete at which he was assassinated was being held in celebration of the independence of Uruguay, which was achieved on August 25, 1825.

The assassin is a youth named Arredondo.

President Borda died almost immediately after he was shot. Senor Cuestas, president of the senate, has assumed the presidency of the republic ad interim.

Hanotaux, the French foreign minister, now in St. Petersburg with M. Faure, that Russia will act hand in hand with Germany in the peace negotiations between Greece and Turkey.

MADRID, Aug. 26.—The queen regent will not formally receive Gen. Stewart L. Woodford, the new United States minister, until after the court returns from San Sebastian.

EXTRAVAGANT MANAGEMENT.

Republican Government Is Always Very Costly.

The result of republican extravagance has manifested itself in unmistakable form thus early in the life of the McKinley administration. July was the first month of the new fiscal year, and Secretary Gage's treasury balance shows a deficit of $11,000,000. When the enormous anticipatory imports to escape the duties of the Dingley bill are taken into account, together with the unusually heavy payments into the treasury by the brewers to save the rebate on beer stamps, the conclusion is inevitable that the deficit is due to the reckless use of public funds.

The amount paid out of the treasury in July exceeded by $8,000,000 the amount paid out during July of last year. This excess represents the difference between republican government and democratic government. In other words, republican government costs $8,000,000 more a month than democratic government.

One of the items of extra cost was contained in the pension account. Pension payments for the month of July aggregated nearly $15,000,000, almost $2,000,000 in excess of the amount paid in pensions during the corresponding month last year. When the pension lists reached the $30,000,000 mark in the early part of Grant's second administration he apologized for the amount and predicted that from that year on the pension account would decrease. A few years afterward Samuel J. Randall as chairman of the appropriations committee submitted a bill to the house carrying less than $40,000,000 in pensions and explained that the committee believed the high-water mark in pensions had been reached. Instead of decreasing, the amount paid in pensions every year since has increased, and this year the prodigious sum of $141,000,000 was appropriated by the republican congress. This exceeds the total cost of any of the various huge standing armies of war-scared Europe. It is more than enough to equip and put in the field an army strong enough to successfully cope with any of the finely-organized and terrible war engines of Europe on land or sea. The absurdity of such extravagance is too obvious to require analysis. Where or when it will stop no man pretends to know. Certainly there is no hope of checking it as long as the republicans hold the purse strings.

National gratitude has its limits. Men who were incapacitated for self-support in saving the union deserve national aid. This doctrine of Solon has the indorsement of modern enlightenment. But it is now more than 30 years since the civil war closed. Even if all of the more than 2,000,000 men who fought for the union were alive and entitled to pensions, under a strict and honest interpretation the amount would not be much greater than it now is. Indeed, it probably would not be as large if rigid honesty were applied to the question of pensions. The laws have been so loosely and dishonestly administered that the cost of pensions swells when there should be a steady decrease.—St. Louis Republic.

DEFICIT AND PROSPERITY.

Protectionists Have Been Given the Lie by Events.

The republican organs positively assured us some months ago that we could not hope for any prosperity so long as there was a deficit in the treasury. There is nothing in this wide world, said they, in effect, that will take the starch out of business like a deficit. The merchant might as well expect a rush of trade with a roaring lion standing in his front door as to hope to dodge the sheriff when there is a deficit in the federal revenues. The catalogue of political ills is a long one, but a deficit is the boss ill and as good as any two among the toughest of the lot. The extra session of congress was called to wipe out the deficit and save the country, and yet we are now in the enjoyment of a high degree of prosperity while the deficit continues to transact its pernicious business at the old stand.

Of course, there are those who say that the prosperity we are now enjoying is all on paper, but they are of the breed called "calamity howlers." They have an interest of one kind or another in hard times; the harder the better. They don't want prosperity themselves and they don't want anybody else to have any, and when there are no hard times they try to deceive themselves and others by howling that the times are simply awful. They are not to be considered. The fact is that we have prosperity in abundance, and in spite of the terrible deficit. Nothing is clearer than that the protectionist organs shamefully misrepresented the deficit, for we are a prosperous and happy people with the deficit still on deck.

If the protectionists are not a little more careful about their utterances they may run the risk of getting popular credit for saying what is not so.—Binghamton (N. Y.) Leader.

——The tariff "for revenue" does not seem to be filling requirements. The receipts from customs under the new law continue small, averaging about $200,000 a day, while it will take an average of $500,000 a day to wipe out the deficit. The whole of the government revenue collected for this month amounts to about $10,000,000, while the expenditures are over $18,000,000. Prosperity cannot stand such inequality between expenditure and income very long.—Indianapolis News.

——We are told in one breath by the republican organs that the effect of the Dingley tariff will be to restrict importations, and thus insure a favorable balance of trade, and in the next breath that the Dingley tariff will also increase the revenues and keep the treasury full of gold. Unless there shall be large importations there cannot be a large revenue collected from importations. If the Dingley law shall stop importations it will stop revenue.—Philadelphia Record.

WAVES OF PROSPERITY.

Webster's definition of a wave may be summed up in the term oscillation or instability. Sir Isaac Newton defines a wave as irregularity or unevenness of surface. In the natural world a wave always presupposes an evanescent climax, to be followed immediately by an anticlimax or depression.

Thus we have by their own showing the estimate which the blatant heralds of artificial prosperity place upon their own product. These partisan John the Baptists, going up and down the land telling the people to make way for prosperity, have at least the virtue of ingenuousness. They prate of a tidal wave of prosperity that is not expected on their own showing to be lasting. We are to have, according to these heralds, a wave of such prosperity as the country has never witnessed before, and all interested are to make hay while the sun shines, for not being founded on rational economics there is no telling how long the wave may last.

The whole theory of tariff legerdemain is based on the alternate swell and subsidence of socalled prosperity. A wave, either in economics or physics, presupposes a depression elsewhere. Following the physical origin of a wave to its logical conclusion, it is the depression that causes the wave, and vice versa. Prosperity for the trusts and monopolies of the United States, which is the real aim of the tariff necromancers, presupposes depression among other classes, principally consumers and the labor element.

Based on robbery, which differs in degree only and not in kind from the piracy of the middle ages or the brigandage of modern frontier life, this kind of prosperity always runs its course when an aroused public sentiment considers it time to call a halt. Whatever of real prosperity is in store for the people of the United States in the near future will be a tardy surmounting of obstacles thrown in the way of natural recuperation from hard times by the tariff tinkerers. It is to be profoundly hoped that such real prosperity, whose welcome appearance will need no heralds or exploiters, will come to remain with us and not to sweep over the nation with ephemeral touch.

Oscillation from the heights of artificial prosperity to the depths of extreme depression constitutes the most hurtful of experiences for the body politic. Steady growth without these alternate extremes is the only sign of genuine prosperity, and such growth is the nation's assured destiny when the tariff jugglers are suppressed for good.—Chicago Chronicle.

TO BUNKO THE PEOPLE.

The "Sound Money" Scheme of the Republicans.

The great cry of the republican party during the campaign was for "sound money." It declared that the question should be placed beyond controversy. It had dallied for month after month with other questions, and has finally been checkmated in this attempt to enact a parliamentary fraud upon the people. All this, too, in view of the fact that the money question is regarded as the greatest which ... before the country in its century of existence. Even after adjournment of congress, Secretary Gage, speaking for the republican party and as the head of the treasury portfolio, which is the business bureau of the government, declared that the tariff issue was infinitesimal beside the demand for money reform. Notwithstanding this declaration, which is but an echo of what the people have already declared, the country is doomed to a fresh period of disappointment. The doctor who begs to be called to the side of the sick patient and then fails to apply the remedy is a wretch indeed, but what is he compared to that great doctor of political ills who went before the country on a series of false promises and who is unable to redeem a single one of them?

The people of the United States are too intelligent to be further bunkoed by such transparent schemes, and they know now, if they did not know it before, that the republican party is but the creature of corporations, trusts and rings, which have no other purpose but the destruction of personal liberty and the robbery of their substance.—Atlanta Constitution.

POINTS AND OPINIONS.

——Isn't it odd that Mark Hanna hasn't claimed the Klondike gold strike as a logical outcome of McKinley's election?—St. Louis Republic.

——The man with a small salary and a large family, to whom the return of prosperity brings only higher prices for the things he buyeth, may rejoice that he holdeth his job.—Chicago Tribune (Rep.).

——Consumers now required to pay higher prices for the tariff-taxed necessaries of life are beginning to realize that it costs money to see the elephant, especially the pachyderm of the g. o. p. variety.—St. Louis Republic.

——Mark Hanna is quoted as saying some time ago that "no man in public office owes the public anything." In so far as Mr. Hanna has any power in the matter, he has seen that the public gets nothing, except the worst of it.—Binghamton (N. Y.) Leader.

——The revival of prosperity through the bounty of nature in this country and failing crops elsewhere comes despite restrictions on trade for the benefit of plutocrats. The "rake off" for the favored few provided for by the Dingley iniquity is merely a fly in the ointment of the country's content.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

——When the Dingley tariff was being made up Alabama iron manufacturers declared that they did not want any protection, because they could sell their product abroad without any. They have been shipping iron right along under the Wilson tariff to England and other countries of Europe and they can continue to do so.—N. O. Picayune.

The evening was spent by the young people playing games and other amusements usual upon such occasions. The older people who came to bring the children, enjoyed a quiet game of euchre and watched the merry children. At 10:30 supper was announced and very soon 60 or 70 people were gathered around several large tables that fairly groaned under the weight of substantials and delicacies. After supper festivities were continued until 12 o'clock. The party was given especially in honor of Miss Nellie Gedge but was also intended as a means of gathering together all the schoolmates of both Misses Nellie and Eva. They left wishing they might have many more such pleasant and enjoyable evenings in the future.

THE CONVENTION.

Hon. Reuben Conner Wins In A Walk.

Two Ballots Did the Work Satisfactory To All.

EVERYTHING HARMONIOUS.

The convention to nominate a Democratic candidate for representative was called to order in the court House promptly at 2 p. m., last Monday, by D. L. Castleman, chairman of the County Democratic Executive Committee, who stated the object of the convention. It was decided to nominate a permanent chaisman at once, and C. G. Riddell, of Rabbit Hash, nominated Capt. W. H. Baker, and T. F. Curley, of Walton, nominated Judge Ben Stephens.

S. W. Tolin made the point that Capt. Baker was not eligible, because he was not a delegate. Capt. Baker took the other view of the question and cited instances where others than delegates had been chosen chairmen of conventions. The chair ruled that he had nothing to do with deciding the point and the ballot for chairman was then taken by precincts and resulted as follows: For Judge Stephens—Burlington, 10; Bellevue, 5; Union, 9; Florence, 11; Beaver, 8; Walton, 8; Constance 5—51.

For Baker—Bullittsville, 9; Rabbit Hash, 7; Petersburg, 9; Beaver, 2; Big Bone, 7; Verona, 8—42.

Judge Stephens was introduced to the convention as its presiding officer, and made a very neat speech thanking the delegates for the honor.

A. B. Rouse, of Burlington, was nominated and elected permanent secretary, and J. C. Byland, of Walton, was made his assistant.

A committee, composed of one delegate from each precinct, was appointed on credentials, but as there were no contests the committee had nothing to do except make up a list of the delegates composing the convention. It decided that Florence could cast only ten votes, as one of her delegates was absent, and no one was authorized to cast his vote.

While the committee on credentials was out, the Kennedy men were on the move, and it was evident they were preparing to turn a trick.

A motion was made and seconded that a committee on resolutions be appointed, to which S. W. Tolin objected and the chair refused to entertain the motion on the grounds that such a committee was unnecessary.

Nominations were called for. Bullittsville precinct was the first on the call, and O. S. Watts, in a very modest manner, arose and said: "On behalf of the Democracy of Bullittsville precinct, I nominate the Hon. Reuben Conner." This announcement was followed by a storm of applause that showed, unmistakably, the trend of the convention.

The call of precincts was resumed, and when Constance was reached, Hon. J. H. Walton, placed in nomination, Dr. B. A. Dulaney, of Florence.

When Florence was reached Henry Tanner nominated Judge Stephens. When Union was called, S. W. Tolin, put B. L. Rice in nomination in a three minutes' speech.

No other nomination was made and ballot was ordered, and it proceeded as quietly as a Sunday school, until the result was announced, when loud applause followed.

First ballot:

	Parker	Rice	Dulany	Conner	Steph's
Bullittsville				9
Burlington	4	5	1
Rabbit Hash				7
Bellevue	5
Petersburg	9
Union		9
Florence					10
Beaver		3		2
Big Bone				7
Walton				8
Verona				8
Constance			5
	18	17	6	41	10

At the conclusion of the first ballot Dr. Dulaney withdrew his name, when a second ballot was ordered, the Conner and Kennedy delegates voting together as before. On this ballot Petersburg cast 9 votes for Parker; Union, 9 for Rice; Bellevue, 1 for Parker and 4 for Conner; Florence, 1 for Rice and 9 for Conner; Beaver, 1 for Rice and 4 for Conner; Florence, 10 for Stephens. Judge Stephens withdrew his name, and the 10 votes of Florence swung into the Conner column, to be followed immediately by Petersburg's 9. Union jumped into the band wagon, just ahead of Burlington, who was asking to be allowed to vote while Mr. Conner's nomination was being made unanimous.

The chair then appointed W. W. Grimsley and James H. Aylor a committee to notify Mr. Conner of his nomination, and thus closed what was expected to be a stormy and protracted convention, everybody declaring their entire satisfaction at the result.

Rice and Kennedy was each determined the other should not wint the nomination.

Dear Sir—I was taken with a severe cough the first of May; for two weeks I could not lie on my left side nor breathe through my left lung. I also had hemorrhage and my friends said I had consumption. I began taking Boulton's Cough Remedy and began to improve with the first dose, and within three weeks was entirely well. I can not say enough in favor of Boulton's Cough Remedy. Respectfully,

THE NEW WAY.

WOMEN used to think "female diseases" could only be treated after "local examinations" by physicians. Dread of such treatment kept thousands of modest women silent about their suffering. The introduction of Wine of Cardui has now demonstrated that nine-tenths of all the cases of menstrual disorders do not require a physician's attention at all. The simple, pure taken in the privacy of a woman's own home insures quick relief and speedy cure. Women need not hesitate now. Wine of Cardui requires no humiliating examinations for its adoption. It cures any disease that comes under the head of "female troubles"—disordered menses, falling of the womb, "whites," change of life, etc. It makes women beautiful by making them well. It keeps them young by keeping them healthy. $1.00 at the drug store.

For advice in cases requiring special directions, address, giving symptoms, the "Ladies' Advisory Department," The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

W. L. ADDISON, M.D., Cary, Miss., says: "I use Wine of Cardui extensively in my practice and find it a most excellent preparation for female troubles."

H. W. Harrison, dentist, of Rising Sun, Ind., will be in Burlington on the first and third Monday in each month, to do work for those who wish anything in his line. He will be here two days each visit. He is a son of the late R. F. Harrison, of Carrollton, and a graduate of the Pennsylvania College of Dentistry at Philadephia. He is highly recommended in his profession.

The happiest event in the history of the Boone County Teachers' Institute, occurred last Wednesday afternoon, and was the exercises attendant upon the presentation of diplomas to eight common school graduates, they being the first in this county to receive diplomas, although the law authorizing them has been in existence for some time. Consequently Superintendent Voshell is entitled to credit for so successfully introducing this new feature in common school education in his jurisdiction. He, as well as the graduates, had looked forward to last Wednesday's proceedings with fear and trembling, but the grand success achieved on that occasion was a rich compensation for the efforts on the part of the Superintendent and the pupils to attain success for the first graduating exercises.

The hour for the exercises having arrived, Supt. Voshell made a short talk in regard to what was hoped to be accompanied by granting common school diplomas, and then introduced Messrs. Cecil and Clyde Hafer, of Hebron, who treated the large audience to a duet on cornets. The young men were most heartily applauded, so well did they render their piece of music.

Miss Grace Russell, of Point Pleasant, was the first to read an essay. It was entitled, "Sun Shines in My Old Kentucky Home." It was a well prepared paper, treating principally of the history of this State and was a great credit to the young lady.

Miss Russell's essay was followed by "My Old Kentucky Home," on the piano by Prof. W. E. Cook, who is the finest performer on an organ of piano that ever appeared before an audience in Burlington.

Miss Carrie Clore, of Hebron, was then introduced, and read an essay entitled, "A Wonderful Stream." It was a well composed paper containing many beautiful applications of the subject, and displayed considerable talent on the part of the young lady. This essay was followed by Master Herbert McKim with a piano solo. Master Herbert has acquired considerable reputation as a pianist and organist, and justly so, too.

Miss Lucy Clayton, of Hebron, read a carefully prepared essay entitled, "Let us Help Ourselves." It contained numerous quotations which the writer applied to the subject in a very appropriate manner, and showed her familiarity with the writings of many of the best authors. Miss Lucy is evidently a good student, and her paper showed that she is amply able to help herself in the literary world

Miss Pauline Regenbogen, of Hebron, chose as her subject for an essay, "The Life of Man." She wrote with a grace and ease that won for her the admiration of her hearers, while her paper attested her industry as a student. This essay was followed by a beautiful piano solo by Miss Lottie Garrison, which was played in splendid style.

"By Rugged Ways We Ascend to the Stars," was the subject of Miss Jeannette Chambers, of Beaver. Miss Chambers is an interesting writer, and is well trained in composition. Her paper was the result of close study and read smoothly and contained many beautiful thoughts. At the conclusion of this essay Miss Annie Garrison favored the audience with a piano solo.

The Valedictory was prepared and read by Miss Edna Cowen, of Burlington. It was very appropriate and dealt with the practical things of life in a way that pleased all who heard the paper. At the Conclusion of the valedictory Prof. Cook rendered another piece on the piano.

Prof. Newton delivered a short lecture for the benefit of the graduates after which Supt. Voshell delivered the diplomas.

The following resolution adopted by the graduates was read by Clyde Hafer:

Whereas, by a dispensation of Providence, our ranks as graduates have already been thinned by the tragic death of Hubert Acra, who already showed promise of an active and useful life.

Therefore resolved: That we, as graduates, lament his untimely death, and extend to his bereaved parents and friends our heartfelt sympathy in their affliction.

The Institute.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON.

Psychological classification of school branches, was introduced and discussed in a learned and interesting manner by Prof. Newton.

Grammar was introduced by Prof. Newton, and a very interesting general discussion followed, and was indulged in by many of the teachers.

Miss Olive N. Orem introduced Physiology, and an interesting discussion, by the Institute, followed.

WEDNESDAY MORNING.

Prof. Newton introduced Arithmetic, and was followed by D. M. Snyder in discussing the subject.

Geography was introduced by Prof. Newton.

History was introduced and discussed at length by Prof. Newton.

The graduating exercises, an account of which is given in this column consumed the remainder of the day.

THURSDAY MORNING.

Reading was the first topic of the day, and the discussion it precipitated was lively, and was indulged in by quite a number of teachers.

School—Supt. Voshell; School Discipline—Miss Lizzie Roberts, and School Morals, Miss Ella Norman, were discussed at length by the teachers and D. M. Hewitt, trustee of District No. 14.

Spelling, oral and written, proved an interesting topic, and several teachers explained their methods of teaching orthography.

The Hiles Compulsory Educational Law was the subject of an interesting discussion, Prof. Newton opposing and F. H. Russell favoring it or a similar law. Each of the gentlemen made a good argument in favor of his position.

"Teacher in Politics," was handled in a learned manner by Prof. A. C. Collins, who created a sensation by his fearless attack on a contributor to the RECORDER, who advocated the reduction of official salaries.

The day's proceedings concluded by a review of the school law by Prof. Newton.

FRIDAY MORNING.

The subject, "Our Text Books," was introduced by the Instructor, and discussed by Supt. Voshell and Miss Lottie Burnett.

"Their Abuse," was considered by Profs. Haines and Newton, many new ideas being advanced.

"Free Text Books," were discussed by Prof. Newton in his usually earnest style.

"Civics," were handled by Profs. Voshell and Newton in an interesting manner.

"Teaching as a Profession," was considered in all its phases by Prof. Collins.

"Instructing," was shown to be a very interesting subject before Profs. Roberts and Newton concluded its consideration.

"Developing," was considered at length by Miss Harriet Bedinger.

"Training," was discussed in a very interesting manner by Miss Bettie Delph.

The Institute was treated to a n interesting talk by Rev. Harris.

The afternoon session was devoted to the adoption of resolutions and a final leave-taking. A resolution favoring the single trustee system caused an interesting discussion, and was defeated by a decisive majority. The following resolutions were adopted:

We the teachers of Boone county in Institute assembled desire to express our hearty accord with the following resolutions:

1. That, We favor free text books, printed and furnished by the State.

2. That, as the Institute benefits the teachers incidentally and the districts and therefore the State, actually, therefore, we believe the Institute's expenses should be met by the State.

3. That, We much enjoyed the commencement exercises of the class graduating from the Common Schools and were encouraged by this evidence of interest manifested to hope that such class be greatly enlarged each year.

4. That our thanks be extended to Superintendent, Instructor and Secretary and teachers for a very pro fitable and interesting Institute.

T. Z. ROBERTS.
LIZZIE ROGERS.
MAUD RYLE.

Just before adjournment the Institute adopted the following resolutions:

Whereas, Hubert Acra, a teacher of this county, recently departed this life, therefore

Resolved, That we lament his untimely decease, and extend our sympathy to his friends and family.

Just before final adjournment the Institute undertook to settle as to where the next Institute should be held. The proposition to hold it at Walton was defeated, and then on the suggestion of Prof. Gaines it was decided to refer the question to the district association.

Washington, D. C. Aug. 27, 1897.

To the Editor of the Recorder.

Dear Sir:—There were two or three inaccuracies in my article on "regie contracts" which your compositor permitted to slip through and which are worthy of correction. If you will refer to the copy you will notice where you say at the top of the second column, "Besides over $300,000,000 worth of manufactured domestic tobacco," the copy reads $3,000,000. Of course $297,000,000 is a small matter, but there are some people who kick at just such small things as that. About one-third of the way down the second column the copy reads "Compare these figures with tobacco of which we are now exporting about 80 per cent." Your insertion of 50 per cent. instead of 80 per cent. makes me contradict myself in the article. Two-thirds of the way down the same column I said "Kentucky during the past four years has produced over forty per cent. of the entire tobacco crop of the U. S." You have left out the 40. I am simply afraid of someone calling me a prevaricator on this, because she did uot produce but 35 per cent of the 1896 crop quoted, but the statement is all right for the last four years.

Thanking you in advance for your attention to this, I am

Very truly, A. G. RICE.

[We failed to read proof by copy.—ED]

Lyda Beech, of Crittenden, Grant county, was found by Senator Conner, of Richwood, early last Wednesday morning, lying on the roadside, beneath his wagon, with his neck broken. It is supposed that his horse was frightened by a train or something else, and his wagon turned over and his neck broken. The deceased was a newphew of Geo. W. Siset, of Beaver, by marriage.

The Methodist church closed its labors for the conference year, last Sunday. The small membership has done well. It has paid the salary of the pastor in full, and paid Rev. T. W. Barker and Prof. Fogg $43 for services in a protracted meeting, and raised about $55 for repairs on church. There has been a gain of five in membership. The work of repairing is now in progress.

Last Sunday afternoon some small boys went to Lee Schwartz's pond, near Florence, to go in bathing, and were surprised to find two negro babies about three months old floating on the surface of the water. The children appeared to be twins. Who is responsible for the double murder is a mystery.

Two hundred and fifty or three hundred people enjoyed the delightful entertainment given by the Ladies' Mite Society, last Wednesday night, for the benefit of the Burlington Baptist church, at the court house. The vocal and instrumental music were of the highest order, while the recitions by Miss Minnie McLaughlin and Miss Marie Mauchet, were greeted by a storm of applause from the appreciative audience. Miss Anna Rice, Miss Zayda Gaines, Miss Sallie McLaughlin, Mrs. Harry Fisk and H. G. Blanton each sustained a well earned reputation as a sweet singer. Prof. W. E. Cook contributed largely to the success of the entertainment by his excellent performance on the piano. Mrs. John Garrison, of Union, played the accompaniments for Miss Annie Rice, as did Mrs. Elbert Riley for Miss Zayda Gaines.

At the conclusion of the musical part of the programme all were invited to repair to the large rooms on the lower floor of the court house, where ice cream, sherbet and cake were served in a bounteous manner by the ladies.

After refreshments a great many returned to the circuit court room, and singing was resumed and continued for some time, Mr. Winston Coffman, of Covington, who is one of the finest vocalists in this part of the State, taking part.

The entertainment was a success in every detail, and the ladies who managed it realized a very nice little sum for the advancement of the cause in which they are laboring so earuestly.

KEEPING STILL.

Of all the men whom I admire
There's not a one who may aspire
To stand as high, and none who can,
As does the truly "quiet man."

If any being on the earth
Gets credit far beyond his worth,
That one can be none other than
This unobtrusive, "quiet man."

No matter what's within his head
His silence is interpreted
To be a sign that wisdom lies
Behind his inexpressive eyes.

If so he drops a word or two,
His friends will search 'em through and through
To meanings deeper in intent
Than e'er the speaker thought or meant.

If so by chance, he takes a stand,
Assumes position of command,
Surprised approval greets him then,
And you shall hear from other men:

"Some weighty reason lay behind
An act so foreign to his kind!
When things go wrong his moveless state
Is credited to scorn of fate.

So softly to himself he swears;
'Tis thought he murmurs pious prayers.
He's so misjudged his flaws at length
Are twisted into points of strength.

Poor humankind awaits command
From all it doesn't understand,
And he may work his own sweet will
Who has the art of keeping still.

Against the Tide.

BY ALFRED R. CALHOUN.

"NO, sir, no fashionable watering place for me; I want rest and comfort during my holidays," said Alick Freeman to his friend, Casper Burns, with whom he was discussing the place where they should spend the two weeks' vacation allowed them by the bank in which they were both clerks, and of which their respective fathers were directors.

"We had a good time at Saratoga last year," said Casper Burns, adding, with a sly laugh, "but you are afraid of meeting Miss Julia Fletcher there again; well, I don't blame you; she is as rich and pretty and heartless as you find them—"

"No, confound it, Casper, Miss Fletcher is all right, it is I who was the fool, and a presumptuous one at that, for thinking she looked more favorably on me than she did on the score of fellows who danced her like midges in the sun. I hate fashion. Why, only the strongest constitution can stand the dressing, the driving, the dining and dancing of those fashionable watering places. We want rest, or, rather, change. Now what do you say to White's Inlet?"

"White's Inlet? Never heard of such a place," replied Casper.

"Then I'll enlighten you," said Alick Freeman, stopping in the midst of packing his trunk and turning to his friend. "White's Inlet is near Barnegat—"

"Down on the Jersey coast?"

"Certainly; the fishing is good, the shooting tip-top, and there is no such place for boating and bathing. And then it is pretty well out of the world, and the chances are we'll be the only visitors within miles—"

"And we can wear out our old clothes," interrupted Casper Burns.

"Of course, no one would think of wearing anything but old clothes down at White's Inlet. Oh, we'll have a splendid time, free as the winds, and almost like being in a state of nature—"

"I know, Alick, but people in a state of nature eat and sleep; how are we to obtain those necessary comforts?"

"The point is well taken," said Alick, slamming down the lid of his trunk and facing his friend. "Right near the mouth of the inlet there lives a fisherman named White—"

"The inlet takes its name from him?"

"Just so; and he has all accommodations necessary. I sent him word we'd be down next week, and he's expecting us."

"Got any pretty daughters?"

"No; that's the beauty of it; has no one but his wife, and the only neighbor is a mile and half away across the inlet. Oh, we'll have peace and no end of a good time," said Alick Freeman, rubbing his hands in anticipation of the pleasure in store for them.

The result of this interview was that the young men found themselves at White's Inlet within a week. After leaving the cars they had to go in a wagon some 20 miles over a sandy road that ran through a forest of funereal pines and distorted scrub oaks, on which the sun beat with tropical intensity and along which the mosquitoes prowled in fierce, bloodthirsty bands.

The fisherman's house was perched on a verdureless bluff of white sand, with a swamp in the background and a glorious expanse of blue ocean in front. If the structure did not promise comfort it was certainly picturesque, and told of wrecks and dangers along that treacherous coast.

One end of the cabin was the stern section of a wrecked schooner, with the name "Eliza Jane" still visible; the chimney of rusty iron had once done duty on a tugboat, and the Gothic doorway was the under jaw of a whale which Sam White had killed on the bar, about a mile from his cabin.

"It doesn't look promising, I must confess," said Alick Freeman, as they got out of the wagon which they had hired at a round price to fetch them over, "but it looks as if we might have all the quiet here that heart could wish for." This was Alick's first visit to the place, which had been recommended to him by a bachelor friend, and though he pretended to like it he felt in his heart that it was not all he desired.

"It must be a splendid place for fish," said Casper, with a grim smile.

"Oh, it is! Why, there's no end of fish out there," said Alick, waving his hands at the water.

"If it isn't a good place for fish," continued Alick, "then it's about the most worthless place I ever set eyes on."

Sam White, a weather-beaten man of 50, came out of the cabin to welcome his guests, and help them in with their "traps," as he called the goodly array of baggage they had brought with them.

Mrs. White looked enough like her husband to be a twin, but she was a clean, wholesome, hearty woman, as unconventional as the most ardent admirer of nature could wish.

The young men were given a room—there were only four apartments in the house—in the annex made of the section of the wrecked "Eliza Jane." The windows had once admitted light to the captain's cabin, and it required no stretch of the imagination to picture themselves on shipboard. The very decorations of the chamber had a strongly marine aspect, from the highly colored print of a naval battle to the shell that answered for a soap cup.

The young men were hungry and dusty and in no good humor; so that while washing and changing their traveling dress for natty sailor costumes they did not exchange many words, though Alick ventured to say:

"I'm sure, old fellow, we'll like it hugely after we get used to it."

"People like whisky and opium after they get used to them, but is it worth while acquiring the habit?" said Casper Burns, with a shade of sarcasm in his voice.

Alick was about to respond at a venture, but at that moment Mrs. White, without the formality of knocking, put in her head to say that dinner was ready, and to add that in her opinion they "was purty nigh starved."

There was roast duck, two or three kinds of fish, potatoes like snowballs, hot biscuit and yellow butter, and a pot of steaming coffee, all served on a clean crash tablecloth.

Sam White asked a long, old-fashioned blessing, to the great amazement of the young men, who expected to find him a profane old sea dog, and then he said:

"You must make a long arm, boys, and help yourselves."

"Well," said Casper, as they strolled down to the beach after dinner, "I must confess I haven't enjoyed a meal so much for years. I was hungry, and it went to the right spot."

"Oh, this is just the place for an appetite. You can find one here sooner than in any other part of the country," said Alick, handing Casper a cigar, and feeling that there was something to redeem the place in the eyes of his friend.

As they stood on the shore the sun was setting, and the blue expanse took on a crimson tinge. They sat down on the white sand, and they could see away up the shore and across the inlet two figures—females. One of them had a white scarf about her head and the other a scarlet one, but beyond this the young men could not make them out.

"Ah! it is a comfort to know we are [illegible] out from the world," said Casper, blowing a whiff of smoke in the direction of the figures.

"I am willing to worship at a distance," replied Alick. "I'm glad the inlet separates us, but I've no doubt they are the wives or daughters of some of the fishermen up the beach."

"Them?" said Sam White, when one of the young men asked him who his fair neighbors were, "them's some folks from the city as have taken the ole Benner place for the summer. It's more lonelier over there than it is here, but when ole Cap'n Benner he was a-livin', there was no end of company over there, but that's years and years ago."

"I suppose there's no danger of any of the strangers coming over here?" asked Alick Freeman, with the slight hope that the old fisherman would say there was a great deal of danger.

"Not the least bit," replied Sam White, "but as there's two young ladies over there and two young men over here, why, the chances is that somehow they'll get together afore long."

"That's human nature," said Mrs. White, looking up from the potatoes she was peeling; "the boys'll seek out the gals just as ducks goes barefooted to the water."

Alick hinted that he was an exception, and that while he did not positively hate the other sex, their presence was essential to his misery, and much more to the same effect, all of which Mrs. White heard with a strange twinkle in her gray eyes that plainly told she had her doubts, not of the young man's sincerity, but of his reasoning.

The friends slept in the cabin that night, as they had not slept for years. Through the little windows the cool sea breeze poured in, laden with health and the balmy odor that brings sleep.

When they awoke the sun was flashing on the sea and transforming into a snow bank the bar about two miles out, where a great, black buoy rose and fell on the waves.

They had a dip in the ocean that sharpened their appetites, and after breakfast they started off with Sam White to fish outside the bar over a spot known to the fishermen of that coast as the "wreck," though there was nothing on the surface to indicate that ever a wreck had taken place there.

The fishing was all that it had been represented—indeed, the fish bit so fast as to change the sport into hard work and rob it of much of its pleasure. On their return they caught a glimpse of the two female figures beyond the inlet and far up the beach, and Casper Burns waved his hat to them and the two white handkerchiefs were waved back in reply.

The friends soon grew to like this strange life, and they began to feel that the earth had lots much less desirable than that of a fisherman—but so far they had only played with the ocean in its sleep.

They frequently saw the ladies up the beach, and they made an effort to learn who they were, but Sam White either could not or would not gratify them.

Three days before the expiration of their leave of absence Sam White proposed to take them up the shore to a point from which they could get a good view of the New York yacht regatta, which was to have a race.

Alick Freeman, still declaring he wanted to see nothing that might remind him of the world he had left until he returned to it, decided to remain back.

Alick did not long enjoy the part of hermit which he volunteered to play. He strolled along the shore with his fishing pole on his shoulder and cast many an anxious glance in the direction where he had often seen the young ladies, but they did not gladden his sight. No doubt they had gone off to look at the regatta.

About three o'clock in the afternoon Alick Freeman put on his bathing dress and went down to the beach. He was a good swimmer, though until this summer all his practice had been in tideless, fresh-water lakes or streams.

He boldly plunged through the rim of surf and swam out for a hundred yards, rising and falling on the swells that rolled in and broke on the white shingle.

"I'll lie on my back and let the waves wash me in." Suiting the action to the thought, Alick threw himself on his back—he could float without moving a muscle—and, closing his eyes, he was rocked by the swells, which he imagined were bearing him nearer and nearer to the shore.

Five, ten, fifteen minutes passed, and, wondering why he was not thrown among the breakers, as he expected, Alick Freeman turned over on his face and rubbed the water from his eyes.

Instead of being near the shore he was a half mile out, and the tide, on which he had not counted, was bearing him rapidly to the sea.

He took in the situation in an instant, and, though realizing the danger, he did not lose his presence of mind. His safety depended on his coolness.

He struck out for the shore, half throwing himself from the water by his powerful strokes, but all in vain. The tide still dragged him out farther and farther toward the foaming bar, on whose white crest tossed the black buoy.

He took off his wide-brimmed straw bathing hat and waved it in the hope that some one might see him; then, anxious to reserve his strength, he again threw himself on his back and drifted with the tide in the line of the buoy. "If I can reach that," he thought, "I can cling to the chains till help comes—if it ever does."

Before entering the line of breakers that marked the bar, he again waved his hat, then threw it away.

He reached the buoy, but the chains that kept it anchored were slimy and covered with seaweed, yet he so placed his body across the chains as to keep from drifting farther to sea, and there he hung for what seemed an age.

The sun was setting, and he was losing all heart, as well as all strength, when he heard a shrill [illegible] thunder of the breakers.

He tried to reply.

The next instant a boat with a single occupant—a girl—at the oars, shot past him and turned toward the buoy.

"Where are you?" she shouted.

"Here! Here!"

Alick let this hold, and, with a new strength, made for the boat.

The young heroine caught him and helped him on board, and the moment he was safe he fainted.

When he came to he was back on the shore, and Sam White and Casper Burns, who had come up, were chafing him with the aid of a gentleman whom Alick recognized as Julia Fletcher's father.

"Take him up to the house," said Mr. Fletcher, "and then go to your cabin for his clothes. Poor fellow, he had a hard tussle for his life!"

But the heroine? Well, as the fates would have it, Mr. Fletcher, his wife and his niece, Dora Weldon, had gone off to see the regatta, and Julia, acting under a whim, as the others supposed, remained at home. She saw the swimmer in distress, and interpreted his signals, though she knew not at the time who he was. She ran to the inlet, got a boat and boldly started out with the result already shown.

Next day Alick was himself, and he sent word to the bank about his accident, the result being that he and Casper had an extension of another week.

How the time was spent we need not say. Alick owed it to his fair preserver to become her servant, and so he was with her nearly all the time, strolling on the sandy roads and salt-marshy byways.

"Never had such a pleasant summer in my life as at White's Inlet," said Alick to a friend some years after. "It's so nice and quiet there. Casper and I were unmarried and clerks then, but we roughed it and enjoyed it, eh, Casper?"

"We met our wives, or, rather, we became engaged there," laughed Casper. "So you see it'd have to be a rough place that wouldn't seem pleasant under such circumstances."—N.Y. Ledger.

Canned Lima Beans.

Select very young, green lima beans for canning. If ripe or white, fermentation is sure to take place unless you use a preservative, which is always more or less dangerous. Wash the beans, drain and put them uncooked into the jar. Fill the jars to overflowing with cold water, adjust the rubbers and lay on the tops. Place straw or excelsior in the bottom of the wash boiler, stand the jars on this, pour in sufficient cold water to half cover, cover the boiler, bring to boiling point and boil steadily for three hours. Take up the jars one at a time, and screw on the tops as tight as possible. Stand aside over night. Next morning give the tops an extra turn and put in a dark, cool place to keep.—Mrs. S. T. TALMAGE'S SERMON.

Christ Stopped the Tempest on the Blue Galilee.

So He Can Still the Tempests in the Heart and Bring Peace to the Troubled Believer—Pretty Picture and Lesson of Solace to Voyagers.

This sermon by Rev. Dr. Talmage will be or great solace to people who are finding their life a rough voyage. Text: Mark iv., 36: "And there were also with him other little ships and there arose a great storm of wind. And the wind ceased and there was a great calm."

Tiberias, Galilee, Gennesaret—three names for the same lake. No other gem ever had so beautiful a setting. It lay in a scene of great luxuriance; the surrounding hills high, terraced, sloped, groved, so many hanging gardens of beauty; the waters rumbling down between rocks of gray and red limestone, flashing from the hills and bounding into the sea. On the shore were castles, armed towers, Roman baths, everything attractive and beautiful; all styles of vegetation in shorter space than in almost any other space in the world, from the palm tree of the forest to the trees of a rigorous climate.

It seemed as if the Lord had launched one wave of beauty on all the scene and it hung and swung from rock and hill and oleander. Roman gentlemen in pleasure boats sailing the lakes and fishermen in smacks coming down to drop their nets, pass each other with nod and shout and laughter, or swinging idly at their moorings. Oh, what a wonderful, what a beautiful lake!

It seems as if we shall have a quiet night. Not a leaf winked in the air; not a ripple disturbed the surface of Gennesaret, but there seems to be a little excitement up the beach, and we hasten to see what it is and we find it an embarkation.

From the western shore a flotilla pushing out; not a squadron or deadly armament, nor clipper with valuable merchandise, nor piratic vessels ready to destroy everything they could seize; but a flotilla bearing messengers of life, and light, and peace. Christ is in the front of the boat. His disciples are in a smaller boat. Jesus, weary with much speaking to large multitudes, is put into somnolence by the rocking of the waves. If there was any motion at all the ship easily righted; if the wind passed from one side, from the starboard to the larboard, or from the larboard to the starboard, the boat would rock and by the gentleness of the motion putting the Master asleep. And they extemporized a pillow made out of a fisherman's coat. I think no sooner is Christ prostrate and His head touching the pillow than he is sound asleep. The breezes of the lake run their fingers through the locks of the worn sleeper, and the boat rises and falls like a sleeping child on the bosom of a sleeping mother.

Calm night, starry night, beautiful night. Run up all the sails, ply all the oars, and let the large boat and the small boat glide over gentle Gennesaret. But the sailors say there is going to be a change of weather. And even the passengers can hear the moaning of the storm as it comes on with long stride, with all the terrors of hurricane and darkness. The large boat trembles like a deer at bay trembling among the clangor of the hounds; great patches of foam are flung into the air; the sails of the vessels tower, and the sharp winds crack like pistols; the smaller boats, like petrels, poise on the cliff of the waves and then plunge. Overboard goes cargo, ackling, and masts, and the drenched disciples rushed into the back part of the boat, and lay hold of Christ, and say unto Him: "Master, carest thou not that we perish?" That great personage lifts His head from the pillow of the fisherman's coat, walks to the front of the vessel and looks out into the storm. All around Him are the smaller boats, driven in the tempest, and through it comes the cry of the drowning men. By the flash of the lightning I see the calm brow of Christ as the spray dropped from His beard. He has one word for the sky, and another word for the waves, looking upward He cries, "Peace!" Looking downward He says, "Be still!"

The waves fall flat on their faces, the foam melts, the extinguished stars relight their torches. The tempest falls dead, and Christ stands with his foot on the neck of the storm. And while the sailors are bailing out the boats, and while they are trying to untangle the cordage, the disciples stand in amazement, now looking into the calm sea, then into the calm sky, then into the calm of the Saviour's countenance, and they cry out: "What manner of man is this, that even the winds and the sea obey Him?"

The object in the first place impresses me with the fact that it is very important to have Christ in the ship; for all those boats would have gone to the bottom of Gennesaret if Christ had not been present. Oh, what a lesson for you and for me to learn! Whatever voyage we undertake, into whatever enterprise we start, let us always have Christ in the ship. Many of you in these days of revived commerce are starting out in new financial enterprises. I bid you good cheer. Do all you can do. Do it on as high a plan as possible. You have no right to be a stoker in the ship if you can be an admiral of the navy. You have no right to be a colonel of a regiment if you can command a brigade; you have no right to be engineer of a boat on river banks, or near the coast, if you can take the ocean steamer from New York to Liverpool. All you can do with utmost tension of body, mind and soul, you are bound to do; but oh! have Christ in every enterprise. Christ in every voyage, Christ in every ship.

There are men who ask God to help them at the start of great enterprises. He has been with them in the past; no trouble can overthrow them; the storms might come down from the top of Mt. Hermon, and Lash Gennesaret into foam and into agony, but it could not hurt them. But there is another man who starts out in worldly enterprise, and he depends upon the uncertainties of this life. He has no God to help him. After a while the storm comes, and tosses off the masts of the ship; he puts out his lifeboat; the sheriff and the auctioneer try to help him off; they can't help him off; he must go down; no Christ in the ship. Here are young men just starting out in life. Your life will be made up of sunshine and shadow. There may be in it arctic blasts or tropical tornadoes; I know not what is before you, but I know if you have Christ with you all shall be well.

You may seem to get along without the religion of Christ while everything goes smoothly, but after a while, when sorrow hovers over the soul, when the waves of trial dash clear over the hurricane deck, and the bowsprit is shivered, and the halliards are swept into the sea, and the gangway is crowded with piratical disasters—oh, what would you then do without Christ in the ship? Young man, take God for your portion, God for your guide, God for your help; then all is well; all is well for time, all shall be well forever. Blessed is that man who puts in the Lord his trust. He shall never be confounded.

But my subject also impresses me with the fact that when people start to follow Christ they must not expect smooth sailing. These disciples got into the small boats, and I have no doubt they said, "what a beautiful day this is! What a smooth sea! What a bright sky this is! How delightful is sailing in this boat; and as for the waves under the keel of the boat, why, they only make the motion of our little boat the more delightful." But when the winds swept down, and the sea was tossed into wrath, then they found that following Christ was not smooth sailing. So you have found it; so I have found it. Did you ever notice the end of the life of the apostles of Jesus Christ? You would say that if ever men ought to have had a smooth life, a smooth departure, then those men, the disciples of Jesus Christ, ought to have had such a departure and such a life.

St. James lost his head. St. Philip was hung to death on a pillar. St. Matthew had his life dashed out with a halbert. St. Mark was dragged to death through the streets. St. James the Less was beaten to death with a fuller's club. St. Thomas was struck through with a spear. They did not find following Christ smooth sailing. Oh, how they were all tossed in the tempest! John Huss in the fire; Hugh McKail in the hour of martyrdom; the Albigenses, the Waldenses, the Scotch Covenanters—did they find it smooth sailing?

But why go to history when I can find all around me a score of illustrations of the truth of this subject? That young man in the store trying to serve God, while his employer scoffs at Christianity. The young men in the same store antagonistic to the Christian religion, teasing him, tormenting him about his religion, trying to get him mad. They succeed in getting him mad, saying, "You're a pretty Christian." Does this young man find it smooth sailing when he tries to follow Christ? Here is a Christian girl. Her father despises the Christian religion; her mother despises the Christian religion; her brothers and sisters scoff at the Christian religion; she can hardly find a quiet place in which to say her prayers. Did she find it smooth sailing when she tried to follow Jesus Christ? Oh, no; all who would live the life of the Christian religion must suffer persecution; if you do not find it in one way you will get it in another way.

The question was asked, "Who are are those nearest the throne?" and the answer came back: "These are they who came up out of great tribulation"—"great flailing," as the original has it; great flailing, great pounding—"and had their robes washed and made white in the blood of the Lamb." Oh, do not be disheartened. Oh, child of God! take courage. You are in glorious companionship. God will see you through all these trials, and He will deliver you.

My subject also impresses me with the fact that good people sometimes get very much frightened. In the tones of these disciples as they rushed into the back part of the boat, I find they are frightened almost to death. They say: "Master, carest thou not that we perish?" They had no reason to be frightened, for Christ was in the boat. I suppose if we had been there we would have been just as much affrighted. Perhaps more.

In all ages very good people get very much affrighted. It is often so in our day, and men say, "Why, look at the bad lectures; look at the various errors going over the Church of God; we are going to founder; the church is going to perish, she is going down." Oh, how many good people are affrighted by triumphant iniquity in our day, and think the Church of Jesus Christ and the cause of righteousness are going to be overthrown, and are just as much affrighted as the disciples of my text were affrightened. Don't worry, don't fret, as though iniquity were going to triumph over righteousness.

A lion goes into a cavern to sleep. He lies down, with his shaggy mane covering the paws. Meanwhile the spiders spin a web across the mouth of the cavern and say, "We have captured him." Gossamer thread after gossamer thread is spun until the whole front of the cavern is covered with the spiders' web, and the spiders say, "The lion is done; the lion is fast." After a while the lion has got through sleeping; he rouses himself, he shakes his mane, he walks out into the sunlight; he does not even know the spiders' web is spun, and with his voice he shakes the mountain.

So men come, spinning their sophistries and skepticism about Jesus Christ; he seems to be sleeping. They say, "We have captured the Lord; He will never come forth again upon the nation; Christ is captured, and captured forever. His religion will never make any conquest among men." But after a while the Lion of the tribe of Judah will rouse himself and come forth to shake mightily the nations. What is a spider's web to the aroused lion? Olive truth and error a fair grapple, and truth will come off victor.

But there are a great many good people who get affrighted in other respects; they are affrighted in our day about revivals. They say, "Oh! this is a strong religious gale: we are afraid the church of God is going to upset, and there are going to be a great many people brought into the church of God who are going to be of no use to it," and they are affrighted whenever they see a revival taking hold of the churches.

As though a ship captain with 5,000 bushels of wheat for a cargo should say, some day, coming upon deck, "Throw overboard all the cargo;" and the sailors should say, "Why, captain, what do you mean? Throw over all the cargo?" "Oh," says the captain, we have a peck of chaff that has got into this 5,000 bushels of wheat, and the only way to get rid of the chaff is to throw all the wheat overboard." Now, that is a great deal wiser than the talk of a great many Christians who want to throw overboard all the thousands and tens of thousands of souls who have been brought in through great awakenings. Throw all overboard because there is a peck of chaff, a quart of chaff, a pint of chaff! I say, let them stay until the last day; the Lord will divide the chaff from the wheat.

Oh, that these gales from Heaven might sweep through all our churches! Oh, for such days as Richard Baxter saw in England and Robert McCheyne saw in Dundee! Oh, for such days as Jonathan Edwards saw in Northhampton! I have often heard my father tell of the fact that in the early part of this century a revival broke out in Somerville, N. J., and some people were very much agitated about it. They said, "Oh, yon are going to bring too many people into the church at once;" and they sent down to New Brunswick to get John Livingston to stop the revival. Well, there was no better soul in the world than John Livingston. He went up; he looked at the revival; they wanted him to stop it. He stood in the pulpit on the Sabbath, and looked over the solemn auditory, and he said: "This, brethren, is in reality the work of God; beware how you try to stop it." And he was an old man, leaning heavily on his staff—a very old man. And he lifted that staff and took hold of the small end of the staff, and began to let it fall very slowly through, between the finger and the thumb, and he said: "Oh, thou impenitent, thou art falling now falling away from life, falling away from peace and Heaven, falling as certainly as that cane is falling through my hand—falling certainly, though perhaps falling very slowly." And the cane kept on falling through John Livingston's hand. The religious emotion in the audience was overpowering, and men saw a type of their doom as the cane kept falling and falling until the knob of the cane struck Mr. Livingston's hand, and he clasped it stoutly [illegible] but the grace of God can stop you, as I stopped that cane." and then there was gladness all through the house at the fact of pardon and peace and salvation. "Well," said the people after the service, "I guess you had better send Livingston home; he is making the revival worse." Oh, for the gales from Heaven, and Christ on board the ship. The danger of the Church of God is not in revivals.

Again, my subject impresses me with the fact that Jesus was God and man in the same being. Here He is in the back part of the boat. Oh, how tired He looks, what sad dreams he must have! Look at his countenance; he must be thinking of the cross to come. Look at him. He is a man—bone of our bone, flesh of our flesh. Tired, he is fallen; he is a man. But then I find Christ at the prow of the boat; I hear Him say, "Peace, be still;" and I see the storm kneeling at His feet, and and the tempests folding their wings in His presence; He is a God.

If I have sorrow and trouble, and want sympathy, I go and kneel down at the back part of the boat, and say, "O, Christ, weary One of Gennesaret, sympathize with all my sorrows, Man of Nazareth, Man of the cross." A man, a man. But if I want to conquer my spiritual foes, if I want to get the victory over sin, death and hell, I come to the front of the boat, and kneel down, and say, "O, Lord Jesus Christ, Thou Who dost hush the tempest, hush all my grief; hush all my temptation; hush all my sin." A man, a man; a God, a God.

I learn once more from this subject that Christ can hush the tempest. It did seem as if everything must go to ruin. The disciples had given up the idea of managing the ship; the crew were entirely demoralized; yet Christ rises and puts his foot on the storm, and it crouches at His feet. Oh, yes, Christ can hush the tempest.

You have had trouble. Perhaps it was the little child taken away from you—the sweetest child of the household, the one who asked the most curious questions, and stood around you in the greatest fondness, and the spade cut down through your bleeding heart. Perhaps it was an only son, and your heart has ever since been like a desolated castle, the owls of the night hooting among the falling rafters and the crumbling stairways.

Perhaps it was an aged mother. You always went to her with your troubles. She was in your home to welcome your children into life, and when they died she was there to pity you; that old hand will do you no more kindness; that white lock of hair you put away in the casket, or in the locket, did not look as well as it usually did when she brushed it away from her wrinkled brow in the home circle or in the country church. Or your property gone, you said: "I have so much bank stock, I have so many government securities, I have so many houses, I have so many farms"—all gone, all gone.

CIRCULAR DRIVEWAY.

The One Here Pictured Has a Number of Advantages.

It ought to be possible to drive into and out of a farm yard, or a village lot, without turning the wagon. This can only be done by having the driveway in the form of a circle or having a circle or oval in some part of it. The cut gives a plan for a circular drive that has a number of advantages. One can drive in from the highway and make an easy turn back to the street again. The circle within the road affords a fine opportunity for the effective grouping of shrubs and foliage plants. There are also excellent opportunities afforded on the outside of the driveway for effective planting of trees and shrubs. A side drive, curving about the house to the stable, can be added if needed.—Orange Judd Farmer.

THE HUNTING NUISANCE.

Farmers Should Make a United Effort to Stop It.

As soon as harvest is over the farms of the state, especially those near towns, will be overrun by hunters and their dogs, says Wallace's Farmer. These fellows are out for sport and have no hesitation in leaving gates open and shooting wherever the bird flies without reference to the farmer's cattle, horses or sheep, and if prairie chicken and quail are not plenty, have no hesitation in practicing on the birds that are the farmer's friends. They have no business on the farm, no right to set a foot on it without the farmer's permission, and may be prosecuted for trespass or damage to stock if the farmer so elects.

His election, however, does him no good. Many of them are judgment proof, and the expenses of a lawsuit would be more than any damage that could be secured. The right thing to do is to post notices: "Hunting not permitted on this farm," and then if they insisted on doing it, order them off and enforce the order if necessary at the point of a gun. One of the most provoking things on the farm is to have an invasion of hunters, involving as it does loss or damage to [illegible]. The game they shoot are the friends of the farmer anyhow, and they are his by right if he wishes to do a little shooting himself.

When the country was a great grain field with little or no stock and game abundant, no damage was done by the hunters. It is different now. In other countries the farmer sells the right to shoot on his place. Real sportsmen in the eastern cities are already buying this right from farmers, or a neighborhood of farmers, going to the expense of importing game birds and stocking the farm for the benefit of enjoying the sport of shooting them in the fall. This is the honorable way of sport, and farmers should insist that it be followed in the west as well as in the east.

AMONG THE POULTRY.

Buckwheat is a first-class egg producer.

Geese and ducks should be full-feathered before killing.

Late hatched turkeys can be given a free range earlier than the early hatched.

When the hens stop laying a change of food will often start them to laying again.

Dampness and lice are the great demoralizers among all kinds of young poultry.

When there is no check in growth the chickens will get over their feathering easily.

The laying of unusually large eggs is pretty good indication that the hens are too fat.

The best plan is to train the young poultry to roost in the poultry-house from the start.

If there are any hens to be sold this fall a good time to sell them is when they quit laying.

A little flaxseed meal in their food will help the old fowls to pass through their moult quickly.

If young ducks are allowed access to a pond too early they are apt to have cramp in the legs.

The flesh of the guinea is dark, but it has a delicacy of flavor that approaches that of wild game.

Give the hens all possible freedom and there will be less trouble with soft-shell eggs, as they will secure the lime they need.—St. Louis Republic.

Level Culture of Potatoes.

Almost all practical growers now agree that the level culture of potatoes brings the largest crop. This is especially true if the season be dry, as of late years it almost always is. If the ground is cultivated often enough no weeds can appear above the surface. That will make it easy to keep the crop free of weeds without ever needing to cultivate more than an inch below the surface. This is the best way to subdue the perennial weeds, quack grass and Canada thistles, as well as the annual weeds.

THOROUGHBRED HOGS.

Why They Should Be Given a Place on Every Farm.

At an Iowa farmers' institute in reply to the question: Would you have a thoroughbred herd of hogs on every farm? a prominent hog-raiser said:

If my plan could prevail I would have nothing but pure bred hogs in this country. I do not mean by that that every herd should be registered. That would be an expensive uselessness, but I do mean that all stock should be traceable to recorded ancestry. Then let the registered herds be kept up to the highest standard of excellence to supply a male head for each of these pork herds. The professional breeder would then do a flourishing business and the farmer would not be looking around for the best hog in Christendom for ten dollars. He would demand something better than that and would be reaping the profit which he justly deserves from feeding his farm produce to a class of hogs that would net a snug profit and command a premium on any market, whether high or low, and at the same time have a bunch of hogs that he could take infinite satisfaction in "hanging on the fence" to look at and to show his neighbor because they always call forth favorable comment and admiration, which would be an incentive for something a little better if possible for the next crop. I say that until the thoroughbred hog shall be given a place on every farm his true mission is not fulfilled, and further that the mission of the professional breeder if he be honest and unselfish and sees the whole thoroughbred scheme in its proper light is not fulfilled until such is the case. If every farmer could see this plan from the proper standpoint and could comprehend the advantages accruing from its consummation three years at most would accomplish the work. But though firm in the faith as I am I have grave doubts if it is ever accomplished. There is too great a diversity in human nature, too wide a range of disposition, too many scrub men, too much difference, to ever expect to see all the farmers stand on a level in any branch of industry. However, the cause is advancing, and one fact is well established, that when a man once gets a taste of thoroughbred blood, like the bulldog, he never lets loose except to get a better hold.

FOR RINGING HOGS.

Clever Contrivance Which Is Not Protected by Patents.

This is the way we catch hogs for ringing. Take an ordinary shipping crate for hogs, take off cleats at both ends, on one end nail at four corners of the crate four cleats two inches by three inches. Over these crosswise at top and bottom of crate nail two two-inch by three-inch strips. Through these bore one-half inch holes, dodging three inches apart. Into this space insert two movable levers with holes in them opposite those in cleats. When finished the end of the crate will look like this:

Levers No. 1 and 2 are held in place by two bolts without burrs. This makes them adjustable to different-sized hogs. No. 2 is thrown back ready for the hog to put his head in. Set the "trap," we call it, at your pen door, with hogs inside, with one man or boy to chase one at a time into it and as the hog runs his head into the open trap catch him just behind the ears by moving lever No. 2 to an upright position quickly. When you have your hog in the trap you can ring him at your leisure. We have used this kind of a device for ten years. There is no patent on it.—E. D. Hale, in National Stockman.

Cultivating After Rains.

Much the best time to cultivate is after a rainfall which has packed the surface soil, provided time enough has elapsed for the surface to dry. Heavy soils are rich in mineral plant food, and this as the water evaporates is left on the surface as a crust which effectually excludes light and air. When this crust is turned under it is dissolved by the moisture and makes a rich food for plants. Besides, the cultivation opens the soil to receive air, thus drying the soil and turning the air itself into moisture. This enormously increases available plant food in the soil. Besides, the loose soil on the surface which the cultivator leaves prevents too rapid evaporation, and thus makes the soil both warmer and moister than it would be if uncultivated.

Turnip Flavor in Milk.

When cows accidentally get into a turnip patch, or other vegetables that impart a bad flavor to the milk, it can be made as good as ever for cream and butter making if it is heated to a temperature of 140 degrees. This is best done by placing the vessel in water which is quickly brought to a slightly higher temperature. All the odor passes off at this temperature, as it is very volatile. In cooling, the cream will rise to the surface. It also makes the butter come more quickly than from milk not heated.

12,000 IN ONE FAMILY.

They Are the Webbs and Their Relatives in Letchter County, Ky.

With hardly an exception every resident of Letchter, a little county in eastern Kentucky, is related directly or indirectly, to the Webb family, which makes that family without doubt the most remarkable one in the United States. There are six surviving children of Benjamin Webb, the original settler, and their immediate descendants are legion. They are as follows: Aunt Letty, aged 80, who has 80 grandchildren, 50 great-grandchildren and an even dozen of great-great-grandchildren.

Aunt Polly, 82 years of age, who has eight living children, 70 grandchildren, 45 great-grandchildren and almost half as many great-greatgrandchildren. She married very early in life and her husband was killed in the war.

Jason, who is but 78 years of age, is proud of the fact that his descendants outnumber those of any of his brothers or sisters. In the same house where he lives—built more than 60 years ago—he began housekeeping, and there were 19 children born to him. Sixteen of them are still living. He has 150 grandchildren, 80 great-grandchildren and 60 great-great-grandchildren, all of whom live within ten miles of the old gentleman.

Uncle Miles has seen the snows of 75 winters, but is still able to ride over the mountains to visit his best girl—his sister-in-law, by the way. For five years Uncle Miles has been a widower, and he is thinking seriously of again marrying. He has 14 children, all married and having large families. He cannot tell the exact number, but merely estimates them. A reasonable estimate, he says, gives him 100 grandchildren, 75 great-grandchildren and 40 great-great-grandchildren.

Aunt Sally, though 73 years old, is known as a worker. Her husband, aged 78, is still living. They have 13 children, 80 grandchildren, 60 great-grandchildren and 20 great-great-grandchildren.

Uncle Wiley is the boy of the family. He is 71 and has been a widower for seven years. He has 11 children, 65 grandchildren, 30 great-grandchildren, and the old gentleman very much regrets the fact that his descendants do not extend to the fifth generation. He is thinking seriously of marrying again and is very wealthy.

Within the vicinity where these old people live there are about 800 of their descendants, and of the 12,000 population of the county it is said the degree of consaguinity can be traced easily enough to prove them all relatives of each other in the way in which all the inhabitants came to be related, either directly or indirectly, to the Webb family, is as follows: The first settler in that district was Benjamin Webb, a man with a prolific family, who moved to the wilds of Kentucky from Ashe county, North Carolina, about 1789 or 1790. Soon after three families—the Crafts, Adamses and Halbrookes—settled near Webb, and members of the latter's family married into each of the three new families and their progeny intermarried.

Aunt Polly is as spry as a girl, and thinks nothing of a 15-mile walk. She often takes long rides alone over the mountains on a visit to relatives. A few years ago Jason took his first ride in a train, going to Tennessee, and the innovation in his life is still a source of pleasure to the old man. But two of them, Jason and Wiley, ever saw a car.

Aunt Sally, because of the long illness of her husband, for years managed the farm, and it was an ordinary sight to see her on her way to the mill with a bushel of corn on her shoulder. The father of these old people, Benjamin Webb, was a first cousin of the noted pioneer, Daniel Boone. He was an eccentric character, and at the siege of Yorktown, he was wounded, as it was thought, fatally. He was thrown among the wounded, but after many months he recovered.

As might be imagined, the little county is a small kingdom, over which the elder Webbs are political monarchs. Should a Webb aspire to an office, the result is easily foretold. There undoubtedly is not another such state of affairs existing in any locality in the country.—St. Louis Republic.

The Beauty of the Palisades.

So much has been said of the beauties of the Palisades, and their threatened mutilation by the quarrymen has been so loudly lamented, that I shall doubtless be challenged for saying that I find a little of the Palisades in the landscape goes a great way! They begin well at the north, and they die away gracefully enough at the southern end; but between these two extremities they seem to me, after 50-odd years of familiarity, rather forbidding than grand, rather mannered than graceful. How, they may look after another half-century, when their heights shall be crowned by buildings—cottages and palaces, churches and monasteries—their now rude and theatening sides hung with terraced gardens and made accessible by roads of Roman build, we may please ourselves by fancying.—Clarence Cook, in Century.

The Commons at Buckingham Palace.

Members of both sides of the house of commons have been comparing notes of grievance anent the recent fiasco at Buckingham palace. Two interesting stories have been going the round of the lobby. One is that when Mr. Speaker, who was sitting on a form in a vault or a corridor, waiting to be summoned to the presence, was called upstairs it was done in a very unceremonious manner. "Speaker!" shouted an official up aloft; "Speaker!" shouted another at the top of the cellar steps; and so the first commoner of the Mother of Parliaments was invited to leave his form and go upstairs with his address. Another story is that while the crowd was being hurried out backwards a gorgeous lackey looked down contemptuously from his scarlet-clad height, and remarked in an audible aside: "This lot badly wants sorting over!"—Westminster Gasette.

THE WOMANLY QUEEN.

Sterling Qualities of Great Britain's Monarch.

When the world has united in honoring the womanly queen whose reign is without a parallel in English history, it is worth while to set down in order some of the personal qualities which have not been specially noted, but which have endeared her to her subjects, and rendered her the most useful sovereign of the century. A correspondent in England thus describes them:

One of the marked traits of the queen is tact. "Gracious" is the word which is most frequently used in England when her name is mentioned. It is kindness of heart that enables her to set visitors at ease when they are presented to her, and to convince the multitudes, who witnessed her triumphal progress through the streets of London, that her nature has not been hardened, but softened and sweetened by 60 years of exalted power.

Her manners are simple and sincere. She is thoughtful of the feelings of others, and says the right thing in the right way. She shows by her demeanor on public occasions that she honors her subjects and desires to promote their welfare and happiness.

Another quality is a business-like talent for relgning. She has work to do, and she performs it in an orderly, methodical way. Her life at court is conducted by the clock. Everybody in attendance upon her is required to be punctual to the minute, and every day's arrangements are carefully ordered so that she will have time for every detail of public business and courtly ceremonial. She never allows herself to be hurried in examining and signing public papers.

She is thorough and precise in everything which she does. A portion of each day is taken up with the business of state. What remains is divided so that she has time for an afternoon drive, social life at court, the direction of the royal household and adequate rest. She knows nothing of the secret worries of royalty.

Another trait is sterling common sense. Throughout her reign she has adapted herself to the conditions of constitutional rule, under which the continuance of monarchy has been possible in a revolutionary age.

She has respected the will of the people in every election; she has taken no interest in party politics; she has followed the advice of the ministers of the day; and she has shown sound judgment in making the crown the instrument of popular government. One prime minister after another has found her to be a capable, experienced ruler, well informed in home and foreign affairs, and with clear ideas of her own relations to the state.

Her greatest virtue as a sovereign has been her womanliness. As wife, mother, widow and first lady of the realm, she has never unsexed herself, but has remained an example of womanly graces of character.

Short in stature and without beauty of feature or grace of carriage to impress either a well-ordered court or the throngs of sightseers crowding the streets through which she passed on jubilee days, she commands respect by her purity of life, her devotion to her husband's memory and her children's welfare, and her genuine womanly qualities.

Elizabeth, with her inflexible will and hard, masculine order of mind, was a kingly queen in an iron age of conquest. Victoria has been a womanly queen in a home-loving empire, reigning in a golden era of progress.—Youth's Companion.

How It Happened.

Tourist (in Oklahoma hotel)—That mild-mannered, meek-looking little man who sat opposite me at dinner looked very peculiar with his fierce pompadour. I wonder how he happened to adopt that style of wearing his hair?

Landlord—Oh, that's Rev. Mr. Harps. He has been wearin' his hair that way ever since he was in a stageload of passengers who were held up by a cross-eyed road agent who was so nervous that the hook of his finger on the trigger of his gun kept openin' an' shuttin' like a bird's claw.—N. Y. World.

Encouraging Statistics.

The Baltimore and Ohio officials are very much pleased with certain statistics that have recently been prepared of the performance of freight trains on the Second division, which handles all the east and west-bound traffic between Baltimore and Cumberland. Before the new freight engines were purchased, and the improvements made in the track in the way of straightening curves and reducing grades, the average number of cars to the train was 28 1-2. Now, with more powerful and modern motive power and a better track, the average is 40 cars per train, an increase of 41 per cent. The average east-bound movement per day for the first ten days of August was 1,123 loaded cars. On the Third division, Cumberland to Grafton, where there are grades of 125 feet to the mile, the engines used to haul 19 1-2 loads to the train. Now the average is 25 2-3 loads per train, an increase of 31 per cent. It would certainly appear that the money spent in improvements on the B. and O. is being amply justified, and that the cost of operation is being very materially reduced.

The Country's Needs.—"What this country needs," said the earnest citizen, "is more warships." "Yes," replied Senator Sorghum, reflectively, "and more consulships."—Washington Star.

Do We Need Big Muscles?

By no means. Persons of herculean build frequently possess a minimum of genuine vigor, and exhibit less endurance than very small people. Real vigor means the ability to digest and sleep well, and to perform a reasonable amount of daily physical and mental labor without unnatural fatigue. It is because a course of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters enables the enfeebled dyspeptic to resume the allotted activity of every day life, as well as to participate without discomfort in its enjoyments, that it is such a preeminently useful medicine.

KIDNEY TROUBLES

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Also Backache.

I cannot speak too highly of Mrs. Pinkham's Medicine, for it has done so much for me. I have been a great sufferer from Kidney trouble, pains in muscles, joints, back and shoulders; feet would swell. I also had womb troubles and leucorrhœa. After using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and Blood Purifier and Liver Pills, I felt like a new woman. My kidneys are now in perfect condition, and all my other troubles are cured.—MRS. MAGGIE POTTS, 324 Kauffman St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Backache.

My system was entirely run down, and I suffered with terrible backache in the small of my back and could hardly stand upright. I was more tired in the morning than on retiring at night. I had no appetite. Since taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I have gained fifteen pounds, and I look better than I ever looked before. I shall recommend it to all my friends, as it certainly is a wonderful medicine.—MRS. E. F. MORTON, 1043 Hopkins St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

Kidney Trouble.

Before taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I had suffered many years with kidney trouble. The pains in my back and shoulders were terrible. My menstruation became irregular, and I was troubled with leucorrhœa. I was growing very weak. I had been to many physicians but received no benefit. I began the use of Mrs. Pinkham's medicine, and the first bottle relieved the pain in my back and regulated the menses. It is the best kind of medicine that I have ever taken, for it relieved the pain so quickly and cured the disease.—MRS. LILLIAN CRIPPEN, Box 77, St. Andrews Bay, Fla.

The corn crop in Edmonson county is almost a complete failure, little or no rain having fallen there since the planting was done.

In Shelby, Sam W. Booker's barn, with a pair of mules, agricultural Implements and feed, burned; loss about $2,000; insurance about $1,000.

Clark county has a short hemp crop and the quality is inferior. One farmer has 50,000 pounds stored, holding it for 5 cents, and he believes he will get it.

It is said that Bales & McIlwaine, of Richmond, have refused $1,000 from New York parties for their 3-year-old saddle mare Cleopatra. They hold her at $2,500.

The Bowling Green times after careful investigation estimates that 10 per cent. of the wheat crop of Warren county was sold and delivered direct from the thresher at an average of 62 cents per bushel.

Mr. Wm. Coyle threshed 8,000 bushels of rye, 2,000 of wheat and 1,000 of oats last week for Mr. L. V. Harkness, the horseman who purchased the Muir farm. This was probably the largest rye crop ever raised by one man in the State.—Georgetown News.

Some parties entered John McGraw's barn, near Helena Station, Sunday night by tearing off a plank and cut open 200 sacks of wheat. The sacks were completely ruined, the grain was scattered about on a pile of tobacco stalks and much of it will be lost.—Maysville Bulletin.

The peach was originally a poisoned almond. Its fruity parts were used to poison arrows, and for that purpose were introduced into Persia. Transplantation and cultivation have not only removed its poisonous qualities, but turned it into the delicious fruit we now enjoy.

"If there is anything in the signs of the times," says the Live Stock Indicator, "they certainly warrant the conclusion that the cattle business is undergoing a very general and genuine revival. From the standpoint of the breeder the prospects are better than they have been for years."

It is conservatively estimated that the wheat yield in Bourbon county is about 260,000 bushels, most of which has been sold at an average price of sixty cents per bushel. At this estimate the crop will be worth about $156,000 to the farmers. The average yield per acre was about eighteen bushels.—Bourbon News.

The greatest wheat section in Kentucky if not in the United States is the Nolin valley extending from the Red Mills to Long Grove on one side of Nolin and from near Sonora to White Mills on the other side, embraced in these boundaries were about 40,000 acres of land. This year 10,000 acres of this territory were in wheat, and it has produced an average of over 30 bushels to the acre, or 350,000 bushels.—Elizabethtown News.

J. C. Huffman, of Eighty-eight, Barren county, has just harvested and roasted some coffee which was grown on his farm near that place, and says it is better than Arbuckle's best, says the News. He secured the seed from parties in Garrard county, and planted it according to directions sent with the coffee, and says he can raise it as easily as anything that grows on the farm. He says he can produce it for 2 cents a pound, and will put in a good crop of it next year.

Orin Henderson, while digging up the roots of a tree near Carl, West Christian county, discovered under the roots a tin box which, upon opening, he found to contain $2,500 in gold and silver. The money is supposed to have been placed there thirty years ago by the late Malinda Powell. Mrs. Susan Tucker, owner of the land upon which the coin was found, claims it, and she will go to law to recover the treasure from Hen derson.

Mr. L. T. Doty had a fine 2-year-old gelding pacer killed by lightning Sunday evening. Mr. Doty refused $150 for the horse a few days before.

There were ten special deputy marshals on duty in Owenton Monday. Thirteen drunk and disorderlies were pulled, and it wasn't a very good day for pulling, either.

A party of night riders went to the toll-gate near Monterey, on the Owenton and Monterey turnpike, last Thursday night and burned the house in addition to destroying the gate. The keeper, Hamlet Ford, pleaded with them to spare the house, but they were determined and said they came to burn and intended to do it. This is one of the roads where the stockholders refused to accept the county's proposition to buy. The gate had only been recently replaced, as noted in the Herald of last week.

The largest crowd that has been in Owenton for many years assembled last Monday, the announcement that Allen O. Myers, of Ohio, would speak serving partly as an attraction. At the last hour, however, that gentleman telegraphed that he could not come, had to attend a political meeting somewhere in his own state, etc. Of course this caused a feeling of disappointment to some extent, but not very long. Judge J. W. Greene and Hon. Evan E. Settle, two Democratic wheel-horses, who are always ready for any emergency, were pressed into service and made able and interesting addresses.

A great number of chickens and turkeys have died throughout this section lately of a disease termed "limber neck." The disease affects the fowls necks, and they are unable to hold their head up, and droop and die. Ed Marshall, of the Eagle Hotel, lost about fifteen turkeys and chickens last Tuesday. There is no known remedy to effect a cure.

The protracted meeting at the South Fork Christian Church has been truly a revival as the house has been crowded every night. Rev. S. M. Bernard, of Meridian, Miss., the former pastor, has had the meeting in charge and has been assisted by Rev. David Hartsfield, of Louisville, and Rev. Joseph L. Greenwell, of Glencoe. The attendance was so large Sunday night that Revs. Greenwell and Hartsfield preached in the road to an over flow meeting while Rev. Bernard held services in the church.

Sparta Lodge, F. and A. M., had a very pleasant meeting last Saturday evening when the Master's degree and the Fellowcraft degree on Geo. Morgan. There was a large attendance and the work was greatly enjoyed. Bro. Herman Carpenter officiated as Master in both degrees. Warsaw lodge was represented by George Snyder, Arthur Vanice, Everett Winn, Joseph K. Nesbit and Ed Carpenter.

Our town marshal, Joseph Castello, deserves considerable praise for his energy in the discharge of his duties. He has kept the weeds cut down on our streets this summer which adds materially to their appearance, and has also placed new gutter crossings on a great many corners throughout town and although the duties of his office does not call for this extra work he cheertully gives his time and labor for the town's improvement. Joe is all right.

Ben C. Graham, an expert diver, of Newport, Ky, was here Saturday endeavoring to find the body of Wm. Montgomery, who was drowned from the steamer Lizzie Bay several weeks ago. Mr. Graham exploded a number of charges of dynamite in the river near hickman's Landing, where Mr. Montgomery is supposed to have been drowned, but no evidence of the body resulted. A great number of fish were killed and stunned by the discharge of dynamite and there were quite a number of people in skiffs catching the fish as they came to the surface of the water.

Tuesday night, about 10 o'clock this section was visited by a severe rain ann thunder storm. Lightning struck Mrs. Ann Goin's frame house, in lower part of town, tearing the weather boarding off for a space of about twenty feet long and five feet wide and knocking the plastering off on the inside about four feet square, also tearing down part of a portico. The lightning also struck in W. B. Lineback's yard adjoining tearing up the ground considerably. Mrs. Goin was sleeping in the portion of the house struck and the bed was covered with debris. She was considerably shocked as were also Mrs. John Ward and child in an adjoining room. Mrs. Goin's escape from instant death seems almost miraculous. Luckily the house did not take fire.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXII. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 1897. NO. 46

KANSAS LETTER.

Anthony, Kas., Aug. 30, 1897.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

Certainly prosperity has overtaken Kansas. I have been here about two weeks and never before did I see as much wheat, oats and barley as I have seen shipped from one point (Anthony,) the county seat of Harper county. Up to this date there has been over 2,000 car loads of wheat shipped of this year's crop and not one-half threshed yet.

There are thousands of acres now plowed and ready for wheat and thousands of acres to be gotten ready for the 1898 crop. It has been raining for two days, which will insure a large wheat crop this fall. Just think, tor one moment, what prices they are realizing for it with no expense to get it to market except the hauling. Wheat is worth here today, August 30th, from 91c to $1 per bushel. I know to my certain knowledge, of hundreds of mortgages that have been paid off already and there will be a thousand more in the next sixty days.

No one can imagine the stir and push the farmers have on them—getting their wheat to market and preparing for another crop.

The stores of all kinds have put on twice the number of clerks in order to wait on their customers. I have clipped a piece from a paper which I will send along to show what they think at Washington about Kansas and its crops.

"Said Frank P. MacLennan, of the Topeka State Journal in the presence of an Associated Press reporter. Mr. MacLennan left Topeka less than three weeks ago and is returning with his wife and daughter from a brief vacation on the northern lakes, arriving on the Str, Manitou from Mackinac."

"The most careful estimates, continued he, places the Kansas crop of that one cereal at 51 million bushels. This advance alone in these few days means $15,000,000 more money to the Kansas growers on that single product. The yield per acre is unusually large, reaching in some instances more than 40 bushels to the acre.

"This wheat crop in various localities will not only enable the Kansas farmer to elevate his mortgage to 'kingdom come,' but will give him enough funds to more than pay for his lands. He can now realize more from his wheat than the ground would have sold for a year ago. This is true in hundreds of instances. The thrifty Kansas farmer is again in good circumstances. He has been going towards that condition for several years and the crops this season will make him indepen-dent.

"Wheat is not alone in the Kansas farmer's elevation to prosperity. There are numerous others. Corn has been under estimated. Kansas will have at least one hundred and fifty million bushels and it will bring a bigger revenue than the enormous crop of 1895. The average in barley and flax give many a Kansas farmer's family a piano and daily papers."

I am in the swim for my part of the wheat, which has been threshed and delivered, checks handed over and drafts to my credit.

Yours respectfully,

JOHN W. GAINES.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

Washington, Sept. 3d, 1897.

It has always been considered the proper thing to make support of the National platform of a political party the test of a man's loyalty to his party. The platform adopted by a party in National convention is the only authentic declaration of the principles of that party and must be so considered until another National conventiou meets and adopts another platform. These facts are so self-evident that mention of them seems almost unnecessary, yet objection is being raised because democrats are insisting that the platform adopted by the Chicago convention must be accepted as the principles of the democratic party. To do anything else would be a radical departure from all political precedents.

There is a clash of authority in the Interior Department between Secretary Bliss and Indian Commissioner Jones that may end in a big row among prominent Republicans. Mr. Jones' present assistant is Mr. Thomas P. Smith, who is a Democratic holdover. Mr. Smith has made a tip top record and Mr. Jones would like him to remain in his office. Boss Hanna directed sometime ago that one of his Ohio proteges—Tawner, by name,—who has been serving as the private Secretary of Secretary Bliss, should be appoihted Asst. Commissioner, and the appointment was about to be made when Commissioner Jones heard about it and notified Secretary Bliss that he would not have Tawner for his assistant. Then there was a high old time in the office of Secretary Bliss, and the relations between him and Commissioner Jones are very much strained, but Tawner has not yet been appointed. Of course, if Boss Hanna insists he will be, and if Jones doesn't like it he can resign. It is a custom to consult the wishes of bureau chiefs in selecting their assistants, and upon that custom Commissioner Jones relies.

Republicans would rather not talk about the deficit of about 26 million dollars shown by the official figures of the government's receipts and expenditures for July and August, the first two months of the new fiscal year. They have already done too much talking about the surplus that the new tariff was certainly going to produce.

Senator McLaurin's success in S. C. primary election which means his nomination and election to the Senate, was the source of no little pleasure to his numerous Washington friends. He has already shown that he will make a Senator of whom his state and section will be proud,

Representative DeGraffenreid, of Texas, is in Washington. Speaking of wheat and silver he said: "Our farmers are this year blessed with abundant crops and the wheat-producing countries on the other side of the ocean have short crops. In other words, the demand for American wheat is almost greater than the supply; hence the big prices which the speculators are just now getting. I am sorry tosay this will not always continue, for next year the demand for wheat by reason of goodcrops on the other side may be only normal, and in that event our farmers will not receive any more for their wheat than formerly. Let the mints of the United States, England, France, and Germany be opened to-morrow to silver, and you would see the price of the white metal rise steadily until it reached the level of gold. Why would it rise? Simply because of the demand—just the same as demand has raised the price of wheat." Mr. Graffenreid expressed his opinion strongly of those who are constantly decrying the four hundred million standard silver dollars the country now has, and ended an interesting chat by saying: "The only solution of the question is to open the mints to silver the same as gold. Permanent prosperity will never come through the further contraction of the currency, which the gold bugs are trying to bring about by discrediting our standard silver dollars. What the country needs is more money. That will be the issue in the next campaign, and in my judgment, the Democrats will win upon it."

Mr. John Russell Young, the new Librarian of Congress, is now having a hard wrestle with the more than seven thousand applicants and their friends, who were disappointed when he, this week, announced the appointments to ten of the best positions at his disposal. He still has forty or fifty small places to dispose of and although they only carry small salaries the pressure to get them is something awful to contemplate.

The sound money press and leaders say that free silver is dead. Under such circumstance what is the necessity or use of Mr. Hanna spending $2,000,000 in the Ohio campaign and employing 36 Senators and Representatives and a host of other speakers to stump every precinct in the Buckeye state? It doesn't really look as though the Hannacrats mean it when they say that free silver is dead.—Rochester Times.

The Concord Baptist Association passed the following resolutions on the Whitsitt matter:

Whereas, Dr. W. H. Whitsitt did for pay in an article in the New York Independent of date Sept, 2, 1880, make the following statement, viz:

1. The Congregationalist is more accurately acquainted with the origin of the Baptist history than the Baptists themselves.

2. The baptism of Roger Williams was at least two years prior to the introduction of the practice of immersion among the Baptist.

3. It seems likely that Roger Williams (in 1644) brought the first reliable news concerning the change which had taken place in the practice of the English Baptists three years before and that it was then the American Baptists accepted the innovation.

Whereas, Dr. W. H. Whitsitt did, in the same paper Sept. 9, 1880, make the following statements, viz:

1. It was not until the year 1644 that any Baptist confession prescribed "dipping or plunging the body in water as the way and manner of dispensing that ordiance."

2. That Edward Barker is the founder of immersion among Baptists.

Whereas, Dr. W. H. Whitsitt, in his article in Johnson's New Encyclopedia, did make the following statements, viz:

1. Omitted for want of space.

2. The earliest organized Baptist Church belongs to the year 1610 or 1611.

3. The ceremony (baptism of Roger Williams) was most likely performed by sprinkling.

Whereas, Dr. W. H. Whitsitt did, on page 133 of his book, make this statement, viz:

I believe it beyond question that the practice of adult immersion was introduced anew into England in the year 1641.

Whereas, Dr. W. H. Whitsitt in quoting or rather pretedning to quote from authors in divers instances misquoted them.

Two whereases omitted.

Whereas, Dr. Whitsitt has failed to resign, as in our former resolution requested, and it being evident that he does not intend to resign, therefore be it resolved.

1. That all Baptists since the days of Christ have believed in and contended for the freedom of speech and the liberty of conscience, and that we cheerfully accord to Dr. Whitsitt these privileges which we claim for ourselves; but we also most earnestly insist that in his contention he speak as Dr. W. H. Whitsitt and not as the President of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, nor as the Professor of Church History, nor as a Baptist.

2. That we deplore the lack of historical research upon the part of Dr. Whitsitt and his untairness to the authors from whom he pretends to quote, and that we declare our shame in that we have in our denomination one who would stoop to quote from such a writer as Praise God Barebones in any serious discussion.

3. That the showing made by Dr. Whitsitt in his attempt to sustain his so-called new discovery evidence the fact that he is not accurate enough nor careful enough to occupy the chair of Church History in the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary.

4. That we condemn the disloyalty to the Baptist denomination and to truth which Dr. Whitsitt has so clearly shown.

5. That we repudiate and refuse to acknowledge any obligation to Dr. Whitsitt for any good which has or may have resulted from the discussion of his "question."

6. That we respectfully but most earnestly urge upon the Board of Trustees of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary the prompt removal of Dr. Whitsitt from the Presidency of the Seminary and from the chair of Church History.

7. That it is, the sense of this Association that the Seminary should be under more direct control of the denomination and we as a constituent of said institution have a controlling representation on the Board of Trustees thereof.

EUROPE WANTS HORSES.

In connection with the coming French exposition, Secretary of Agriculture Wilson hopes to develope a plan by which the breeding of horses tor use in the cavalry of European armies will be encouraged. The demand for horses for army use is very great in Europe. The French government sent an army officer to the United States some time ago to learn how far horses could be drawn from this country for the French cavalry and artillery. The report was most favorable to American breeding and to the abundant supply. Recently the needs of England in her military operations in Asia and Africa have led her to look to Argentina for cavalry horses and the first consignment of 500 Argentine horses left Buenos Ayres this month for British military service for Cape Town. Thus far no steps have been taken by this government to foster the trade for American horses, but Mr. Wilson is considering the advisability of sending abroad an expert who will investigate the needs of the cavalry of Europe with a view to meeting this need by American bred horses. It would doubtless stimulate horse breeding at a time when that business has suffered much through the inroads of electricity and the bicycle.

THE Board of Directors of the North Kentucky Agricultural Association are to be congratulated upon the success of their fair, last week. It was a perfect success in each and every particular, and all who attended were well pleased.

The statistics show that out of 2,300,000 Germans who have left the Fatherland since 1871, 2,100,000 have come to America.

Every boy and girl in the old-time schoolhouse understood "the art of telegraphing without wires" long before modern scientists discovered it.

Klondike is much nearer the states now than was California in 1849 and 1850, when it took from four to five months of marching to reach the gold fields.

Paris has been making a test of horseless carriages for long runs and the best time made was 25 miles per hour. The leading carriage made 105 miles in four hours thirteen minutes.

The latest printing press turns out 96,000 eight-page papers an hour. Men not yet old can remember when the fastest press could not print that many four-page papers in 48 hours.

It has been finally demonstrated by Prof. Alfred M. Mayer, of the Stevens Institute of Technology, New York city, that there is a film of air on the surface of water strong enough to uphold a small piece of chemically clean and dry metal.

The good health enjoyed throughout the land this summer is phenomenal. The doctors in Chicago find but little to do, and the hospitals have not half as many occupants as usual. New York city reports "the lowest death rate for the past 25 years."

A New York paper recently wrote to the governors of all the states and territories for estimates of the present population. All the reports have been carefully compiled and show that the total population of this country is now, in round numbers, 75,000,000.

The young women of Harper, Kan., are forming an organization and taking pledges not to go with men who drink, smoke or use profane language. Their motto should be: "The man who furnishes draft for a pipe cannot furnish a draft on New York for me to spend at the seashore."

A cyclist in Portland, Me., took his wheel to pieces to clean it, putting the balls, bearings, etc., on the doorstep, where they were gobbled up by some chickens. Instead of egg-bearing chickens he now has a flock of ball bearing hens and the way they go through a flower bed is a marvel in mechanism to the neighbors.

There are now 27 societies in the United States membership in which depends on descent from ancestors who distinguished themselves by coming over to America at an early date or doing something notable at that time. Meanwhile the great-grandfathers of the rest of us were minding their own business and we ought to organize.

Prince Luigi of Italy has rendered a very distinct service to geographical science by his successful ascent of Mount Saint Elias, in Alaska, the highest peak in North America. He has approximately determined the height of the mountain and established the fact that it has never been, as had previously been supposed, a great volcano. For this service he is entitled to the thanks of the American people.

Life has its romances, tragedies and comedies as sweet, as sad and as terrible as any which novelist, poet or playwright ever conceived. The original of "Evangeline" was probably no more romantic or truly poetic than the story of the two Scandinavians, Lena Olson and Christopher Bergstrom, who, parted as lovers in their youth, both died in the Dunning (Ill.) asylum, where they had lived for many years in their old age, not knowing each other.

Italy appears to be the home of the anarchists, although they are men who know no country. The murderers of President Carnot and Premier Canovas were both Italians, and it is satisfactory to note that the police of Milan and other cities are taking steps against the incendiarics. It is only a question of time before the governments of the world will be compelled to unite in a relentless war against the reds, who themselves make war upon society.

Some antiquarians in the state of Washington, who were evidently under the impression that nothing is sacred to a scientist, have been enjoined to reinter the remains they recently removed from an Indian graveyard. It seems that the relics belong to an existing tribe who are not particularly interested in ethnology, and desire to be let alone. Learned pundits should be careful to restrict their grave explorations to prehistoric man, who has no surviving friends, and who should regard it as a very high compliment to be ticketed and given a place among the properties of a scientific museum.

DECISIVE STEPS

Toward Forming an Organization by the Pittsburgh Operators—Meeting Between Mine Owners and the Miners' National Board.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 2.—The first decisive steps toward forming a permanent organization of the independent coal producers of the Pittsburgh district was taken Wednesday. A well attended meeting was held in the office of the Blythe Coal Co. in the Iron Exchange building. About twenty operators were in attendance. The meeting was in a large measure informal and the situation was discussed in all its details. There was a unanimous sentiment in favor of forming a permanent organization to be known as the Coal Exchange.

A committee was appointed to report a plan by which the smaller producers can be benefitted in the way of fairer prices from the lake shippers. They are to make a report which is to give the objects and the mode of regulating the organization. The following are the committee. J. W. Shields, W. J. Steen, J. W. Johnson, W. R. Wilson and G. W. Hosack. The committee will meet Friday and make a report to another meeting to be held Saturday afternoon, when it is expected to perfect the organization. It is claimed by some that the real object of the meeting was to confer with the lake shippers with a view of settling the strike at the 69 cent rate, but this was denied by those who took part in the meeting.

Pittsburgh coal operators will meet the national executive board of the United Mine Workers of America at 8 o'clock Thursday morning, at Columbus, O. A conference will be held and it is very probable that the big strike will be settled, not, however, until the miners of the Pittsburgh district have a say. This, in brief, is the situation and hopes are high that a settlement will follow the conferences. It may be prevented though by one side or the other failing to make concessions that seem to be in sight.

W. P. Bonney, who represents the Scott interests, George W. Schlenderberg, U. A. Andrews and J. C. Dysart all boarded the train Wednesday night for Columbus. None of them would say anything for publication except Mr. Dysart. He said: "The miners' officials have asked to confer with us and we are going to Columbus for that purpose. That is all I can say."

W. P. Dearmit, president of the New York and Cleveland Gas Coal Co., Wednesday evening, attached the signature of his company to the uniformity agreement. This signature has been looked for for a long time and some of the promoters of the scheme were beginning to despair of getting it. Those having in charge the securing of signatures now feel confident that the rest of the operators will fall in line rapidly and the uniformity plan will soon be an assured fact.

The executive committee of the big lake shippers held a meeting Wednesday and it is said it was decided to move at once toward opening their mines. The mines were selected, but their location was not made public. As there seems to be a possibility of a settlement at [illegible] active steps toward resumption will not be taken until after the result of that conference is known.

A STORM

In Indianapolis Does Much Damage to Property—The Wind Reached a Velocity of 65 Miles an Hour.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 2.—For an hour Wednesday afternoon a storm of unusual force raged in this city. Buildings were blown down, trees uprooted and vehicles were turned over in the streets. Heavy wagons were blown across the streets, and in once instance a transfer wagon was blown through a window into a clothing store.

The roof of Geisendorf's woolen mills was blown off, also a portion of that of the building occupied by the Everitt Seed Co. No less than a dozen large plate glass windows ranging in price from $75 to $200 each were either demolished by the force of the wind or flying timbers.

Ella McClure, a colored woman, whose home is in Jeffersonville, Ind., was in a buggy which was picked up and carried several feet by the wind. The vehicle was turned over and the woman fell underneath where she lay until rescued by a number of men.

The wind preceded a heavy rain and it carried with it great clouds of dust which completely shut off the view. For a time it was so dark that the lights were turned on in many of the business houses. According to the weather bureau the wind reached a velocity of 65 miles an hour. No fatalities are reported.

To Strengthen the Pensacola Harbor.

PENSACOLA, Fla., Sept. 2.—The army and navy departments having decided to further strengthen the defense of this harbor, the president has issued an order setting apart about 270 acres of the naval timber reservation on the main land extending into the bay and opposite to the city about four miles distant for military and naval defense. It is understood that batteries for 16 guns are to be erected here. These guns will command the entire inner harbor, the navy yards and the city and will be a valuable addition to the outer defenses already erected.

Whitecaps Held Under Bond.

COLUMBUS, Ind., Sept. 2.—Felix Brummett, Joseph Brummett, Christofer Brummett, Solomon Brummett, Cary Rogers, Thomas Campbell, Wm. Dowell and John Stidd were arrested in Brown county, charged with whitecapping John S. Sherwood and daughter, Lily, four miles west of Nashville, at midnight on the night of August 27. The daughter was held over a fence and severely beaten with switches, and her father was tied to a tree. Defendants gave bond in the sum of $300 each for appearance before Justice Guthrie, September 10.

THE CAPITAL.

Attorney General Preparing His Decision on the Question

Relating to Discriminating Duties—His Decision will Probably Be Made Monday—Gen. Ruggles to Retire September 11—Alaska Mail Matters.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3.—The attorney general is devoting much of his time this week to the preparation of his decision of the question involved in the interpretation of section 32 of the tariff law relating to discriminating duties. He is exhausting all the authorities and carefully weighing all the arguments. It is not probable that the decision will be ready until next Monday.

Mr. McKenna has not yet decided whether the present decision will cover all the controverted questions involved in the sections that have been referred to him, and there seems to be a strong probability that the forthcoming decision will not decide the question raised as to whether the omission of the words "act of congress" from the present section repeals section 4228, of the revised statutes, thereby imposing the 10 per cent. discriminating duty on goods imported in the vessels of countries not exempt by express treaty stipulation. If not, it will be covered in some future decision.

Brig. Gen. George D. Ruggles will retire on September 11, having reached the age limit. Gen. Ruggles has had a very active career and for the past four years has been adjutant general of the army. He has had 23 years' service west of the Mississippi, and during the war participated in 13 different engagements. It is generally believed that Gen. Breck, now acting adjutant general, will succeed Gen. Ruggles.

Postmaster General Gary has issued a formal order establishing an exchange of mails once a month between Dyea, Alaska, and Dawson City, Canada. The service is to consist of one round trip each month, the first trip to commence at Dyea upon the arrival at that place, via Juneau, of the mail steamer scheduled to leave Seattle, Wash., on the 11th of September and to arrive at Dyea on the 20th of the same month; and the subsequent trips to commence upon the arrival at Dyea of a mail from Seattle.

The mails in question shall contain only letters and post cards, to the exclusion of all other articles.

The mails made up at the office of Dyea for the office of Dawson City shall contain letters and post cards addressed for delivery at any place in the United States.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—The special army board created by Secretary Alger to draw plans for garrisoning the new coast defense works, had its first meeting at the war department Thursday. It is expected that the work before the board will occupy it for a long time, relating as it does to the location of barracks and quarters at many points, drain and water supply, the assignment of proper forces of artillerymen to each point of defense, and perhaps the propriety of a general increase of force in the artillery arms.

BRIDGE JUMPER

Lies in a Critical Condition in a New York Hospital.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—William Orten umped from the Brooklyn bridge Thursday afternoon and now lies in a critical condition at the Marine hospital. He rode on a truck going to Brooklyn shortly before two o'clock. When the truck was near the center of the bridge Orten got off and quickly climbed upon the rail. The bridge was crowded with promenaders but no policeman was near. Orten stood on the rail for a few seconds and throwing off his hat jumped out into space. He turned over several times in his descent and struck the water on his right side. When he came to the surface, the crew of the tug Gratitude fished him out. Orten was in an exhausted condition and after a while said: "I sid it, I did it, didn't I?" Then he sank into a state of coma from which he had not recovered at last accounts.

Upon regaining consciousness Thursday evening the patient stated that his name is Herman Otten, and that he is a sailor, 18 years old. Otten refused to say whether he had jumped or simply fallen from the bridge. He is under arrest. The surgeons say that he will survive.

Mounted Police Leave for the Gold Region.

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 3.—The detachment of mounted police who are to make the tripoverland from Edmonton to the Yukon mining district start Friday. They will be composed of a detail of six men under an inspector. It is expected that a trail will be found for miners and cattle going to the Yukon, but it is not anticipated that freight can be brought in that way.

Start With Non-Union Men.

SHARON, Pa., Sept. 3.—Filer & Co., of this place, have started their coal mines independent of the coal strike in this county. They have a force of men now at work and intend to put more to work. They claim they are paying their men good wages, and as they have eight contracts, they must get out the coal.

Several Persons Hurt at a Fire.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 3.—Diehl & Lord's wholesale beer, cider and soda works, corner Church and Front streets, owned by Adam Dichl, were almost totally destroyed by fire Wednesday night. The loss on stock is estimated at $30,000, with no insurance. The building was insured for $7,000, which will probably cover the loss. The fire originated in the stable and five horses perished in the flames. During the fire a number of soda founts and carbonic acid gas drums in the building exploded and several spectators were hurt.

THE PRESIDENTIAL PARTY

The Guests of the Ohio State Board of Agriculture.

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 4.—President McKinley and party arrived at 10 a. m. Friday as guests of the Ohio state board of agriculture. They were preceded by Hon. James Wilson, secretary of agriculture, who rejoined them here. With the president came Mrs. McKinley, Senator and Mrs. Hanna, Secretary and Mrs. Alger, Col. and Mrs. Myron Herrick, Webb C. Hayes and other personal friends.

Upon arrival the committee on reception appointed by the board of agriculture, escorted the president between lines of police to carriages. The crowd in the vicinity of the station was immense, the weather being fine and the attendance at the fair very large.

Col. John S. Poland, in command of the Seventeenth United States infantry, and Col. Coit, in command of the Fourteenth Ohio national guard infantry, together with the Junia hussars, J. C. L. Pugh commanding, received the president at the station entrance with present arms. He was then escorted, the city police leading the way, to the Great Southern hotel, which assigned rooms appropriate to the occasion.

En route to the hotel the president was recognized by thousands of people, and handsome, patriotic decoration of buildings, to which he responded in the usual way. His face is very familiar to citizens of Columbus and Ohio.

The outpouring of people evinced more of the feeling of a warm welcome home to a great favorite than anything to which the scene might be compared.

Luncheon having been served at the hotel in the regular dining room and to which all table guests of the house were admitted as usual, the president and party took carriages for the fair, overtaking the military, which had gone ahead "to rest in the shade" as desired by the president until he came to them at a point near the entrance. Having carried a gun himself and other military accoutrements he seemed not to have forgotten how soldiers, in war, and especially on parade, are often required to stand for hours awaiting the convenience of dignitaries.

Marching into the large fair grounds, the procession moved through a sea of human beings to the main building, where the president addressed the school children from Columbus and many parts of the state, all of whom had been especially invited by card and admitted free.

The president expressed himself as being especially pleased to meet the children. Later in the day the party was escorted to various buildings of interest where short speeches were made and informal receptions given.

The president was interested in the cottage in which Grant was born. It is enclosed in a building of steel and glass and is the property of the farmers of Ohio, being permanently located on the fair grounds.

It is variously estimated that between 75,000 and 100,000 people were gathered on the state fair grounds Friday afternoon to greet President McKinley, but only a fraction of this number were able to hear the brief speech which he delivered. It was school children's day at the fair, and thousands of little folks were scattered through the crowd. President McKinley directed his remarks in part to them.

TRAIN ROBBED.

Masked Men Board an Express Car and Rob the Safe of a Large Amount.

DENVER, Col., Sept. 4.—News has just reached here that the Gulf passenger train No. 1 was held up and robbed at Twin mountain Friday night at 11:30 by two masked men.

The two men got on the blind baggage at Folsom and when nearing Twin mountain they climbed over the tender of the engine, and covering the engineer and fireman with revolvers, ordered them to stop when they reached the road crossing.

At Twin mountain two men were stationed at the road crossing with four horses, and as soon as the train stopped they began to shoot their revolvers and to intimidate the passengers. Two men entered the express car and blew opened the safe. It is not known how much was secured, but it is estimated at from $5,000 to $15,000.

Immediately on receiving the news at Folsom, a posse was organized and started in pursuit. A posse also started from Trinidad at two a. m. The railroad company have offered a reward of $500 for the capture of the robbers.

Woman Brutally Assaulted.

NEW YORK, Sept. 4.—Mrs. William M. Whitman was brutally assaulted by a Negro in a lonely street at the northwestern limit of Newark, N. J., Friday and was beaten until she was insensible. After a long time she regained consciousness and dragged herself to the nearest house. She was removed to her home and later her condition became critical and it is feared she will die. Hundreds of men are scouring the country in search of her assailant.

Bundy Fails in Spelling.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Sept. 4.—R. C. Bundy, the colored candidate from Cincinnati for naval cadetship failed to pass in spelling. He took an examination Friday in mathematics, but it will not be known until Saturday how he stood. He will have a re-examination in spelling Saturday. A large number of the white boys also failed in English.

Unknown Negro Lynched.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Sept. 4.—News has reached here of the lynching of a Negro, name unknown, near Excel, Monroe county. A man named Knight, who had a store at that place, found the door opened when he returned from supper. He started to enter, when a Negro concealed behind the door struck him with an ax, crushing his skull. The Negro then robbed the store of $200 and left. Knight remained unconscious during the night and was found by some one next morning. The Negro was arrested and an officer started with him to jail, but a mob took the prisoner and hanged him.

SCHOONER SINKS.

The Crew Manned the Vessel's Boat Just Before the Ship Went Down.

They Rowed to Warsaw Island and Were Taken Care of at the Warsaw Inn—The Wrecked Vessel's Net Tonnage Was 357.86 and Was Built in 1873.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Sept. 6.—The three-masted schooner Agnes I. Grace, of Bangor, Me., capsized and sunk Sunday morning 20 miles east of Tybee. Her crew came ashore in a boat and landed at Warsaw island Sunday afternoon. The schooner Grace sailed from New York August 28, with a cargo of salt for Savannah, and four 16-ton guns for the Tybee fortifications.

All down the coast she was driven by a fierce northeaster, and on Saturday night she came off Tybee, laboring heavily in the gale. An effort was made to bring her to and save her being driven further to the southward, but when she was brought to the wind and began to toss in the heavy seas, the big guns which formed part of her deck load broke loose from their lashings and took possession of the deck. The crew was driven into the rigging and the iron monsters plunged about as the vessel heaved in the sea, making every effort to recapture them almost certain death.

About 9 o'clock Sunday morning an unusually heavy swell tossed all four guns into the port scuppers and the vessel heeled under the immense weight, tried to right, but staggered as the green water broke fiercely in over the bulwarks. She capsized and sank.

Capt. Farrar and his crew, consisting of seven men, succeeded in manning the vessel's boat after much difficulty and rowed away from her just as she went down. They arrived at Warsaw island, 20 miles south of Tybee inlet, at 4 o'clock p. m. The proprietor of the Warsaw inn took the shipwrecked sailors in and did everything necessary to make them comfortable. They will come to the city Sunday either in their boat or on the sloop Harford, which is at Warsaw on her way to Savannah. The schooner Agnes I Grace was built at Waldoboro, Me., in 1873, and hailed from Bangor, Me. She was 126 feet in length, of 31.5 in breadth, and 11.9 feet deep. Her gross tonnage was 376.09 and net tonnage 357.86.

TWO EXPLOSIONS.

Five Men Known to Be Dead and Fifteen or Twenty Hurt—Broad Ripple, Ind., on Fire.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 6.—Two frightful explosions of natural gas occurred in Broad Ripple Saturday morning at 10 o'clock.

Two men are known to be dead, 15 or 20 are painfully hurt, and it is feared that there are many dead covered by the debris of brick buildings blown by the force of the explosion.

The business part of the town caught fire, and the largest buildings have been destroyed. The city has been called on for help and has sent engines and doctors.

Five buildings were blown at once, and were doomed before help could be attempted.

The entire community turned out, and there was work for all to do in rescuing the injured threatened with danger of death by fire.

The fire was under control at noon with five business houses destroyed. The dead are Pious Gresh, grocer, aged 19, burned to death; Jacob Darling, painter, crushed by falling walls, Chas. Yountz, single, aged 35, found dead in grocery ruins; two unknown bodies, burned to a crisp.

Among the injured are, 'Squire Culbertson, hurt by debris; William Boss, hips crushed; Joseph Wambaugh, painfully bruised; Frank E. and Edgar Watts, burned and scratched; Emmley Johnson; F. W. H[illegible]ton, bruised.

A NEW ELDORADO.

Representatives of a Syndicate on the Way to the Mexican Gold Fields.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 6.—A special to the Journal from Sedalia, Mo., says: J. W. Corkins, a Sedalia capitalist, and Leo Cloud, an expert mining engineer of Cincinnati, O., representatives of a St. Louis and Cincinnati syndicate, will leave here Monday for the west coast of Mexico, to practically verify the value of gold placer and quartz mines which have recently been secured by the syndicate through concessions and mineral land grants from the republic of Mexico.

Messrs Corkins and Cloud will go direct to Hermosillo, and from there to the gold fields in the new Eldorado, located in the Yaqui Indian country, which has just been opened to entry to white men. This part of Mexico has been explored but little by the whites, but if the reports of the syndicates prospectors are true, the inland mountain ranges along the west coast of Mexico are richer even than those of the Klondike. The placer mines are said to be marvelously rich in salt and scale and nugget, while the quarts rock in the upper ledges contains veins of free milling ore which assays from $50 to $2,500 per ton. The syndicate succeeded in keeping the discovery a secret while securing its mining patents and concessions, and if the reports received here are substantially correct the syndicate will be able to turn the tide of fortune hunters from the gold fields of Alaska to the Eldorado of Mexico.

Yellow Fever at Ocean Springs, Miss.

MOBILE, Ala., Sept. 6.—State Health Officer Saunders having reported the result of the examination of the fever which has been prevailing for some weeks at Ocean Springs, Miss., on the bay of Biloxi, or Gulf of Mexico, 56 miles from Mobile, and 84 miles from New Orleans, the disease being pronounced yellow fever, the Mobile board of health Sunday night declared a rigid quarantine against Ocean Springs. All persons coming from that place or neighborhood are to be detained at a station established outside of the city limits.

More Bundles of Nerves.

Some peevish, querulous people seem mere bundles of nerves. The least sound agitates their sensoriums and ruffles their tempers. No doubt they are born so. But may not their nervousness be ameliorated, if not entirely relieved? Unquestionably, and with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. By cultivating their digestion, and insuring more complete assimilation of the food with this admirable corrective, they will experience a speedy and very perceptible gain in nerve quietude. Dyspepsia, biliousness, constipation and rheumatism yield to the Bitters.

THE FRAUD ENJOINED.

Report of Decree—The Famous $50,000 Trademark Case Decided in St. Simmons Medicine Company vs. St. Louis, Defends J. H. Zeilin & Co., Philadelphia.

[From St. Louis Republic, July 4, 1893.]

The Supreme Court of Tennessee on June 30 decided the most important trade-mark case that has ever been tried in that State and on. of the largest ever tried in the country, sustaining and enforcing the opinion of the court below. The court held:

1. That D. M. A. Simmons, the predecessor of complainant, by extensive advertising of his celebrated remedy known as "Simmons Liver Medicine," made it a standard remedy and by years long prior to the acquisition by J. H. Zeilin & Co. of any rights.

2. That the assignor of J. H. Zeilin & Co., through whom they claimed the right to make the fraudulent packages enjoined, never derived any title from A. G. Simmons to make the medicine nor to use his name or pictures, and that the use by Zeilin & Co. is a fraud upon the public, and is therefore enjoined.

3. That Zeilin & Co. purposely, fraudulently labeled their medicine in imitation of complainant's medicine to unfairly appropriate the trade of the Simmons Medicine Company, and the execution of this fraudulent purpose and act is enjoined.

4. Enjoined Zeilin & Co. from using their competitor's trade-name, trade-marks, or symbols, or imitations thereof, to deceive the public and unfairly appropriate or themselves the trade of the C. V. Simmons Medicine Co.

5. Enjoined Zeilin & Co., from deceiving and practicing a fraud upon the public by labeling their package in imitation of the wrappers and trademarks of the complainant.

6. Enjoined Zeilin & Co. from the manufacture and sale of the medicine under the name of "Simmons Liver Medicine," or "Dr. Simmons Liver Medicine," or "Lives of sire by A. G. Simmons," and from using the picture of A. G. Simmons in connection therewith.

7. Enjoined Zeilin & Co., their assignees, agents and employes from deceiving and practicing a fraud upon the public by the sale of packages falsely labeled, either upon orders or calls for the genuine "Simmons Liver Medicine" of complainant, or in any package thus falsely labeled.

8. The court stated that it was the purpose of the court to entirely destroy the fraudulently labeled packages above described, and cause their removal from the market, and ordered Zeilin & Co. to do it or to cause to be destroyed, all cuts, dies, electrotypes, engravings and other paraphernalia used in impressing either of the above names or the picture of A. G. Simmons.

9. Decreed that Zeilin & Co. pay all the damages which have accrued to complainant by the sale of these fraudulently labeled packages. The damages claimed by complainant were $50,000.

10. Decreed that Zeilin & Co. pay all the costs, which amount to several thousand dollars, the record being one of the largest ever filed in the Supreme Court."

Cheap Medicine.

As a rule, "cheap medicine" is cheap, worthless, or dangerous. In Zeilin & Co.'s answer to our bill they used the packages enjoined were designed as "cheap negro medicine for the negroes of the Mississippi Valley." Now, as Zeilin & Co.'s advertisements say, and their manager swore, that all the liver medicine which they make is made by the same formula, it is not conclusive evidence from their own sworn testimony and advertisements, that all the liver medicine emanating from them is "Cheap Negro Medicine?" Question: Do the sick of America desire "Cheap Negro Medicine?" Let the afflicted answer by their future purchases. Dr. M. A. Simmons' Liver Medicine, established in 1840, is not "cheap medicine." It is "the best of all," and is only recommended for those indigestion and caused by inactivity of the liver.

TALMAGE'S PLAN

For Settling Industrial Troubles Set Forth in His Sermon.

"Whatsoever Ye Would That Men Should Do to You, Do Ye Even So to Them"—If Followed, This Rule Would Settle Strikes and Place Both Sides on the Way to Happiness.

Dr. Talmage's text Sunday was Matt. vii., 12: "Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you do ye even so to them."

The greatest war the world has ever seen is between capital and labor. The strife is not like that which in history is called the 'Thirty Years' War, for it is a war of centuries, it is a war of the five continents, it is a war hemispheric. The middle classes in this country, upon whom the nation has depended for holding the balance of power and for acting as mediators between two extremes, are diminishing, and if things go on in the same ratio as they are now going, it will not be very long before there will be no middle class in this country, but all will be very rich or very poor, princes or paupers, and the country will be given up to palaces and hovels.

The antagonistic forces are closing in upon each other. The Pennsylvania miners' strikes, the telegraphic operators' strikes, the railroad employes' strikes, the movements of the boycotters and the dynamiters are only skirmishes before a general engagement, or, if you prefer it, escapes through the safety valves of an imprisoned force which promises the explosion of society. You may pooh pooh it; you may say that this trouble, like an angry child, will cry itself to sleep; you may belittle it by calling it Fourierism or Socialism, or St. Simonism or nihilism or communism, but that will not hinder the fact that it is the mightiest, the darkest, the most terrific threat of this century. All attempts at pacification have been dead failures, and monopoly is more arrogant and the trades unions more bitter. "Give us more wages," cry the employes. "You shall have less," say the capitalists. "Compel us to do fewer hours of toil in a day." "You shall toil more hours," say the others. "Then, under certain conditions, we will not work at all," say these. "Then you shall starve," say those, and the workmen gradually using up that which they accumulated in better times, unless there be some radical change, we shall have soon in this country 4,000,000 hungry men and women. Now, 4,000,000 hungry people can not be kept quiet. All the enactments of legislatures and all the constabularies of the cities and all the army and navy of the United States can not keep 4,000,000 hungry people quiet. What then? Will this war between capital and labor be settled by human wisdom? Never! The brow of one becomes more rigid, the fist of the other more clinched.

But that which human wisdom can not achieve will be accomplished by Christianity if it be given full away. You have heard of medicines so powerful that one drop will stop a disease and restore a patient. [illegible] to tell you that one drop of my text properly administered will stop all these woes of society and give convalescence and complete health to all classes.

"Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them."

I shall first show you how this quarrel between monopoly and hard work can not be stopped, and then I will show you how this controversy will be settled.

Futile remedies. In the first place, there will come no pacification to this trouble through an outcry against rich men because they are rich. There is no member of a trades union on earth that would not be rich if he could be. Sometimes through a fortunate invention, or through some accident of prosperity, a man who had nothing comes to a large estate, and we see him arrogant and supercilious, and taking people by the throat just as other people took him by the throat. There is something very mean about human nature when it comes to the top. But it is no more a sin to be rich than it is a sin to be poor. There are those who have gathered a great estate through fraud, and then there are millionaires who have gathered their fortunes through forethought in regard to changes in the markets, and through brilliant business faculty, and every dollar of their estate is as honest as the dollar which the plumber gets for mending a pipe, or the mason gets for building a wall. There are those who keep in poverty because of their own fault. They might have been well off, but they gave themselves to strong drink, or they smoked or chewed up their earnings, or they lived beyond their means, while others on the same wages and on the salaries went on to competency. I know a man who is all the time complaining of his poverty and crying out against rich men, while he himself keeps two dogs, and chews and smokes, and is filled to the chin with whisky and beer.

Micawber said to David Copperfield: "Copperfield, my boy, £1 income, 20 shillings and sixpense expenses; result, misery. But, Copperfield, my boy, £1 income, expenses 19 shilling and sixpense; result, happiness." And there are vast multitudes of people who are kept poor because they are the victims of their own improvidence. It is no sin to be rich, and it is no sin to be poor. I protest against this outcry which I hear against those who, through economy and self-denial and assiduity, have come to large fortune. This bombardment of commercial success will never stop this quarrel between capital and labor.

Neither will the contest be settled by cynical and unsympathetic treatment of the laboring classes. There are those who speak of them as though they were only cattle or draught horses. Their nerves are nothing, their domestic comfort is nothing, their happiness is nothing. They have no more sympathy for them than a hound has for a hare, or a hawk for a hen, or a tiger for a calf. When Jean Valjean, the greatest hero of Victor Hugo's writings, after a life of suffering and brave endurance, goes into incarnation and death, they clap the book shut and say: "Good for him!" They stamp their feet with indignation and say just the opposite of "Save the working classes." They have all their sympathies with Shylock, and not with Antonio and Portia. They are plutocrats, and their feelings are infernal. They are filled with irritation and irascibility on this subject. To stop this awful imbroglio between capital and labor they will lift not so much as the tip end of the little finger.

The poorest use you can put a man to is to kill him. Blow up to-morrow all the country seats on the banks of the Hudson, and all the fine houses on Madison Square, and Brooklyn Heights, and Bunker Hill, and Rittenhouse Square, and Beacon street, and all the bricks and timber and stone will just fall back on the bare head of American labor. The worst enemies of the working classes in the United States and Ireland are their demented coadjutors. Assassination—the assassination of Lord Frederick Cavendish and Mr. Burke in Phœnix park, Dublin, Ireland, in the attempt to avenge the wrongs of Ireland, only turned away from that afflicted people millions of sympathizers. The attempt to blow up the house of commons, in London, had only this effect: To throw out of employment tens of thousands of innocent Irish people in England.

In this country the torch put to the factories that have discharged hands for good or bad reasons; obstructions on the rail track in front of midnight express trains because the offenders do not like the president of the company; strikes on shipboard the hour they were going to sail, or in printing offices the hour the paper was to go to press, or in mines the day the coal was to be delivered, or on house scaffoldings so the builder fails in keeping his contract—all these are only a hard blow on the head of American labor, and cripple its arms, and lame its feet, and pierce its heart. Traps sprung suddenly upon employers, and violence, never took one cent out of the buckle of toil, or put one farthing of wages into the callous palm. Barbarism will never cure the wrongs of civilization. Mark that!

Frederick the Great admired some land near his palace at Potsdam, and he resolved to get it. It was owned by a miller. He offered the miller three times the value of the property. The miller would not take it because it was the old homestead, and he felt about as Naboth felt about his vineyard when Ahab wanted it. Frederick the Great was a rough and terrible man, and ordered the miller into his presence, and the king with a stick in his hand—a stick with which he sometimes struck his officers of state—said to this miller: "Now, I have offered you three times the value of that property, and if you won't sell it, I'll take it anyhow." The miller said: "Your majesty, you won't." "Yes," said the king, "I will take it." "Then," said the miller, "if your majesty does take it, I will sue you in the chancery court." At that threat Frederick the Great yielded his infamous demand. And the most imperious outrage against the working classes will yet cower before the law. Violence and contrary to the law will never accomplish anything, but rightcousness and according to law will accomplish it.

Well, if this controversy between capital and labor can not be settled by human wisdom, if to-day capital and labor stand with their thumbs on each other's throat—as they do—it is time for us to look somewhere else for relief, and it points from my text roseate and jubilant, and puts one hand on the broadcloth shoulder of capital, and puts the other on the homespun-covered shoulder of toil, and says, with a voice that will gladly and gloriously settle this, and settle everything: "Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them." That is, the lady of the honsehold will say: "I must treat the maid in the kitchen just as I would like to be treated if I were downstairs, and it were my work to wash, and cook, and sweep, and it were the duty of the maid in the kitchen to preside in this parlor." The maid in the kitchen must say: "If my employer seems to be more prosperous than I, that is no fault of hers; I shall not treat her as an enemy. I will have the same industry and fidelity downstairs as I would expect from my subordinates if I happened to be the wife of a silk importer."

The owner of an iron mill having taken a dose of my text before leaving home in the morning, will go into his foundry, and, passing into what is called the puddling room, he will see a man there stripped to the waist and besweated and exhausted with the labor and the toil, and he will say to him: "Why, it seems to be very hot in here. You look very much exhausted. I hear your child is sick with scarlet fever. If you want your wages a little earlier this week so as to pay the nurse and get the medicines, just come into my office any time."

After a while, crash goes the money market, and there is no more demand for the articles manufactured in that iron mill, and the owner does not know what to do. He says, "Shall I stop the mill or shall I run it on half time, or shall I cut down the men's wages?" He walks the floor of his counting room all day, hardly knowing what to do. Toward evening he calls all the laborers together. They stand all around, some with arms akimbo, some with folded arms, wondering what the boss is going to do now. The manufacturer says: "Men, times are very hard; I don't make $30 where I used to make $100. Somehow, there is no demand now for what we manufacture, or but very little demand. You see I am at vast expense, and I have called you together to see what you would advise. I don't want to shut up the mill, because that would force you out of work, and you have always been very faithful, and I like you, and you seem to like me, and the bairns must be looked after, and your wife will after a while want a new dress. I don't know what to do."

There is a dead halt for a minute or two, and then one of the workmen steps out from the ranks of his fellows and says: "Boss, you have been very good to us, and when you prospered we prospered, and now you are in a tight place and I am sorry, and we have got to sympathize with you. I don't know how the others feel, but I propose that we take off 20 per cent. from our wages, and that when the times get good you will remember us and raise them again." The workman looks around to his comrades and says: "Boys, what do you say to this? All in favor of my proposition will say ay." "Ay! ay! ay!" shout 200 voices.

But the mill owner, getting in some new machinery, exposes himself very much and takes cold, and it settles into pneumonia, and he dies. In the procession to the tomb are all the workmen, tears rolling down their cheeks and off upon the turfmound; but an hour before the procession gets to the cemetery the wives and children of those workmen are at the grave waiting for the arrival of the funeral pageant. The minister of religion may have delivered an eloquent eulogium before they started from the house, but the most impressive things are said that day by the working classes standing around the tomb.

That night in all the cabins of the working people where they have family prayer the widowhood and the orphanage in the mansions are remembered. No glaring populations look over the iron fence of the cemetery; but, hovering over the scene, the benediction of God and man is coming for the fulfillment of the Christ-like injunction, "Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them."

"Oh," says some man here, "that is all Utopian, that is apocryphal, that is impossible." No. I cut out of a paper this: "One of the pleasantest incidents recorded in a long time is reported from Sheffield, England. The wages of the men in the ironworks at Sheffield are regulated by a board of arbitration, by whose decision both masters and men are bound. For some time past the iron and steel trade has been extremely unprofitable, and the employers can not, without much loss, pay the wages fixed by the board, which neither employers nor employed have the power to change. To avoid this difficulty the workmen in one of the largest steel works in Sheffield hit upon a device as quixotic as it was generous. They offered to work for their employers one week without any pay whatever."

But you go with me and I will show you—not so far off as Sheffield, England—factories, banking houses, store houses and costly enterprises where this Christ-like injunction of my text is fully kept, and you could no more get the employer to practice an injustice upon his men, or the men to conspire against the employer, than you could get your right hand and your left hand, your right eye and your left eye, your right ear and your left ear, into physiological antagonism. Now, where is this to begin? In our homes, in our stores, on our farms—not waiting for other people to do their duty. Is there a divergence now between the parlor and the kitchen? Then there is something wrong, either in the parlor or in the kitchen, perhaps in both. Are the clerks is your store irate against the firm? Then there is something wrong, either behind the counter, or in the private office, or perhaps in both.

The great want of the world to-day is the fulfillment of this Christ-like injunction, that which He promulgated in His sermon Olivetic. All the political economists under the archivault of the heavens in convention for 1,000 years can not settle this controversy between monopolists and hard work, between capital and labor. During the revolntionary war there was a heavy piece of timber to be lifted, perhaps for a fortress, and a corporal was overseeing the work, and he was giving commands to some soldiers as they lifted: "Heave away there! yo heave!" Well, the timber was too heavy; they could not get it up. There was a gentleman riding by on a horse, and he stopped and said to this corporal: "Why don't you help them lift? That timber is too heavy for them to lift." "No," he said. "I won't; I am a corporal." The gentleman got off his horse and came up to the place. "Now," he said to the soldiers, "all together—yo heave!" and the timber went to its place. "Now," said the gentleman to the corporal, "when you have a piece of timber too heavy for the men to lift, and you want help, you send to your commander-in-chief." It was Washington. Now, that is about all the Gospel I know—the Gospel of giving somebody a lift, a lift out of darkness, a lift out of earth into Heaven. That is all the Gospel I know —the Gospel of helping somebody else to lift.

"Oh," says some wiseacre, "talk as you will, the law of demand and supply will regulate these things until the end of time." No, they will not, unless God dies that the butteries of the judgment day are spiked, and Pluto and Proserpine, king and queen of the infernal regions, take full possession of this world. Do you know who supply and demand are? They have gone into partnership, and they propose to swindle the earth, and are swindling it. You are drowning. Supply and demand stand on the shore, one on one side, the other on the other side of the lifeboat, and they cry out to you, "now you pay us what we ask you for getting you to shore, or go to the bottom." If you can borrow $5,000 you can keep from failing in business. Supply and demand say, "Now, you pay us exorbitant usury, or you go into bankruptcy." This robber firm of supply and demand say to you: "The crops are short. We bought up all the wheat, and it is in our bin. Now, you pay our price or starve." That is your magnificent law of supply and demand.

MINERS' MEETING.

Very Decided Difference of Opinion on the Operators' Proposition

To Start the Pittsburgh Miners at the Sixty-Four Cent Rate Pending Arbitration—The Proceedings of the Meeting Guarded With Secrecy.

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 3.—The national executive board of the United Mine Workers has adjourned until Friday morning without reaching a conclusion on the proposition of the Pittsburgh operators, and it is impossible to predict what will be done. The board had a stormy session Thursday afternoon, and there appears to be a very decided difference of opinion among the members as to the best course to pursue. The proposition of the Pittsburgh operators applies specifically to that district, but in effect all other districts are concerned. The proposition is that the Pittsburgh miners shall return to work at a 64 cent rate pending arbitration, the conditions of the arbitration to be that the rate for mining shall not be fixed at more than 69 cents a ton, nor less than 60 cents. Under such conditions, the miners maintain that they would probably not secure through arbitration more than 65 cents. Here is where the temper of the Pittsburgh miners has been asserted. They want 69 cents and there is some doubt whether they could be induced to accept less without a vigorous protest and a long drawnout controversy. The Ohio miners want all they can get, naturally, but what they insist upon most is the maintenance of the differential of nine cents in their favor, which they have held so long. Whether any settlement could be secured through an acceptance of the proposition of the Pittsburgh operators is a matter of opinion upon which the members of the miners' national executive board differ. They all agree that they can not act for the miners and that the most they can do is to submit recommendations for acceptance or rejection by the craft. The members of the board also differ in their opinion as to how such recommendation should be submitted, whether to a convention of the Pittsburgh miners alone, or to a general convention. The repeated assertions of the miners' officials that no settlement would be made by districts places them in a very embarrassing position, and if a matter of official policy alone were concerned the present meeting of the board would be cut very short. Some of the members of the board, however, think that they should accomplish something before taking final adjournment, and this is the only thread upon which action looking toward a settlement of the strike may be expected. None of the members of the board will discuss the situation and the proceedings of their meeting have been guarded with the utmost secrecy.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 3.—Judging from surface indications, it seems reasonably certain that President Ratchford, of the United Mine workers, and his colleagues in office will reject the offer of the operators to return to work at the 64-cent rate pending arbitration. Great influence has been brought to bear upon the strike leaders from this district to induce them to assume such an attitude. The sentiment among the miners here is so intense for "a 69 cents or nothing" settlement that all the local labor leaders now in the city have advised strongly for a continuation of the fight along the present lines and to the bitter end.

Secretary Warner wired Thursday morning to Ratchford that the miners here want 69 cents or defeat, and to submit the Hanna proposition, as it is called, to a vote would only entail needless expenditure of time and money. The result, he said, would not be in doubt for an instant. The miners believe they have a victory well within their grasp, and having a firm belief in the justice of their cause, they will not submit to anything that savors of temporizing or partial retreat from the original stand.

LEFT THE RAIL.

Passenger Train Wrecked Near Cortland N. Y.—One Person Killed and a Number Wounded.

CORTLAND, N. Y., Sept. 3.—Train No. 4, the south-bound vestibule on the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western railroad, was wrecked at Blodgett's Mills, at 10:15 o'clock Thursday morning. The train consisted of an express car, a combination baggage and smoking car, a day coach and a Pullman parlor car. The train, which does not stop at Blodgett's Mills, was passing at the rate of 45 miles an hour on a straight track. When about 500 feet north of the station the rear truck of the day coach in some unexplained manner became detached and left the rail. This truck knocked all of the trucks from under the parlor car, which, after being dragged a few rods, was turned on its side in a four-foot ditch. The rest of the train was dragged 450 feet further and thrown against the ice house of the milk station, after which it struck the passenger station, knocking it from its foundation. When the engineer finally succeeded in stopping the train, it was found that Mrs. J. H. McQuillan, of Overbrook, Pa., a suburb of Philadelphia, had been killed and a number of others injured. Messengers were sent to Cortland for physicians.

Receipts of Wheat in Portland, Ore.

PORTLAND, Orc., Sept. 3.—The receipts of wheat in Portland for the first three days this week were over 500 cars, an amount that is without precedent so early in the season. These heavy receipts are causing anxiety in some quarters for the necessary sail tonnage.

Missouri Miners Strike.

WEIR CITY, Mo., Sept. 3.—The miners at the Hamilton and Brainwood shaft No. 1 are on a strike. The miners went out Thursday night after protesting in vain against having reductions in pay on account of dirty coal.

PROPOSITION

From the Operators to Be Submitted to the Striking Miners.

Delegate Convention of All Idle Miners Called to Meet in Columbus, O., September 8—The End of the Strike Believed to Be in Sight.

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 4.—The end of the great miners' strike is in sight. Friday afternoon the national executive board of the United Mine Workers agreed to recommend to the miners a proposition from the Pittsburgh operators for a straight price of 65 cents a ton, to continue in force until the end of the year. A delegate convention of all miners who have suspended work has been called to meet in Columbus September 8 at 10 a. m. to act upon the recommendation. President Ratchford and the other members of the board say there is not the slightest doubt but that the miners will approve the recommendation. The proposition does not involve arbitration and in effect provides for an immediate settlement of the strike. President Ratchford said that there were special reasons for the board recommending the proposition. In the first place it concedes the miners a material advance. Had a 69-cent rate been secured he was confident it could not have been maintained for more than 70 days. The proposition does away with all the uncertainties of arbitration and will bring the strike to a speedy termination. As soon as the miners ratify the proposition work will be resumed in all the mines. In the second place the proposition provides for a revival of the joint conferences for the adjustment of prices. The operators are pledged to meet with the miners prior to the termination of the agreement and determine the rate of mining for the next year. Both the members of the miners' executive board and the operators' committee are pleased over the outcome of the conference, and feel that public sentiment will sustain their action. Friday morning the operators' committee renewed their first proposition for 64 cents pending arbitration. This was again rejected by the miners' board. Then the operators' committee got together, and submitted a new proposition for a straight price of 65 cents, and after a long discussion, it was accepted by the miners' board, subject to the approval of the miners at large.

The following circular was issued Friday night by the national executive board:

To the Mine Workers Who Have Suspended Work in the Different States:

You are hereby notified that a convention will be held at Columbus, O., at 10 o'clock, a. m. on Wednesday, September 8, 1897.

Greeting: At a conference held at Columbus, O., on September 2 and 3, between the national executive board and district presidents of the United Mine Workers of America and a representative committee of the Pittsburgh district operators, whom we consented to meet only after it became apparent that a national conference of operators and miners could not be convened.

The following propositions were submitted by the representatives of the Pittsburgh operators to the executive board and district presidents as the basis of a settlement to terminate the present strike:

First—The resumption of work at a 64-cent rate of mining. The submitting of the question to a board of arbitration to determine what the price shall be, the minimum to be 60 cents a ton and the minimum to be 69 cents a ton, the price to be effective from date of resuming work.

Second—A straight price of 65 cents a ton to continue in force until the end of the year, with the additional mutual understanding that a joint meeting of operators and miners shall be held in December, 1897, for the purpose of determining what the rate of mining shall be thereafter.

Your executive board and district presidents, after much deliberation and a thorough consideration of the two propositions, recommend the latter, as in their judgment the best that can be secured, because of circumstances that are apparent to all who study market conditions since the inauguration of the strike.

We do not, however, accept the court of final adjudication, and must decide for yourselves what your actions shall be and when work shall be resumed.

Additional reasons will be given and a full report made of the general situation at the convention. We would further advise that delegates come untrammeled by resolutions and uninstructed, other than to act in your best interest.

At this time it is deemed advisable for the reason that provisions are made in the uniformity agreement now pending in the Pittsburgh district, and which it is expected will be operative in that district on and after January 1, 1898, to arbitrate the question of relative differential between pick and machine mining, which will, we anticipate, do much towards furnishing us with more reliable data on that question than we possess at present and to that extent will be beneficial to us in settling questions between machine and pick mining.

The state board of arbitration of Ohio, which has been in communication with the committee of operators and miners' union officials during their conferences, being asked for an expression about the settlement, gave this statement:

The settlement is a most fortunate termination of the strike. There has been no question in any quarter that miners' wages should be increased. The only question was how much. Considering the difficulties in the way on both sides in regard to the adjustment, whichever proposition is accepted it is fair and reasonable one.

The operators went more than half way and sacrifice not a little, but this is done generously and ungrudgingly, with the purpose of securing to their employees a living wage and their action is appreciated and met in a spirit of kindness and fair dealing. We regard it as a forgone conclusion that the settlement will be formally ratified on Wednesday next, and see no reason why work may not be resumed at once.

Royalty at Hamburg.

HAMBURG, Sept. 4.—The emperor and empress of Germany, the king and queen of Italy and the Italian minister for foreign affairs, the Marquis Visconti Venosta, arrived here Friday in order to be present at the autumn manœuvres of the German army.

Receiver Appointed.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—Justice Russell Friday appointed a receiver for a United States government warrant for $129,611 in favor of the late Phineas Burgess, builder of the Monitor Monadnock. His creditors have sued his executor.

PRESIDENT AND CABINET

To Be Consulted Before Attorney General McKenna Announces His Opinion

On Section 22 of the New Tariff Law Relating to Discriminating Duties—Few Candidates for the Regular Fall Civil Service Examination for Offices.

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—A special to the Herald from Washington says:

President McKinley and the entire membership of the cabinet will probably be consulted before Attorney General McKenna announces his opinion as to the construction to be placed on section 22 of the Dingley law imposing discriminating duties.

The attorney general had expected to announce his report this week, but now the understanding is that it is to be held back until next week, and in the meantime the president will cut short his outing and return to Washington. It is probable that the question will be the subject of a general exchange of views at a meeting of the cabinet before the opinion is written. The questions involved are so important that all the light possible is to be thrown on them before the administration is committed to a construction which might demoralize the entire foreign commerce of the country and which involves the matter of about $30,000,000 per year in customs revenue, according to the calculations of the officials of the treasury department.

This calculation is made on the basis of last year's imports and on the assumption that the imports under the discriminating duty would be practically the same in value and would come in ships of the same nationalities. British ships bringing goods from other countries than British territories in Europe would be the heaviest sufferers, and it is expected that one result of the imposition of this duty would be the transfer of many British ships to the flags of nations having more favorable treaties with the United States.

The general assumption is that on account of the imposition of these duties on goods coming into the United States, through a contiguous country, trans-continental roads of the United States would be benefited at the expense of the Canadian Pacific road, but when it is taken into consideration that the steamship connections of most of these roads would be unfavorably affected, it appears that about the only road which would gain any decided advantage would be the Southern Pacific, which, having connection with the American line of steamships from San Francisco, would have the advantage of discrimination in favor of its steamship connection, as well as against its Canadian rival.

About the only cities that would gain any decided advantage would be Halifax and St. John, as the effect of the discriminating duty on goods brought into the United States over the Canadian Pacific would tend to take up the transit of such goods through New England to the seaboard and divert this traffic to those ports in British territory.

WASHINGTON, Sept., 6.—The regular fall civil service examinations throughout the country for all classes of government offices, will muster only about a quarter or a third of the usual number of candidates. This is the prediction made by the civil service commission and Chief Examiner Serven attributes this falling off to the unusual number of applicants examined during the spring, when a high water mark was reached, the number of applicants examined then being an increase of 100 per cent. over the preceding fall or spring. This rush was due to the change of administration and the civil service extensions made by President Cleveland. As a result and in view of an inadequate examining force the commission is far in arrears in marking the papers, and 14,000 of them, all submitted during the spring examinations, have yet to be reached for marking. This aggregate includes 2,355 relating to the railway mail service and 1,451 to the clerk-copyist places. This unprecedented arrearage has been a great factor in deterring applicants from applying for examination at this time.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—Mr. H. Clay Evans, the commissioner of pensions, is ill at his hotel in this city. Col. Evans has been under a great strain for almost a year and upon his return here a few days ago from a brief vacation he had an attack of malaria, complicated Friday with indigestion, But he passed a very comfortable night and his physician reported him greatly improved Saturday. His condition is not considered in any way alarming, and he is expected to be at his desk again in a few days. Col. Evans' family is at Mystic, Ct., visiting friends.

Reunion on the Battlefield.

GETTYSBURG, Pa., Sept. 6.—The veterans and friends of the 73d New York and 124th New York regiments and the reteran firemen of New York spent all of Sunday on the battlefield. In the afternoon the veterans of the 134th held an informal meeting at their monument at Devils Den, which was opened with prayer by Rev. T. Brittain, who also made an address. Brief historical sketches of what the regiment did here in battle were given by Col. Weygant, who commanded the regiment after Col. Ellis was killed; Dr. Thompson, the regimental surgeon; Under Sheriff Howell and other veterans of the regiment.

Ogden Goelet's Remains.

COWES, Isle of Wight, Sept. 6.—The steam yacht May Flower, with the remains of the late Ogden Goelet on board, left Cowes roads for Newport Sunday. Her departure was witnessed by a number of spectators, and the flag on the Royal Yacht squadron castle was half-masted.

BOONE COUNTY FAIR.

An Immense Attendance.--People Came by The Thousands From Every Direction.---The Show Could Not Be Surpassed By A Country Fair.

About 1,200 people attended the fair on the first day, and witnessed a most excellent exhibition in the ring, some of the contests between the handsome and well gaited saddle animals being very exciting and hard for the judges to decide.

The seating capacity of the immense amphitheater was not equal to the demands of the occasion, and the promenade was blockaded all day. The crowd was entirely too large for enjoyment. The attendance was 8,500.

FAIR NOTES.

Good order prevailed every day.

The exhibition ring will be greatly improved in time for the next fair.

The exhibition, as an entirety, could not be surpassed by any country fair.

Cincinnati and Covington were represented by large delegations each day.

Mrs. Elizabeth Clore, of Waveland, Ind., was in attendance a day or two.

The exhibition at the stock pens was as fine as any person should wish to see.

About 800 people went from and through Burlington to the fair on Saturday.

The association was well pleased with the financial success achieved this year.

John C. Graves, of Scott county, was an interested spectator for two or three days.

The competiti on for the small premiums was as spirited as it was for the larger ones.

A set of new harness was stolen off of a horse belonging to a Mr. Beemon, on Saturday.

The election of officers for the ensuing year will be held at the fair ground this afternoon.

Uncle Ben S. Johnson, of Walton, was probably the oldest person who attended the fair.

B. W. Campbell, of Delhi, Ohio, and quite a number of his Delhi friends were there on Saturday.

Col. Milton Hamilton, of Georgestown, was in attendance a day or two meeting many of his old acquaintances.

Milton Goodridge, of Oldham county, killed two birds with one stone—made his brothers a visit and attended the fair.

To become a distinguished citizen of Rootersville it was only necessay to have a pocket full of money and a good voice.

The association will lift its debt and have a snug little sum left in the treasury from the proceeds of this year's exhibition.

A. W. Gaines, of Chattanooga, Tennessee, reached the fair on Friday, and was kept busy that and the next day shaking hands with old friends.

J. M. Riddell, A. G. DeJarnett, R. T. Dickerson, Clay Conrad, and other distinguished citizens of Williamstown, were among the large crowd, Friday.

The crush at the baggage room at the noon hour on Saturday, was so terrific that some who had their baskets checked thought they would never be able to get them.

The total amount of premiums paid by the Association, outside of the special premiums, was $1,532, divided as follows: On horses, $834; on beef cattle, $115; on milch cattle, $102; on sheep, $95; on mules and jack stock, $87; on hogs, $77; on articles exhibited in Floral Hall, $221.

Dear Sir—I was taken with a severe cough the first of May; for two weeks I could not lie on my left side nor breathe through my left lung. I also had hemorrhage and my friends said I had consumption. I began taking Boulton's Cough Remedy and began to improve with the first dose, and within three weeks was entirely well. I can not say enough in favor of Boulton's Cough Remedy. Respectfully,

One of the party took him up and Crouch deposited his $20 in the hands of a stranger as stakeholder who, as soon as he lay hands on the money skipped out. The slick individual is, however, known to the police, and Crouch may get back his money.—Commonwealth.

This is my last on this subject for I don't wish to degrade myself by making replies to such articles as that.

Some of our good people have been expecting me to make a reply to the Richwood correspondent. While I do not think a reply is indispensable, I will at least make a brief reply. He says that the man is guilty of three offenses which shows that he is unable to comprehend anything and it strikes me that a man who takes a briber's part is worse than a briber himself. Crying over "spilt milk" is another one of his absurd expressions. I oftentimes wonder if he didn't have a jug setting by his side. We are unable to discover whether he is a theologian or not. However if he is or is not we would be ashamed to assume the authorship of such an article as that.

Sam Smith, the genial mail carrier from Hathaway, came in smiling Saturday. Cause why? Fishing good and watermelons plentiful on Gunpowder.

Tom Burkett was doing the counter jumping act for W. M. R. & Co. Friday and Saturday, and while he is not so handsome as Mr. Ben, yet he is about as cute an individual, fore and aft the counter, as you can find in a week's travel, and no mistake.

Granville Rouse has grown gray in course of hard work and good, old fashioned Democracy, and continues to do so by building a long line of wire fence for Burl Conner. Gran says he has built 1,000 rods of fence since the first of last March. If there is a man in Boone county more worthy of the patronage from the people than he is, I don't know him.

Noticed John Cleek and Ed Clegg having a good, hearty laugh together in front of the postoffice Thursday, and upon investigation, found out that John had accused Ed of being "baldheader" than he was, and Ed was trying to convince him that such was not the case. Finally they called on the p. m. to decide the matter and he decided that they were both baid-head-ed-er as the other, then they gave it up and so did we.

Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Huey entertained a large number of young people at their elegant home, Thursday evening, with their usual hospitality. They will move to Covington in a few days and were anxious to have their young friends gather again with them and enjoy one more evening of unalloyed pleasure. Their home has always been the abiding place of enjoyment and every nook and corner of its spacious halls and parlors have resounded with peals of merry laughter and sweet music, so we will be safe in saying that Thursday evening was no exception, and that all were delighted to be there.

A gentleman speaking of the fair, said it was a credit to Boone county and should be encouraged. But, said he thought it would soon be so that refined people would not go on account of the lawless, rough element that were allowed there. The gentleman certainly forgets that Boone county people are lawabiding and refined as a mass and will see to it that the disturbers of public peace are made to know their places and keep the peace or move on. The managers of the fair are not expected to examine every man's credentials at the gate to find out whether he is a gentleman or a lawless ruffian, but we guarantee they will make it warm for those who get too funny.

"Uncle Buck" Crisler was in Union shopping, Saturday, and gave your correspondent several items. One was that he intended to have 8 or 10 acres of tobacco planted next year, and will want 10 cents around for it. Two was that Tom Garrison is making more money and buying more land than anybody. Three was that Tom Garrison never made but one mistake to his knowledge, and that was to sell 10,000 pounds of tobacco at 4 cents a pound when he could have got 10 cents now. Four was that Martin Rouse, of Fayette county, said tobacco raising had nearly ruined the splendid land in that county and would finally ruin it all if they continued to raise it.

CRAPE UPON THE DOOR.

Somber crape, somber crape, morsel mortalis use to drape
Doors through which Death uninvited came in dread and awful shape,
Waving slow to and fro that the thoughtless throng may know
One home-sunbeam was eclipsed beneath a cloud of bitter woe—
Thou hast been through long years emblem of earth's countless tears,
When darkest certainty replaced afternate hopes and fears;
When torn hearts long on the rack turned like thee lack-luster black,
And the stars no longer shone in heaven's once hope-illumined track.

Yet those years have brought to me better views and thoughts of thee,
For each sorrow hath its morrow which experienced souls may see;
I have learned that 'neath thy veil shines the light which cannot fail,
Harbor-beacon beckoning homeward through the darkness and the gale.
Badge of grief, badge of grief, back of thee, in grand relief,
Lies the glory which the reaper finds within the golden sheaf;
Death is life, end of strife, close of years with evil rife,
The beginning of the winning; rest when sheathed the surgeon's knife.

Ours the tear, theirs the cheer, and Heaven vistas vast and clear,
Where their wings may regain the chrysalis which hampers spirits here;
Where each joy they can see with new views from earth-mists free,
Proves the story of the glory that is promised you and me.
Somber sign, proof benign of a thoughtful love divine
Which hath made Death but its messenger to lead us o'er the line—
Welcome, friend, who canst end woes and shattered spirits mend,
Unto thy kindly ministries in grateful trust we bend.

I. EDGAR JONES.

MY FRIEND CARLO.

A STORY OF ANIMAL SAGACITY.

NOTWITHSTANDING the fact that dogs have been written of so voluminously, I venture to offer an absolutely authentic sketch of one whose transcendant merits while in life well deserve such recognition.

To give a detailed account of this noble creature's extraordinary doings would fill a large volume; therefore I will confine myself to recording a few of those which I deem the most notable.

Early in the spring of 1833, when I was nine years old and living in the township of Toronto, Candda, my father bought from the "Six Nations" Indians, then occupying a reservation on the river Credit, eight miles from our farm, a dog, whom, in honor of a deceased predecessor, we named Carlo. This animal was said to be then two years old. He weighed, perhaps, 60 pounds, and was not particularly prepossessing in appearance, being of a mixed reddish color, with an unusually large head, drooping ears, tremendously powerful jaws and a tail no more than ten inches long. That member had never been docked, however, but was an hereditary peculiarity, as was amply proven by the fact that many of Carlo's progeny, which, after awhile, became quite numerous in our neighborhood, were brought forth with precisely similar tails—a very strange, and so far as my observation goes, quite unique circumstance. I have known hundreds of dogs born with only rudimentary tails, but never, except in this instance, of any that came into the world with one apparently cut off in the middle.

At first none of us thought much of Carlo; but it was not long before we discovered his value, and to me he soon became a constant companion, playmate, protector and friend. Little by little, as his good qualities were revealed, we found that his sagacity was wonderful and his courage and faithfulness beyond all praise. Not only in one role did he excel, but as watchdog, hunter, retriever, cattle driver and sheep herd he was perfection itself. He feared no living thing, and would, on occasion, tackle a bear, wolf or lynx as readily as a deer, fox or rabbit.

Of course he could not, unsided, kill a full-grown bear nor an adult wolf, but would often harass and detain one or the other until the pursuing hunter got near enough to shoot it; but he did once, after a terrific fight, kill a large lynx, an animal so formidable that not one dog in a thousand will face it.

A curious peculiarity of Carlo's was that although the game he was at the moment chasing might never have been sighted by the listener, any such, thoroughly familiar with him, could always tell of what kind it was merely by the dog's manner of baying, and also whether the scent was fresh or stale. He had one style of bark for a deer, another for a bear, another for a wolf and still another for a fox, a wildcat, a raccoon or what not.

He was the very best "coon dog" I ever saw or heard of, and would kill one of these mischievous creatures, however large and fierce, in less than five minutes after coming up with it. The raccoon always throws itself upon its back when fighting, and, instead of skirmishing around, snapping at and tearing the skin as ordinary dogs do, Carlo would instantly seize it by the throat and never let go until it was dead, thus not damaging the pelt at all.

Between the ages of 11 and 17 years coon hunting by night was one of my favorite sports, and when following Carlo his voice always told me as plainly as by articulate speech whether he was running on hot scent, had caught his quarry on the ground or had treed it. In the latter case my comrade and I would build a fire and chop down the tree, whose top could scarcely crash to the earth before Carlo would have the coon. Never once did he let one escape to another tree.

Altogether, aside from the fact that their skins were worth in the proper season 50 cents each, it was very necessary to destroy these obnoxious though interesting animals, as they wrought sad havoc among the green corn and oats and not infrequently carried off outlying young ducks and chickens.

It was a singular idiosyncrasy of Carlo's that, although born among and brought up by Indians, he would never, after coming into our possession, let one of this race approach the house without showing the most violent anger, and if the red man still persisted he would seize some part of his dress and prevent his farther advance until some member of the family interfered. Even then he would not lose sight of the unwelcome visitor until he had followed him beyond the boundaries of our 400-acre farm—all of which, in a beast of so much intelligence, clearly proves, I think, that he had been cruelly treated by his first owners.

On three several occasions this dog saved my life, each time displaying a surprising degree of calculating judgment.

Through the whole length of our farm ran a stream called Etobicoke creek, and in June, a few months after Carlo's acquisition by us, when I had gained his love and confidence, there occurred one night a tremendous downpour of rain, swelling the creek to a wide, deep and dangerous torrent. Going next morning, as usual, to bring home the cows, then pasturing on the farther side of the stream, I very rashly, instead of going around by a rather distant bridge, attempted to ford the angry flood. But in a moment I was swept off my feet and by the outward set of the current whirled like a feather toward its turbulent center. Being at that time unable to swim, I would certainly have drowned then and there had not Carlo plunged in and effected a rescue—and in a manner evincing almost human intelligence.

The brave fellow evidently knew that I was much heavier than himself, and was not to be retrieved so easily as a wounded duck. So, instead of seizing me haphazard and perhaps drawing my head under water, he dexterously caught hold of the front corner of my coat collar, thus, in effect, enabling me to rest my head upon his if I so wished. However, the moment he touched me I lost all fear, recovered my presence of mind and cheerfully said: "Let go, Carlo."

Seeming to guess my intention, he instantly obeyed, whereupon I slid my hands along his back and grasped his stubby tail, when, with a yelp of manifest delight, he struck diagonally across and downstream, towing me safely ashore to the opposite bank, though at a point fully 100 yards below where I had entered the water.

Then it was most touching to witness his joy. After lovingly licking my face and hands, he scampered up and down the bank like a wild thing, rapturously barking and showing his happiness in every possible way, while away and then darting back to my side to renew his caresses and receive my own.

When satisfied with this fun, he collected the cows and made them swim back, but did not follow them across, thinking, perhaps, that I was not yet to be trusted alone, and that it was his duty to accompany me home by way of the bridge.

About two months afterward Carlo saved me from being torn to pieces by a cougar, an animal extremely rare in western Canada even at that early day, called "panther" by the old hunters, though the true panther does not exist in any part of America. As a full account of this adventure has already been published, I can only say here that, had it not been for my faithful friend's extraordinary sagacity in discovering the crouching beast and his dauntless courage in attacking it, I should most certainly have become its prey. As it was, thanks to the dog, the great cat was shot by my father, I receiving one-half the bounty money and my gallant hound unstinted praise.

Perhaps dogs may not possess what we, in our wisdom, call inductive reasoning powers, but Carlo was gifted with something marvelously like such. Mere instinct will hardly account for his conduct in the following instance: One summer morning, in March, 1834, I was standing at our back door, which overlooked the creek and a little field opening out of the barnyard beyond. In this paddock were at the moment frisking a number of February-born lambs, while their mothers were nibbling such chance tufts of grass as had escaped the winter's frosts.

While I looked delightedly at the innocent creatures' gambols, a great, giant gray wolf, having sneaked unobserved from the forest, a half mile further up stream, suddenly leaped the low fence, dashed through the flock, seized a lamb in his mouth and was off forestward like a flash.

Carlo lay dozing in the sun at my feet. "Look, Carlo, look!" I cried, pointing to the retreating wolf. In an instant he caught sight of the marauder, but did he rush across the creek in direct pursuit and thus prematurely alarm the brute, give it a long start and thus entail upon himself a probably hopeless stern chase? No; he did something far wiser and more effectual. Without giving tongue at all, he started off at full speed up my side of the stream, far enough from the bank's brink to prevent the enemy seeing him, and was at the edge of the forest some little time before the encumbered wolf could reach its shelter. Then, concealed by impinging bushes and trees, he bounded through and across the creek, hid himself in the brushwood and met the ravenous beast face to face when it came along. Meantime, hearing me call, several of the family came to the door and witnessed what followed.

On seeing Carlo, the half-starved wolf did not at once relinquish his prey, but swerved from his course and tried to gain the woods at a more distant point—a fatal mistake on his part, for the dog, nearly as swift as he in any case, was on him before he had gone 100 feet. Then he dropped the lamb and attempted to close with Carlo in a death struggle. He might as well have tried to close with a lightning streak. Every time he made a rush at the dog the latter sprang aside, and the instant the wolf turned again he seized it by a hind leg, bringing it to the ground, while always avoiding the deadly grips of its fearfully armed jaws.

This maneuver was repeated again and again, and, rage as he might, the wolf could neither get away from, nor fasten his fangs on, his persecutor. The result was that my elder brother had time to run up and shoot the beast, which was so wholly preoccupied in the fight as not to notice his approach. I leave the reader to judge whether, in this chase and attack, the noble dog did not exercise what may fairly be called reason?

Time, pregnant with many of my own and Carlo's adventures, passed on; I was 12 years old and he, presumably five, was in the zenith of his powers, and had become much heavier than when I first knew him, when he saved my life for the third time, in this wise: One afternoon in October he and I were passing through a large field wherein were pasturing a number of cattle. Among these was a three-year-old bull, which we had always thought a quite gentle animal. In fact, I had often ridden to and fro on his back.

The evening being chilly, I was wearing at the time one of those camlet cloaks, lined with red flannel, which were very much in vogue for boys in those days. A strong wind was blowing, and just as we got within about 50 yards of the bull, a heavy gust threw one side of the cloak over my shoulder, thus exposing a large expanse of the lining.

On catching sight of this obnoxious color, the bull changed in one moment from a peacefully-grazing beast to a maddened monster, and, with a hoarse, bellowing roar, lowered head and uplifted tail, charged furiously upon me.

There was no shelter—not even a stump or tree near us, and the crazed brute had but 50 yards or so to come. Flight on my part would have been worse than useless, even if I had thought of it, which I did not. But, in my mortal fright, I did think to gasp: "Carlo! Carlo! Sick him, Carlo!"—a needless command, for, swift as an arrow and fiercely as an enraged tiger, the good dog sprang forward, not squarely in front of the bull, but with a little detour. Then, wheeling about, he came alongside the beast's shoulder, and deftly seized him by the nose. Now the tables were turned with a vengeance. No longer was the bull's deep roar the exultant triumpfeting of an assured conqueror; in a second it changed to the pitiful calf-like bleating of a beaten coward, as, distracted by pain and fright, he tossed his head aloft in a vain attempt to free himself from the vise-like grasp of those jaws, which would never let go except at a master's bidding or until victory was achieved.

Finding all his efforts of no avail, the frenzied creature now set off in a mad run, carrying the clinging dog with him and utterly unable to strike the latter with his forefeet.

Around and around the field wildly careened the interlocked combatants, while the other cattle, scared out of their wits at the strange spectacle, scampered away, leaving their whilom lord and master to his fate.

For what seemed to me a full half hour and to the bull probably an age of torment, the running fight continued, the sorely punished beast growing every moment weaker, until at last he sank to the ground utterly exhausted; whereupon Carlo came back to me, joyously wagging his short tail, and with his beautiful brown eyes and triumphant bark seeming to ask: "Wasn't that well done, master?"

After this severe lesson no creature could be better behaved than was the conquered bull, who thenceforth in Carlo's presence always put on a particularly subdued air, while I might have flaunted my red-lined cloak in his face a hundred times without exciting him to more than an intense disgust.

By such deeds as I have herein related, as well as by his invaluable services in the hunting field and on the farm, my dog became famous throughout our whole township, and, had I been base enough to do so, I might, scores of times, have sold him for more than the price of a first-rate horse.

He lived to be 13 years of age, and then, though apparently in good health, painlessly died one day while his grand old head rested lovingly on my knee. I buried him on the bank of the stream wherein he and I had so often disported ourselves, and, full-grown man as I then was, I am not ashamed to confess that I shed childish tears over his grave, which I afterward marked by a large stone slab, taken from the creek's bed and rudely engraved by my unskilled hands: "My Friend Carlo; Faithful Unto Death."—N. Y. Ledger.

His Flowers.

"I heard in my youth," says Sir Charles Murray, "one of many curious stories of Sir John Shaw. He was most eccentric in his appearance and dress, and cared nothing for tidiness in the grounds immediately surrounding his house. One day he invited two gentlemen from Edinburg to dine with him at Carnock. As was the custom of the time, they appeared before dinner in knee breeches, silk stockings and thin shoes. The weather being fine, Sir John invited them to take a turn in the garden. Civilly and thoughtlessly they followed their host, and soon found themselves skipping among nettles and thistles, to the great discomfort of their unfortunate calves. Sir John, who was clad, as usual, in corduroy breeches and top boots, said to them, with polite gravity: 'Step out, step out, gentlemen, ye'll no hurt my flowers!'"—Cornhill Magazine.

CARMEN SYLVA'S TRAGEDY

Woe, Woe, and Still More Woe Among the Peasants of the Queen's Land.

Carmen Sylva, the overstrung queen of Roumania, has written another tragic drama which was acted in Bucharest to the delight of the audience and the satisfaction of the royal dramatist, who sat in a box with her family. The drama is called "Mariora," and it deals in rather harrowing fashion with life among the Roumanian peasants. Much more stress is indeed laid upon the presentation of the peasant life and character than upon the development of the story, which contains as the chief ingredient the guilty love and jealousy which since Verga's "Cavalleria Rusticana" have seemed to be the only elements that control the destinies of peasants in any country.

In Carmen Sylva's play the heroine, who is a peasant woman named Mariora, is married to the peasant Marin, but loves his brother, who is too shy and timid to declare the love he feels for her, to give him credit for no worthier motives. He never betrays his love for her. The woman's suffering is increased by the fact that her child never sleeps at her breast, but stares reproachfully into her eyes. One day when she believes herself alone with the child, she confesses her love for Tudor, her husband's brother. He is in the room unobserved by her, and overhears the confession to the child. Then his shyness disappears, and, rushing into the room, he declares his love for her and tries to seize her in his arms. But she declares that for her child's sake she will remain true to her husband. She sees that the child is resting at last, but her delight that it no longer stares at her in reproach is but shortlived. Her lover points out to her that the child is dead and that nothing stands in the way of their flight together.

Again he attempts to induce her to flee with him, but the woman throws herself desperately on the child. At this point the husband, Marin, appears and understands immediately what has occurred. The lover attempts to escape by flight, but his brother, who has long been jealous of him, having suspected that he was loved by Mariora, follows him and kills him in a forest. Then he returns to his hut and tells his wife that her lover is dead. She is broken in body and spirit and, protesting that her husband's house has never been defiled by sin, she falls by the body of her child. There is a Roumanian tragedian, Agathe Barssou, who acts many of Carmen Sylva's heroines for her. Everybody who hears the story of this wonderful episode will hope that all the peasants who live in that part of the Balkan peninsula in which the queen reigns do not have such distressing misadventures. But only the unfortunate peasants seem to get on the stage nowadays.—N. Y. Sun.

REAL DOGS OF WAR.

Great Danes Trained to Attack Military Bicyclists in French Uniforms.

Real dogs of war will be let loose in the next European conflict.

They are now being trained in the German army to dismount and disable military bicyclists. The dog—*this purpose are Great Danes, who con-*stitute the most typically German of all breeds. Their present use is remarkably appropriate, for in ancient times they were trained to attack the Roman soldiers, who never succeeded in conquering the northernmost parts of Germany.

Corps of bicyclists have become a very important part of all European armies. They possess many advantages over infantry and cavalry alike. They promise in civilized countries to prove a more valuable arm than the so-called mounted infantry, which has been used with much success in England's colonial wars.

No sooner were the military bicycle corps established than the question of demolishing them in war times became a serious one. The German army officers have given much attention to this problem. It was at first suggested that spikes might be scattered to puncture the tires, but they would leave the wheelmen intact.

After trying many experiments, it was found that dogs offered the best means of throwing a company of moving bicyclists into confusion.

The Great Dane is one of the fiercest and most powerful of all dogs. He combines weight and swiftness in a greater degree than any other. He has jaws and teeth suggesting those of an alligator.

It has been found that one well-trained Great Dane will dismount half a dozen bicyclists, riding close together, in about the winking of an eye. He will do it with such suddenness and ferocity that he will seriously injure both men and machines, and probably kill some of the former.

The German war dogs are continually drilled in their new duties. Things are done very thoroughly in the German army, and the Fatherland does not spare the skin and bones of its soldiers when a useful object is to be attained.

Parties of soldiers are dressed in French uniforms and mount bicycles. The dogs are then urged to attack them. Although the men wear heavily-padded clothes, they are often bitten and otherwise injured.

At the same time the dogs learn not to attack men in German, Austrian or Italian uniforms.—N. Y. Journal.

The Siamese Army.

An English newspaper in an article on the Siamese army says: "In one respect the Siamese army is superior to any other, and that is in its elephant corps. Eight hundred of these animals, which are stronger, though smaller, than those of India, are organized into a special corps, commanded by a retired Anglo-Indian officer, and their heads, trunks and other vulnerable parts are protected against bullets by india rubber armor." — Detroit Free Press.

CAUSES OF PROSPERITY.

The Robber Tariff is Not One Among Them.

There are evidences of renewed prosperity. No one will deny that. No one has the least inclination to deny it. Everyone has reason to rejoice over the indications of better times and to sing with fervor "hard times come again no more." The bank clearings show great gains over last year at this time. The commercial agencies agree in reporting greater activity in both trade and manufacturing, and there seems to be no reason to doubt that the number of the involuntarily idle has been largely reduced.

For al this and for the promise of still better things to come every right-minded man is glad. At the same time every such man is sorry to see all the organs and attorneys of monopoly ascribing all the praise to a tariff bill. This is as bad as it was for the Jews of old to give praise to idols for the blessings they enjoyed. The Jews knew better. The American people ought to know better than to make thank offerings to the tariff fetich.

The fact that Europe is 1,625,000,000 bushels short of food crops while we have a good crop of small grains and the prospect of a good crop of corn and an unprecedented crop of cotton explains it all. The food shortage makes high prices for our food products and a like cause bids fair to give us more than average prices for cotton. Hence high prices for the farmers, greater demand for manufactures and bustling activity in trade.

To ascribe it all to the tariff robbery is most abominable idolatry. Prosperity is returning, for the time being at least, not because of, but in spite of, that robbery. The processes of nature have been favorable to this country, and for that reason the masses of the people can stand the robbery better than they otherwise could. Because nature has favored them, they can see the stock of the sugar monopoly put up from 108 to 150 by republican legislation and not make any complaint.

The attention of those who give all the glory to the monopoly tariff is invited to two facts. One is that the receipts into the national treasury have been $25,400,000 less than the expenditures since the passage of the Dingley bill, or at the rate of $152,400,000 a year. Not long ago they were telling us that times were hard because the expenditures of the government exceeded the receipts. Now they are vociferously claiming that the country is on a high wave of prosperity, though the excess of expenditures is greater than ever.

The other fact is that the commercial agencies attribute the strong market for southern iron to the active export movement. Our worshipers of the protection fetich will hardly venture to attribute the active export of American iron to their high duty on foreign iron. These and many other facts prove that they are economic quacks and humbugs and that their legislation does not cause prosperity any more than it causes the tides or the sun spots.—Chicago Chronicle.

Times.

——The Dingley law is proving its claim to the title: "A tariff for bounties and a deficit." Since it went into effect various trusts favored by duties that are nearly, if not altogether, prohibitive upon competing foreign trade have advanced prices. Some of them have concurrently reduced wages. The prices of all necessaries are going up. At the same time the public revenues are dwindling and the deficit is growing. The deficiency since July 1 is already $25,000,000.—N. Y. World.

——As a matter of fact all the evidences of reviving prosperity come through agricultural channels. Before the Dingley law was passed the western farmers paid off mortgages to the amount of many millions of dollars. Renewed activity in the agricultural implement industry is due solely to brighter prospects on the farms. Hence it is impossible to trace reviving commerce in the remotest way to the Dingley law. We believe it is coming in spite of that compound of thievery, bribery and injustice.—Memphis Commercial Appeal.

MAKES HIGHER PRICES.

One of the Direct Effects of the Dingley Law.

PUSHES UP PRICES.

While the glass men are hesitating whether to increase the price of window glass ten or fifteen per cent., the crockery dealers have promptly put their prices up 20 per cent., so that there would be no mistake about it. They have done this to meet the increase in the Dingley bill. At present this chiefly concerns the English imported ware, but the American manufacturer is preparing to make similar advances. But as we are told that the foreigners pay all this increase the consumer in this country need not worry.—Chicago Chronicle.

This is the protection that is said to have the power to open the mills. Consumption has been down to low water mark because so many of our people have been unable to do more than provide themselves with the bare necessaries of life, many more being unable to do even as much as that, and it is expected that the raising of prices will serve to improve conditions by increasing consumption. The raising of prices does not increase consumption as a regular business, but perhaps it will make an exception once in a way.

The manufacturers may put up their prices, but unless their products are bought up and consumed, the advance in prices will have no beneficial influence on labor. It is going to cost a good deal for bread presently, and glassware and crockery and such things will be compelled to take a back seat, and this seat will necessarily be a little farther back because of the increased prices of those products. If those manufacturers who did not pay the increased duties of the Dingley law would play fair with the consumers of the country, there would be a better prospect of a prosperity that could be called general. The farmers appear to have some reason to rejoice, but where may the workingmen in general lines reasonably expect to come in? As the Utica Observer says:

"Flour is going up; sugar is going up; clothing is going up; crockery is going up; leather is going up; everything is going up but the wages of the employes in protected industries. And yet these employes were distinctly told by no less a person than Chairman Dingley himself that their 'purchasing power would be increased.' On the contrary, it is diminished."

The prosperity of the crops we have with us; the prosperity of Dingleyism that was promised us we have still to get. Hurry it up!—Binghamton (N. Y.) Leader.

VAGARIES OF THE GOLDBUGS.

Unsoundness of the State Bank Note Proposition.

The cry of "sound money" raised by the people who are so anxious to have the government "go out of the banking business" is hypocritical and insincere.

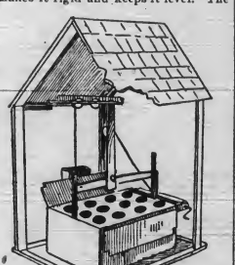
Even the demand for "gold" is disingenuous, for these "reformers" propose to retire the greenbacks and substitute state bank notes "secured by the assets of the banks." Was there ever submitted to the American people a more unsound proposition than that? Behind the greenbacks stands the United States government, and there is no contention that a greenback is not now and always worth its face. Could the same be said of state bank notes? If that is the kind of "sound" money the "reformers" wish to force upon the people, the suggestion will be laid scornfully aside, with the comment that it possesses "more sound than sense."

In arguing in favor of postal savings banks, Senator Mason, who is a good republican, says: "Most of the American people live 25 miles from any bank. They are in this way deprived of all facilities for thrift. Even if banks were convenient they are not absolutely reliable. Since national banks were established 330 of them have failed and paid creditors only 75 per cent. In the meantime 1,234 banks failed and paid only 50 per cent." While the remarks of Senator Mason were not intended as a reply to those who urge the establishment of a rag money currency, they apply with great positiveness. The people of this country are not prepared to encourage the issue of wildcat money.

Suppose, however, for the sake of argument, that every wildcat note were to have a gold dollar back of it. What would that mean? To retire all of the government paper would contract the currency $900,000,000. To issue state paper, or national bank paper, secured by gold, to fill this deficit, would require the securing of $900,000,000 in gold. Where will the advocates of "sound" money get this gold? If these notes are not to be redeemed in gold they are a thousand times worse than silver, so far as safety is concerned. If they are to be backed up by gold it is the duty of those patriotic "reformers" who desire this measure to inform the people where they are going to get the gold.—Chicago Dispatch.

Republicanism and Deception.

This is about the time when the man who voted for McKinley is waking up and asking himself what in the name of consistency a trust tariff has got to do with an honest dollar. Also he wonders how he was ever presuaded to support a party that gets its man elected on one issue, and then switches to another and opposite plan of action. The currency question was a mighty factor in the last campaign, but it has had nothing to do with the republican party since the election. The monopoly tariff, which has been foisted upon the people, was only made possible by a long and clever series of deceptions. But then, deception is the very essence of republicanism.—Tammany Times.



——Senator Thurston's term does not expire until 1901, but he told his Nebraska constituents in a public speech the other day that he did not intend to ask for reelection and that he was tired of Washington life. Now if the senator will tell what he has done since he has been in office to make him tired he will confer a favor upon his vigilant and anxious countrymen. He would be sure of his facts if he would say that he has made the country tired.—St. Louis Republic.

HANDY DAIRY WELL.

Description of an Excellent Cooler for Small Dairymen.

A well for keeping dairy products and also fresh meats is a desideratum on many farms. For ordinary use the well should be dug 4 by 6 feet, with a gutter or groove, down one side, 18 inches square. It should contain 2 or 3 feet of standing water. It should be in easy reach of the kitchen, and attached to the house if possible. The curbing should be no larger than the well. A platform, which fits inside the well, slides up and down between two timbers, which rest on the bottom of the well and are long enough to reach up three inches above the curb. These two timbers should be planed. The framework of the platform has a board nailed on each side of it, forming a groove which fits on the upright timbers at each end of the wall. This makes it rigid and keeps it level. The circular black spots on the platform represent openings for vessels. The piece that holds the wheel, over which the rope passes to the windlass, is prolonged so that when the platform is just even with the top of the curb, an iron pin is inserted through it and the top bar of the platform frame, and holds it there. There is another rope and two wheels. This rope has a heavy weight attached, to assist in raising the platform from the bottom of the well with heavy loads. These weights go down inside a box formed of four wide planks which occupy the gutter or groove. One lid opens up against the weight box, and fastens with a thumb bottom. The other is hinged so as to hang down beside the curb when open.—Farm and Home.

ABOUT MILK FEVER.

How to Prevent a Disease That Has Killed Thousands of Cows.

Milk fever is a disease to be dreaded by the man who has first-class dairy cows, and who feeds and cares for them in such a manner as to make them large producers. The man with scrub cows, that have to rustle for themselves during the winter round the straw stack, never suffers from loss by milk fever when his cows come to ... ag. It is true he gets no profit out of his cows, and he rarely gets product enough from them to pay for the little feed and care they do have. But he can and does console himself by saying he never has milk fever with his cows like those men do who "stuff and pamper and baby their cows."

We have lost, within the past 15 years, several valuable cows with this disease. We think we now know how to prevent. A heifer with her first calf never has it and very rarely with the second half. A cow that is milked continuously, right up to calving, is not liable to have milk fever, at least, we have never known one to. We hesitated to write that last sentence for fear some one would accuse us of advocating continuous milking. That we do not, but still feel bound to state that fact. A cow that is starved, or fed just enough to live on, will never have milk fever.

Our way is to dry the cow up six or eight weeks before she is due to calve (unless she is such a persistent milker as to make that impracticable); at the same time reduce her feed, by taking nearly if not quite all the grain from her. Her bowels should be kept loose. If the cow is in flush pasture, and she is one you have reason to believe likely to have milk fever, the only safe way to do would be to keep her upon dry feed. We know it is hard for the man who has been in the habit of "babying" and petting his cows and feeding them to their full capacity to refuse them all they want to eat, but it is the only safe way to do with some of them. After a cow has had milk fever once she is more liable than other cows to have it again, and if she does have it a second time she will be always most sure to die.—Hoard's Dairyman.

Sorghum for the Silo.

While no kind of grain as feed can supersede corn in cheapness and value, sorghum is a formidable rival to it for fodder, especially when put up in the silo. It stands drought better, which is likely to make it popular in the arid portions of the west, where corn often fails. The sorghum has too tough a stalk to feed green, but when cut and put in the silo there is enough fermentation to soften the stalks so that they can be eaten. The sweetness of the sorghum furnishes carbonaceous nutriment just as does the starch of corn grain, and in even more palatable form. Wherever cane sugar is made in the south the workmen who attend the grinding always grow fat from the sugar they eat.

Clean pastures, with good, clean water and proper care, is the surest preventive of bitter milk. Weeds, especially ragweed, cause bitter milk.

Ventilate the cellar in which you are to store fruit.

Water will often save a dying tree or vine.

THE COST DIVIDED.

New Jersey's Road Improvement Law Is Just and Fair.

The farmers of the country are gradually going over to the belief that good roads are for their personal benefit and there is a decided change of sentiment along the line in many of the states. One of the chief obstacles to the reform has been the fear of the farmers that the cost of highway improvements would fall chiefly on them and as they feel that they are already burdened heavily enough they resist the passage of good-roads laws with their local influence and their votes often to the defeat of these worthy projects. New Jersey has a law now in force, however, that illustrates how properly this burden can be divided between the individual and the community so that it falls lightly upon the farmer. This law apportions the cost of all road improvements as follows: One-third is paid by the state, one-tenth by the individual beneficiary of the improvement, the owner of the abutting property, and the remainder by the county in which the improvement occurs. Reduced to a scale of thirtieths the state pays ten parts, the individual three parts and the county seventeen parts. Stated in still another way the various burdens are more easily appreciated. The average cost of repairing a road with a macadam finish is about $3,000 a mile. Of this sum the county would pay $1,700, the state $1,000 and the individual $300. It is to be remembered that the $300 in this case is usually divided among several persons, as few properties in this section of the country extend for much more than a quarter or half a mile along a highway, and the tax is assessed on the owners on each side of the road. Thus it will frequently occur that the individual will pay directly for a first-class road in front of his property and for a mile adjacent such a small sum as $40 or $50. To be sure he pays as well his share of the county tax and in less proportion his part of the state tax, but these burdens are comparatively light and easily borne. These improvements in New Jersey are undertaken on the petition of the owners of the abutting property. Such laws as this, if copied in other states, would probably result in an immediate betterment of the country roads in every section, an improvement of untold benefit to millions of people. —Washington Star.

RURAL EXISTENCE.

Building of Good Roads Will Make It Delightful Indeed.

Wherever experiments in rural mail delivery have been made it has been found to work most successfully—during clear weather when the roads were all right. Which indicates how indissolubly linked together are the problems of good roads and the uplift of the social life of the farm.

The time has come when the American farmer must sit down to think out this question of good roads and how to get them. It is not an exaggeration to say that to the future of American agriculture few things bear so important a relationship as does the question of good roads. Indeed, if the generation now growing up on the farms is to be kept on the farm, better social advantages will be found absolutely necessary, and what single thing could contribute so much as good roads to the elevation of life upon the farm?

But the whole question is being discussed in a desultory and indeterminate way, which promises nothing for the future. Organized effort, in which the wheelmen of the town and the farmer of the country should stand shoulder to shoulder, must be put forth if substantial advance is to be made. With the harvests out of the way, there should be set on foot a movement looking to this end.

With good roads farm life will have all the delights of rural existence, to which will be added the advantages of the town, of a daily mail, of social intercourse with neighbors, of musicales and lectures brought near. Good roads will transform the farm, which so many now desert for the city, into the most attractive of homes, and give once more to agriculture first place among the professions and occupations of life.—Farmers' Voice.

Grain Cheaper Than Hay.

It is undoubtedly a serious loss to have so much of the hay crop injured by excessive rains, as has been the case the present year. Yet this may be in part made an advantage to farmers if it turns their attention to grain as a cheaper source of nutrition than even the best hay can be. More than this, if given with enough hay or straw or cornstalks to distend the stomach, grain is better food because more easily digested. In the coarser fodder so much of the nutrition goes to sustain animal heat or the processes of digestion, that comparatively little is left to make flesh or milk or fats. The knowledge that some grain with hay makes cheaper nutrition is not half so widely extended as it ought to be. If it were there would be a better demand for grain and it would sell at better prices. —American Cultivator.

Waldorf Fruit Salad.

Take half a pound of cherries, the sticks and stones having been removed, some fresh strawberries and raspberries, with a few slices of pineapple, one-quarter pound of white and red currants. Sprinkle over the fruit plenty of powdered white sugar, four tablespoonfuls of brandy and two tablespoonfuls of maraschino; shake and stir the fruit about lightly until the sugar is dissolved, then add the strained juice of two oranges. Take a thin china basin, which has been placed in ice, pour in your fruit, and allow it to become cool, then serve. The fruits that compose such a salad of course vary with the season, but the method of treatment for any mixture of fruits is substantially the same.—Boston Globe.

Trees for planting can never be bought cheaper than they can this fall.

SPITZBERGEN LANDSCAPES

A Curious Play of Light and Color on the Snow.

In his book giving an account of his exploration of the interior of the largest island in the Spitzbergen archipelago, Sir William Martin Conway describes some of the peculiar scenic effects of the landscape: "Descending one of the snow fields they saw on its surface a brilliant rainbow, if such it may be called, caused by tiny spikes of ice, and only to be seen on a nevé dusted with these fine crystals. This bow was so near that the 'particular gems of ice could be identified that rendered up each tone of color. It was as though we were in the presence of some great goddess of old time, whose head was the radiant sun and her necklace of countless rubies, emeralds and sapphires, her robes of snowy samite were sown all over with diamonds and her vail was the gossamer mist that lay along the valley.'" This was on Fox mountain, over 3,000 feet high, so-called because the trail of a fox was seen there.

Naturally the glaciers formed interesting, dangerous and useful tracts of highway. They differ from those of the Alps and Rockies in being more flat, more rapid in their motion, less curved and more viscous in appearance, as if they were made of honey. Pausing to make some surveys, while his comrades went on, Conway records his impressions as he looked over Advent vale, with its river and its environing white: "I was absolutely alone in a new world. Nowhere was there trace of man. Abundance of reindeer horns lay about, and the tracks of reindeer were in all directions, but not a footprint of man or of any domestic animal could be descried. Wild birds flew about me, inquisitively, flocks of geese honked at me as I moved forward. The scenery was, in fact, tame and dull, but circumstances invested it with a strange prestige. Its rich, purple tones, its wide, expanding forms, its suggestive peeps of cloud-enveloped crags sufficed to quicken the fancy, so that I walked along in the bleak, dull day as in a dream, full of a nameless and indescribable delight. * * * The striking feature of the view was where the huge, cliff-fronted and seamed snout of a glacier swept forth from a deep blue cloud-enveloped valley. The ice cliff, appearing thus, literally, from the clouds, produced a most impressive effect. It thundered forth at frequent intervals, when masses of ice fell from it, so we named it Booming glacier." Elsewhere it is reported that between wind and waterfall sounds reached the camp as of trains going through tunnels and cuttings. "It was a day among a thousand, worth winning by weeks of labor and wet. Cool airs played around, the sun was warm and the pale blue sky brilliantly clear. It might have been an English May day. There was a Sunday sentiment in the air. One almost expected to hear church bells pealing from afar off over the russet Sassendal flats, but the only sounds were the booming river, the rippling brook and the flapping of the tents in the breeze. Two reindeer came and stalked us. They wandered up to the tents and smelt at the sleeping bags lying out for an airing. We took snap shots at them with harmless cameras till we were tired and left them to amuse themselves as they liked best. One might as well shoot sheep in a field as such careless and stupid beasts." It is by no means all bleak in these far fields. There are arctic poppies, patches of saxifrage like crimson rugs, yellow potentillas, dryas, cerastium, drabas, silenes, lychnis and other plants, besides grass and mosses. The geologist of the party found great numbers of fossils also.

In his desciption the explorer is usually matter of fact, but the facts are there. Once in awhile he shows an artist's eye in his appreciation of form or of other effects. His first glimpses at Spitzbergen are gained from a distance, with his steamer surrounded by floes. Says he: "The sea was divinely calm, with the gentlest heave coming across it, a bright gray flat, a silver gray under a lighter gray sky. Scattered about in it were the loveliest masses of ice, blue, indescribably blue below, with caverns of darker blue and white surfaces above—things fairy like, bathed in the soft gray air, melting away in the distance, yet strangely defined and clear with a soft definition and clearness as of gossamer fabrics. Landward was just a stripe of faint yellow, where the snowy foot of hills appeared illumined by the pale midnight sun."—Brooklyn Eagle.

Knotted Tail Cats.

The following is from the narrative of a voyager in the Indian ocean: "The steward is again pillowed on his beloved salt fish, and our only companion is a Malacca cat, which is also an attachment for the steward's pillow. Puss is a tame little creature, and comes rubbing herself mildly against our shoes, looking up in our faces and mewing her thoughts. Doubtless she is surprised that you have been so long looking at her without noticing the peculiarity in her tail, which so much distinguishes her from her mates in other quarters of the globe. Take her up in your lap and see for yourself. Did you ever observe such a singular knot—so regular, too, in its formation? Some cruel master must have tied it thus when puss was yet a kitten, and she has outlived both the pain and the inconvenience. But here comes her kitten, all full of gambols and fun; and we find that her tail is in precisely the same condition. So, then, this is a remarkable feature among the whole race of Malayan cats; but no one seems able to give a satisfactory explanation of it."—Philadelphia Press.

HOW TO CARVE.

To carve a loin of veal or mutton begin at the small end and cut the ribs apart. A fillet of veal should be cut first from the top and in a breast of veal the breast and brisket should first be cut apart and then cut in pieces.

A leg of mutton should be carved across the middle of the bone first and then from the thickest part till the gristle is reached. A few nice slices can be cut from the smaller end but it is usually hard and stringy.

In carving fish practice is required in order to prevent the flakes from breaking. The choicest morsels of all large fish are near the head; the thin parts come next; the flavor nearest the bone is never equal to that on the upper part. A fish knife should be used in carving.

A sirloin of beef should be placed on the platter with the undercut underneath. Thin cut slices should be taken from the side next the carver, then turn over the roast and carve from underneath. A portion of both should be helped.

A tongue should be carved in very thin slices, its delicacy depending on this. The slices from the center are considered the most tempting, and should be cut across and the slices taken from both sides with a portion of the fat at the root.

A ham can be served in several ways—by cutting long, delicate slices through the thick fat down to the bone; by running the point of the knife in a circle in the middle and cutting thin, circular slices, thus keeping the ham moist, or by beginning at the knuckle and slicing upward. The last mode is the most economical.

HEALTH NOTES.

Colds taken in summer or early autumn are apt to be very troublesome; they are usually easily wrecked in the very beginning by inhalation of good eau-de-cologne. This I have from the best of authorities. Cologne acts as a germicide.

As soon as a person feels the first symptoms of a cold in the head or chest, let him inhale as vigorously as possible good strong cologne several times daily by the nose or mouth, or both, taking it in sharply until it makes the inside of the nose and throat smart well.

To test the dryness or dampness of a room put a lump of fresh lime in it after hermetically sealing up the windows and doors. If, on opening the room, the lime is found to have absorbed one per cent. its weight of water the room is damp and unfit to live in. That is, if the lime weighs ten ounces, and absorbs one more, and weighs 11 ounces when it is taken out, the room is a damp one.

THE HEAT PLAGUE OF AUGUST, 1896.

Mrs. Pinkham's Explanation of the Unusual Number of Deaths and Prostrations Among Women.

The great heat plague of August, 1896, was not without its lesson. One could not fail to notice in the long lists of the dead throughout this country, that so many of the victims were women in their thirties, and women between forty-five and fifty.

The women who succumbed to the protracted heat were women whose energies were exhausted by sufferings peculiar to their sex; women who, taking no thought of themselves, or who, attaching no importance to first symptoms, allowed their female system to become run down.

Constipation, capricious appetite, restlessness, forebodings of evil, vertigo, languor, and weakness, especially in the morning, an itching sensation which suddenly attacks one at night, or whenever the blood becomes overheated, are all warnings. Don't wait too long to build up your strength, that is now a positive necessity! Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has specific curative powers. You cannot do better than to commence a course of this grand medicine. By the neglect of first symptoms you will see by the following letter what terrible suffering came to Mrs. Craig, and how she was cured:

"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and think it is the best medicine for women in the world. I was so weak and nervous that I thought I could not live from one day to the next. I had prolapsus uteri and leucorrhœa and thought I was going into consumption. I would get so faint I thought I would die. I had dragging pains in my back, burning sensation down to my feet, and so many miserable feelings. People said that I looked like a dead woman. Doctors tried to cure me, but failed. I had given up when I heard of the Pinkham medicine. I got a bottle. I did not have much faith in it, but thought I would try it, and it made a new woman of me. I wish I could get every lady in the land to try it, for it did for me what doctors could not do."—Mrs. Sallie Craig, Baker's Landing, Pa.

ENGLISH AS SHE IS SPOKEN.

One Way to Spell Tomatoes, Five to Pronounce It.

One word in its time has many pronunciations. For instance: Mrs. Housekeep the other day was doing her morning's marketing. With her had come the stranger who was spending a week or two within her gates. Standing by while she snapped the beans between her fingers to see that they were tender, parted the husks to make sure that the corn was ripe, pulled the pears out of their paper wrappings and conducted herself generally after the manner of a careful housewife, was the clerk, order book in hand, and obsequiousness on his brow. The visitor began it with—

"These tomaytoes look nice. Get some—there's a dear!"

To which Mrs. Housekeep replied: "Why, certainly, if you lil'e them!" Then to the clerk: "How much are tomahtoes this morning?"

"I'm not sure; I'll ask. Jim," calling to a fellow clerk, "how much is them termaitoes?"

"I'll ask the boss. Say," passing the word further back, "watcher gettin for tomatoes to-day?"

"T'mats? O, two baskets for a quarter, I guess."

Therefore, to please her guest who loved "tomaytoes," Mrs. Housekeep invested in some "tomahtoes" and Jim, who was investigating the price of "tomattoes" for the benefit of a fellow clerk who wanted to know how to sell "termaiters," was enlightened as to what he should charge for "t'mats." And the bystander was left marveling at the infinite variety of "English as she is spoke."—Chicago Chronicle.

Where He Agreed with Him.

"What! What!" ... ate old man looked with indignation—

"You want to steal my child from me, to rob me of my daughter? Why sir!—"

His rage got the upper hand of him, and he gasped some more—

"Rascal is no name for you!"

The young man was perfectly calm. "You bet it isn't," he said, slowly; "and if anybody says otherwise there's liable to be trouble."

In the face of such sublime gall what could the old man do?—Puck.

An Expensive Bovine Habit.

Among the number of Baltimore fresh air fund children who passed through Washington a few days ago, bound for the cool hill country of Virginia, there was one little fellow who found the very best quarters in a hospitable farmhouse at Front Royal. When the cows came up in the evening to be milked, so a friend down there writes me, the little Baltimore boy went down to the barnyard with his host to see the operation. The cows were standing about placidly, and, as is their custom at that time of the day, were contentedly chewing the cud. The boy watched the milkmaids at work, and his eyes dwelt with growing wonder on the ceaseless grind of the cows' jaws. At length he turned to his host and said:

"And do you have to buy gum for all them cows?"—Washington Post.

New Through Passenger Route for Colorado, Utah and California.

The Chicago Times-Herald of August 27 says that on September 12 the new traffic alliance between the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway and the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific railway goes into effect, and on that date the former will send its first Denver sleeper out of Chicago. This will be attached to its regular night train for Omaha, and will be delivered there to the Rock Island. On October 2 the tourist car route over these two lines, the Colorado Midland and Southern Pacific, will be inaugurated. Tourist cars will be run once a week between Chicago and San Francisco. For further details regarding this new route call on or address Geo. H. Heafford, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, C., M. & St. P. Ry., 410 Old Colony Building, Chicago, Ill.

Boundless Egotism.

"You ought to give up trying to sing. Don't your neighbors smash your windows when you sing of an evening?" said Gilhooly to a vocalist.

"They don't do that because my singing is bad; on the contrary, they smash my windows so they can hear better."—Tammany Times.

The Blue and the Gray.

Both men and women are apt to feel a little blue, when the gray hairs begin to show. It's a very natural feeling. In the normal condition of things gray hairs belong to advanced age. They have no business whitening the head of man or woman, who has not begun to go down the slope of life. As a matter of fact, the hair turns gray regardless of age, or of life's seasons; sometimes it is whitened by sickness, but more often from lack of care. When the hair fades or turns gray there's no need to resort to hair dyes. The normal color of the hair is restored and retained by the use of

CROP AND STOCK.

Hogs are selling at $4 10 in Fayette.

Immense apple crops are reported around and above Alton, Ill.

Hail has totally destroyed corn and tobacco crops near Sebree, Ky.

Thirty thousand dollars were paid out for cattle at Mt. Sterling last Court day.

Several lots of seed wheat have been sold in Madison county at one dollar per bushel.

In Clark county there is great demand for good feeding cattle at 4 cents. The demand exceeds the supply.

Moses Kahn bought of G. W. Rash, of Bourbon county, 33 head of export cattle for October delivery at $4 70.

At the sale of Poland-China hogs at Springfield, Ills., a hog named Klever's Model sold for $5,100. This is the largest price ever paid for a hog.

A. M. Offutt sold to a Louisville house, for a Scott county man, last week, nine hogsheads of tobacco, at an average of $13.20.—Georgetown Times.

Star Pointer and Joe Patchen, the two phenomenal pacers, have been engaged to appear ... October meeting at the Louisville trotting track.

A Massachusetts farmer marketed 80 lambs, disposing of them when they were 25 to 30 days old; the first one sold weighed 22 lbs. at 25 days old. He received $8 00 each, which was about 50c. a lb., a price which he could not have obtained but for reaching the market early, when Spring lambs were not easily obtained.

Fulton Guard: The local Irish potato crop is short this year, and the potatoes are universally small. There would be more money in raising potatoes at seventy-five and eighty-five cents than wheat at even $1. Onions are worth $1 and $1.25 wholesale on the local market. Suppose you had planted, say, 3 acres of potato onions; what would your yield be?

Winchester Democrat: Many Clark county farmers are paying more attention to sheep this season than ever before. There is a fine demand for good sheep, and they are the only profitable kind to purchase. It seems to be the general impression that there is as much money in sheep as in any other stock, and consequently more attention has been paid in that direction. Buy good grade animals and they will prove a profitable investment.

Twenty-five years ago, when sheep-growing was first commenced in Montana, there were less than 5,000 in the State, and the wool, although it brought forty cents per pound, was of a course, low grade, which would hardly find a buyer in the present markets. Now there are more than 1,000,000 sheep in the State and its wool is classed as among the best in the world. Owing to the drought troubles in Australia, the Montana wool growers anticipate still higher prices for wool in 1898.—Wool Record.

The celebrated Belle Meade Farm near Nashville embraces 51,040 acres. Five hundred acres are enclosed by a stone wall four and a half feet high surmounted by a wire fence. In this inclosure 500 deer are kept. The rest of the farm is devoted to raising fine thoroughbred horses, Shetland ponies and cattle and of crops to maintain them. There are 169 brood mares kept, 130 Shetland ponies; 200 gallons of milk are churned daily which produces 90 pounds of butter. Twenty-six stablemen, seven cattlemen and fifty farm hands are employed.

The wheat crop of this country in 1850 was estimated at 100,000,000 bushels, 1860 at 175,000,000, in 1870 at 290,000,000, in 1880 at 470,000,000 bushels and this year it it estimated at 550.000,000 bushels. As a wheat producing country the United States stands far ahead of all others. Russia and France come second and third and India fourth. Of the great wheat-producing states Minnesota stands first with an average of 65,000,000 bushels, then comes North Dakota with an average of 60,000,000 California 40,000,000, South Dakota and Kansas about 30,000,000 each, Kentucky is estimated to contribute 9,000,000 bushels.

STATE NEWS.

"Aunt"Polly Foster died near Owingsville last week, said to be 107 years old.

Mary and Rebecca Jones, sisters, slashed each other with pen knives in Knox county.

Warren county crops were damaged by a storm. A heavy fall of hail hurt tobacco.

A deal of damage was done in Daviess and McLean counties by a storm. Fencing, outbuildings and crops suffered.

Nine persons failed to pass examinations entitling them to run for and hold the office of Superintendent of county schools.

Onyx beds have been discovered in Hart, Green and Metcalfe counties and the claim is made that they are worth billions of dollars.

Col. W. W. Baldwin, the "turnpike king," has refused an offer of $11,500 for the 8½ miles of the Maysville road lying in Fayette county.

The Rev. Thomas Hawthorne was strangled to death in a peculiar manner near Vanceburg. He was repairing his fence and his head caught between two palings.

James Meredith, aged 31 years, Deputy Sheriff of Knox county, married Miss Ella Simpson Friday. This is Meredith's eighth marriage in that county. All of his former wives are now living, he having obtained divorces from them.

As the outcome of a feud between their husbands Mrs. Jane Young and Mrs. Minerva Young, of Leslie county, met at a spring and fought, and the former was cut to death with a butcher knife in the hands of the latter. They were sisters-in-law.

In Marshall county the other day at a barbecue a general fight took place. Sheriff Joe Little, who was present, arrested the rioters, and then purchased all the cider on the grounds and poured it into Jonathan creek to keep the fighting crowd from getting any drunker.

The old Bluegrass is to the front once more, says the Woodford Sun. She now produces the greatest musical wonder of the world, little Imogen Peay, of Lexington, only six years old. She can master any piece of music put in front of her, and is composing some of the sweetest music ever heard.

In looking over the newspapers of the Purchase we find about fifty stray notices, says the Clinton Forum, and it leads us to believe that there must be much horse stealing going on in this section. Not less than fifteen horses have disappeared within a radius of ten miles of Clinton in the last two months.

"What are we here for except for the pensions?" Let the slangy but expressive "Nit" be the truthful answer. Notwithstanding every man of them is rolling in the wealth of a bounteous government, the members of the G. A. R. in encampment assembled at Buffalo last week, demanded a service pension after the age of 62 is reached. Great Godfrey! where is the thing ever to end! Why not turn the government over to the coffee coolers and be done with it?—Interior Journal.

George Bohon, of Harrodsburg, has bought 2,000 acres of land from the Shakers in Mercer county, says an exchange. The Shaker settlement at the south end of High Bridge owns some of the best land in Mercer county. Bohon paid $60,000 for the land. This is the first transfer of real estate made by the Shakers since their settlement was organized, more than thirty years ago.

A novel case was tried in the Circuit Court at Dixon. Jesse White, a minister of the gospel, was fined $20 for disturbing religious worship. White was conducting a sanctified meeting at Chalybeate church. The church made a rule that no young man should sit on the women's side of the house, and when one Mr. Crooks came in with a girl and took a seat beside her the minister left the pulpit and arrested him. Crooks made some resistance, which caused a disturbance, for which White was fined.

Paducah Sun: There is in Paducah a lawyer who has long had the reputation of writing a hand that no one, not even himself, could read. He's worse in his chirography than the renowned Horace Greeley. He left the city not long since on a business trip. A friend called at the house and inquired for him. He's out of the city," his wife informed the caller. "Where is he?" asked the visitor. "I don't know," was the rejoinder. "I got a letter from him the other day, but I couldn't read it, or even make out where he was.

Through the agency of the United States Bureau of Pensions, a tangled skein of facts stranger than romance has been unwound. One end of the skein was in Henderson, the other in Missouri, says the Henderson Journal. Nineteen years ago there was no happier couple in Henderson county than John M. Walker and his wife. He went hunting one day and has never been seen since. Next October will occur the nineteenth anniversary of Walker's disappearance. In the meantime Mrs. Walker left the farm and moved to Henderson. She mourned sincerely for the man she believed to be dead and remained true to his memory. Some months ago she concluded to apply for a widow's pension, for she had heard never a word from him since the day he had departed, as she thought,for a day's hunt. Her pension papers were duly proven and forwarded to Washington with a full statement of the facts. Yesterday Mrs. Walker received a notification from the department that her husband was alive and located in Houston, Texas county, Mo.

A Cave of Swine.

The Harrodsburg Sayings prints the following account of a cave explored last week near that city:

"For many a year it has been a well demonstrated fact that most of the town of Harrodsburg is built over a cavern. There is another cave Northeast of town that has been explored two or three miles. A third cavern has just been discovered and some strange facts are connected with it. Thursday County Surveyor Hendren, accompanied by Messrs. Edward C. Jones, Wm. and Dan Conder, Joe Woods, Stewart Latta and William Jones, by means of a ladder, went down twenty feet and found the real mouth of the cave, elliptical in form, two feet by three. The top of the sink hole is also elliptical, ten feet by twenty, and the hole grows gradually smaller. Through the aperture of two feet by three they crawled on their hands and knees. They had thus to crawl for fifty yards before they could stand erect. There a beautiful sight met their eyes. Symetrically formed stalactites and stalagmites gracefully adorned both the roof and floor of the cave.

"They found no gold nor silver, but indications of magnesium that caused a vibration in the magnetic needle. Mr. Hendren brought out a human skeleton that is far above medium height. They also found a great number of the bones of hogs. And the strangest of their find was a herd of live swine. When asked how many there were he said that from the noise they made there were hundreds, and that they fed on crawfish found in the stream of water that flows through the cave. He thinks years ago a sow must have fallen into the sink hole and worked her way into the cave, whence there is no getting out. This cave is four miles due north of here, on the Warwick road, on the farm of Mr. Ed C. Jones. It extends in a Southeastern direction for several miles."

VOL. XXII. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 15, 1897. NO. 47.

IRELAND is threatened with a famine.

THE North Bend Baptist Association is a unit in opposition to some of the teachings of Dr. Whitsitt.

OWENTON is a full fledged city. There came near being a knock-down at one of her concil meetings a few nights since.

THE campaign in Ohio is under way, the political machinery of each party having been given an overhauling and put in good order for the work it is expected to do between now and November.

DURING the month of August the expenditures of the government exceeded the receipts $13,000,000, but the Republican papers have not been calling the attention of the public to the fact as of yore.

THE new law does not interfere with those who are making a business of inaugurating a free turnpike system in this State by the destruction of toll gates, and every few days the raiders get in their work. The law is entirely helpless unless supported by public sentiment.

THE Western Argus says: "What to do with the Kentucky criminal is a problem yet undiscovered. It takes money to arrest him, to convict him, to jail him, to guard him, even to pardon him, and when he is at last imprisoned he may bankrupt the State in keeping him inside the walls."

IN West Virginia, a few days since, a mob made the awful mistake of hanging the wrong man. Such mistakes are liable to be made by a mob at any time. An ugly crime may be committed in a neighborhood, and the finger of suspicion soon points to someone without proof, and a mob never stops to consider the possibility of a mistake but hastens to do its work.

IT looks very much as if the local option law, which has been in force in this county so long, will expire on the 28th inst. by reason of the limitation placed upon local laws by the new constitution. Some contend that there is a provision in the constitution which will continue the Boone county whisky law in force, a question which the courts may be called upon to decide.

Farmers, sow wheat this fall and lots of it. We believe that wheat will be a paying crop next year, as the markets of the old world are bare, and this year's crop will be consumed before another crop can be marketed.—Lawrenceburg Press.

THE Press gives good advise, based on good reasons, although it occasionally forgets itself and gives high protection and the gold standard the credit for the present advance in prices.

AND another of Gov. Bradley's appointees has been compelled to walk the plank, Superintendent Chamberlain, of the chair factory in the Frankfort penitentiary. In another year the Governor will have a new outfit of subordinates if his present rate of changes is kept up, and yet the administration has been endorsed by a Republican State convention. But the Governor was not present at that convention to raise his voice in opposition to the unwarranted act.

THE compulsory educational law has never been other than a dead letter so far as this county is concerned. There are so many avenues by which to escape its provisions that it can not be enforced so as to test the law sufficiently to ascertain if further legislation in that direction should be attempted. It does look like that if the State can compel its citizens to pay a tax for the benefit of those who are not able to pay their children's tuition that they ought, in turn, to be compelled to send their children to the schools thus provided for them.

BELLEVUE

A Beautiful Little Town of 150 Inhabitants—Her Solid Business Men.

J. J. HUEY & CO.,

Dealers in general merchandise, coal, lime and cement, and everything usually sold in a general store. The firm is composed of J. J. Huey, Henry Clore and J. J. Walton, all young and hustling business men. Mr. Huey commenced business for himself on the sight of the firm's present business location in October, 1890. On the night of the 6th of February 1892 the building was burned down. The present firm bought the vacant lot and began the erection of their business house, which was completed in June, 1892. Besides dealing in general merchandise the firm buys leaf tobacco, and has a large and well regulated tobacco warehouse on an opposite corner.

J. J. Huey, the general manager of the concern, was born and raised on the farm now owned by George Rector in the Locust Grove neighborhood. He was born in 1863. Mr. Huey is married and has an interesting family growing up, to which he is very much devoted. Mr. J. J. Walton, another member of the firm, was born near Bellevue, where he has resided all his life. A few years ago he married a daughter of Dr. Williamson. Henry Clore is also a native of this county, and married, his wife being a daughter of Capt. John Smith, of Bellevue.

JOSEPH M. BIRKLE,

General blacksmith and woodworker, was born in Lewisburg, a beautiful suburb of Covington, in 1857, and consequently he is 40 years of age. At the age of 10 years his parents moved to this county, and at the age of 17 he began his present occupation with Fred Rich and H. Olaner in the town of Florence. Three years after his parents moved to Burlington and young Joe commenced business for himself at the old Kirkpatrick stand. He continued in business in Burlington for five years. From there he went to Plattsburg, where he remained for two years. He came to Bellevue fifteen years ago and now commands a fine cash trade at his present location, and is one of the best horseshoers in the county. Joe has a cinch on the plows he manufactures, and his jumping shovels are sold outside the limits of the county. In June, 1879, he married Miss Mattie Mallory, daughter of Henry Mallory, of near Burlington, and has an interesting family growing up, and he is devoted to his home. His three sons, Charles, Fred and Theodore are engaged in huckstering and do all the buying and are hustlers for ones so young. Joe is a member of the Madison Ave., Baptist church, Covington. His wife and children are members of the Bellevue Baptist church.

O. N. GRANT,

Dealer in drygoods, groceries and drugs—drugs a leader, was born in Bellevue, April 2nd, 1871, and consequently is 26 years of age. He is a son of W. W. Grant, an old and highly esteemed citizen of the town, who has been engaged in the general blacksmithing business all his life, and has a splendid trade. O. N. Grant commenced business in September, 1891. He commenced on a limited capital, but after six years of successful business he carries a stock of goods valued at $1000. He is energetic and pushing, and ready to meet all competition in his line of business. Mr. Grant is married, his wife being Miss Josie Scott, daughter of John Scott, who has resided in this county all his life. Mr. Grant is an educated and refined gentleman, and well liked by all who have the honor of his acquaintance. Physicians' and family prescriptions carefully compounded. When in Bellevue give Mr. Grant a call. He will treat you right.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

Washington, Sept. 10, 1897.

Consul General Fitzhugh Lee is in Washington, but State Department officials declare that his visit has no official significance, and that he will return to Cuba about the first of October. That is more, however, than Gen. Lee has said.

Senator Gorman was at the Treasury Department this week and called upon Secretary Gage for the first time. The newspaper men who tried to interview Mr. Gorman on politics met with the usual result—he interviewed them and found out what they knew, but didn't tell them what he knew. Whether Senator Gorman intends to retire from public life at the expiration of his present term is a question that is still being discussed both by his friends and his enemies, but whatever may be his intentions about retiring, there is no doubt about his intention to regain Maryland for the Democratic party, nor of his confidence in his ability to accomplish that result. His expansive smile when existing Republican dissensions in the State are mentioned shows his satisfaction with the situation.

Rev. Sam Small left Washington this week for Kentucky and Ohio. He will take an active part in the campaign in both States, making Democratic speeches. He has few equals as an effective stump orator. He recently had a conference with Mr. Bryan, and he will probably tell the Kentucky and Ohio voters some of the things they talked about.

†‡†

Officials of the Marine Hospital Service have taken steps which they believe will prevent the spread of the yellow fever, which is now at Ocean Springs, Miss., and a statement has been issued classing the yellow fever at that place as a ... form of the disease, which is proven by the small mortality so far—less than two per cent—and by the fact that many of those attacked have only been slightly inconvenienced thereby for several days. There is no occasion for any yellow fever scare anywhere.

†‡†

While it is generally known in Washington that Pension Commissioner Evans has had several wrangles with the Civil Service Commission, because of his violations of the civil service law and rules, and that Secretary Bliss has made him feel his authority in more or less humiliating way, upon several occasions, the rumor that he has become sufficiently disgruntled to contemplate resigning finds few believers. Mr. Evans says he doesn't intend to resign, but they always talk that way. Of the nineteen divisions in the Pension Bureau there is only one that has the same chief it had when Mr. Evans took charge of the office; the other eighteen have either been reduced or removed.

Senator Bacon, of Ga., was in Washington this week. He thus sized up the condition of the people of his state and section: If you put a man in a wilderness he will ultimately get out of it some of the comforts of life, and so did our people. They are now making a little money; not much, but they are growing stronger and steadily improving. Not a bit of it is due to tariff legislation. Things had to get better, for nothing could get worse with them. They had no credit and were compelled to raise what they consumed. Out of this adversity they are emerging and will in due time become the people they were before they sank almost into the depths of despair. There has been some talk in the North about the increase in the price of cotton. There is no increase that we know of. Cotton still remains at the same low figure. If the increase in the price of our crops would correspond with the increase in the price of wheat, the cotton growers of the South would be delighted, but there is as yet no indication that will be any great rise in the staple which the Southern country produces."

HON. AUGUSTUS E. WILSON, one of the most prominent Republicans in the State has kicked over the traces in the Mayoralty race in Louisville. He does not understand how any upright citizen can vote for Mayor Todd who is the Republican nominee for reelection. Mr. Wilson's swinging out of the Todd column is worth many votes to Weaver, the Democratic nominee. In speaking of his action Mr. Wilson says:

"Party loyalty has no ... force any upwright citizen to vote for an unfit and dangerous man simply because his name is under the party design."

THE following from the Owen News shows how blindly many good men in this State are following the Courier-Journal in its shifting of political principles. They were ardent admirers of that journal when it was advocating the free and unlimited coinage of silver, and they are just as enthusiastic in its praise since it took the opposite side of the money question from that which it advocated a few years since. It is fair to presume that they would remain its supporters were it to change its tariff views. The News says:

"Ras Bainbridge, a gold bug from principle, said the other day after reading Watterson's editor-editoral published in the C. J. in 1886. 'I didn't think that Mr. Watterson ever held any such views on the money question. I was under the impression that he had always been a gold man, but it seems that I was mistaken. Yes, if it is anarchy to be for free silver now, according to Mr. Watterson's views he certainly was a rank anarchist in 1886. Of course I think him a better man now than in '86, but he evidently has changed.' "

WASHINGTON.

Capt. Leary Ordered to Command the San Francisco—Tuberculosis Among Cattle at the Kansas State College.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—The agricultural department Wednesday received the first information that has come to it in regard to the report several days ago of the existence of tubercolisis among the cattle at the state college at Manhattan, Kas. The information came from the regents of the Kansas State agricultural college and was in a degree confirmatory of the published reports. It was stated, however, that a thorough test is considered necessary. This will be made at the agricultural college on the 25th of October, and the co-operation of the agricultural department in making the test is requested. The request will probably be favorably considered.

Capt. R. P. Leary has been detached from the Richmond, ordered to command the San Francisco, and Capt. M. L. Johnson detached from San Francisco and granted two month's leave; Lieut. Commander F. J. Drake has been ordered to Mare Island as ordnance officer; Lieut. S. Surgeon General Wyman has made application to the civil service commission for authority to appoint a number of persons in addition to the regular force of the marine hospital service for duty in connection with the reported outbreak of yellow fever on the Gulf coast and the request has been granted under the proviso of paragraph 19 of rule viii. of the civil service regulations. This rule provides for temporary appointments for a period not exceeding 30 days in case of emergency and the surgeon general has been informed that under this regulation his appointive powers are not circumscribed.

The treasury department has received information from Eagle Pass, Tex., of the importation of 507 head of cattle from Mexico. It is said that this is the first entry of importance since the new tariff law went into effect and the treasury officials call attention to it, as it was contended by opponents of the bill that the increase of 7½ per cent. ad valorem on cattle would be found to be prohibitory. Another large entry is expected soon at Laredo, Tex.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—Surgeon General Wyman says the yellow fever situation looked decidedly more hopeful Wednesday. No new cases have been officially reported to him, although there were newspaper reports of three new cases at Biloxi. He has wired Dr. J. J. Lemon at Biloxi concerning this report. Dr. Guiteras, the yellow fever expert from the University of Pennsylvania, reported his arrival at Ocean Springs Wednesday morning. He will investigate the cause and nature of the outbreak. The surgeon general has formally tendered the aid of the Marine hospital service to the state and health authorities of Louisiana and Mississippi, and Dr. Oliphant, president of the Louisiana state board of health has been requested to telegraph daily the fever situation in New Orleans. He telegraphed Wednesday morning the fact of the death at New Orleans Tuesday and added that there had been no new cases since.

PANIC IN IRELAND.

Blight Has Everywhere Wholly or Partially Destroyed the Potato and Oat Crop.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—A dispatch to the World from London says:

A panic is spreading throughout Ireland over the terrible prospect of the apparently complete failure of the harvest. Reports from 110 parish priests from Counties Clare, Cork, Kerry, Limerick, Tiperary, Antrim, Armagh, Cavan, Derry, Donegal, Down, Fermanagh, Monaghan and Tyrone, all tell the same piteous story of ruined crops, impending destitution and famine. Blight has everywhere wholly or partially destroyed potatoes, while oats, which is the next most essential crop to an Irish farmer, has been battered down by incessant rains and practically destroyed.

From Connemara county, Galway, comes this heartrending tale:

"The late long run of harsh weather leaves scarcely a vestige of hope to the Connemara cottiers. The three principal crops raised in this locality—hay, oats and potatoes—are virtually ruined, the latter to an alarming extent. It is a common observation around Clifden that it is a full day's work for a man to dig one meal of potatoes for his family, and even they can scarcely be eaten."

From Maryborough, Queens county, a correspondent says:

"In this county there is a general unanimity of opinion that since the famine of 1847 the prospect for the agricultural community was never as bad as to-day. This description does not refer to any particular locality, but to every district in the county. The crop that has suffered most is the potato, of which there will be practically none. It is generally believed that before the new year dawns there will be no potatoes fit to eat in the county. Next to potatoes oats are in a very bad condition."

An East-Bound Record Established.

POSTAL CARDS.

The Facilities of the West Virginia Paper Co. to Be Investigated.

The Report of Auditor of the Interior Department—Civil Service Examination of Applicants for the Office of Supervising Architect of the Treasury.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—Third Assistant Postmaster General Merritt goes to Piedmont, W. Va., Thursday to investigate the facilities of the West Virginia Paper Co. for supplying the postal cards required for the next four years. This mill has been designated by Mr. Albert Daggett, who was the lowest bidder for the contract, as the one at which he will have the cards mannfactnred in case the contract is awarded to him. Mr. Merritt said before starting Thursday that if he found the conditions at the mill satisfactory he had no doubt Mr. Daggett's bid would be accepted. The terms of the contract call for about 700,000,000 cards a year at an aggregate annual cost to the government of about $165,000.

Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Bristow returned to the city Wednesday, after an absence of several weeks, and Thursday the appointment of 103 new postmasters of the fourth-class was announced. The appointments were made in various states, the largest number in any one state being 12 in Tennessee. Sixty-six of the appointments were made to succeed persons who were removed.

The annual report of the auditor for the interior department shows that the amount paid for pensions during the last year was $140,477,637. The payments on pension account for the fiscal year 1896 was $138,722,127, and for the fiscal year of 1895, $140,558,641; 1894, $137,119,551, and for 1893, $154,559,214. The cost of the service last year was $3.89 per $1,000; for 1896, $4.07; for 1895, $4.00; for 1894, $3.77 and for 1893, $3.35.

The civil service examination of applicants for appointment to the office of supervising architect of the treasury, will be held Friday. There are 33 applicants, and the examinations will be conducted at Washington, New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, Memphis, Kansas City, Atlanta, Syracuse, St. Joseph, Cincinnati, Omaha, San Francisco, Boston, St. Louis and Augusta, Ga. New York furnishes the largest number of applicants. There are six from that city and four each from Chicago and Philadelphia.

The attention of Senor Julio Rengifo, the representative of the republic of Colombia, was called Thursday to reports that Colombia had granted a concession to England to complete the Panama canal, thus transferring that mammoth enterprise from French to English hands. Senor Rengifo said he had received no information from his government on the subject, as the canal project did not come within the jurisdiction of the representative in Washington. At the same time, speaking from an extended acquaintance with canal affairs, Gen. Rengifo expressed great doubt as to the accuracy of the reports, and pointed out a number of circumstances showing that it was impossible at such a concession to England or any other foreign government had been granted.

The secretary of the treasury has decided that, under the new tariff act, drugs, etc., which have been advanced from a strictly crude or natural condition by refining, grinding, cleansing or purifying process, are liable to duty without undergoing such conversion as would bring them within the purview of the term "manufacture."

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—Thursday afternoon Surgeon General Wyman received the following telegram from Surgeon Murray at Ocean Springs:

"Third autopsy held by Wasdin. Diagnosis of yellow fever consented to by Guiteras, Carter, Gant and Maniaus. Above was one of the suspicious cases seen by Guiteras Wednesday."

This telegram sets at rest all doubt as to the existence of yellow fever at Ocean Springs and the Marine hospital service now fully realizes that it is grappling with the awful plague.

Twelve Suspicious Cases.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 10.—The board of health Thursday night announced that there are 12 suspicious cases in one block down town. Under ordinary circumstances these cases would not have even been deemed suspicious, but two weeks ago a refugee from Ocean Springs died in that vicinity and since then the fever has spread there. None of the patients have died nor are any seriously ill. The board of experts have been studying the cases several days but they have not been able to reach a definite conclusion and it was finally decided to report the cases as suspicious in accordance with the board's pledge to keep the public fully in its confidence.

Prairie Fires at Whiting, Ind.

WHITING, Ind., Sept. 10.—Whiting was surrounded on three sides by prairie fires Thursday night, which are causing no little apprehension on the part of the citizens residing in the outlying districts. Already considerable property has been destroyed and much more is threatened. The gravest apprehension is felt at Wilcox and Stiglitz Park, both settlements being situated on the open prairie and with absolutely no fire protection whatever. The flames are creeping closely and the residents are out in force fighting to save their homes.

AWFUL CRASH.

Head-End Collision on the Denver & Rio Grande Road—At Least Forty People Were Killed, Burned and Wounded.

NEWCASTLE, Col., Sept. 11.—The most disastrous railroad wreck that has ever happened in Colorado occurred at 19:15 Friday morning a mile and a half west of this town. Denver & Rio Grande passenger train No. 1, westbound, collided with a Colorado Midland stock train, going east, wrecking both engines and several cars in both trains. Shortly after the collision fire broke out in the ruins. The mail, baggage and express cars, smoker, day coach and a tourist sleeper were burned. A number of passengers who were not killed outright bnt who were pinned in the wreckage and could not be extricated, perished in the flames. There were about 200 passengers. It is estimated that 25 persons were killed and as many more bruised, scalded and burned, of whom over six are likely to die of their injuries.

The trains collided on a curve or bend round a mountain, and there was no opportunity to avoid the wreck or even to slacken their speed. The surviving trainmen say the trains were not running fast, but the facts seem to be that both the passenger and freight were going at full speed—about 30 miles an hour for the passenger and 10 or 12 for the freight.

One report as to the cause of the accident is to the effect that Conductor Burbank, of the Colorado Midland stock train, made a mistake of ten minutes in figuring on the time when the Rio Grande passenger train passed Newcastle, and that therefore he was chiefly responsible for the disaster. Engineer Ostrander, of the stock train, could either confirm or deny this report if he was alive, but it is believed he is under the debris.

The passengers in the day coach fared the worst. Out of 29 people in that coach only six are now known to have escaped. All was confusion and some may have escaped unnoticed.

As in all similar accidents, the engine men are first to lose their lives. Engineer Ostrander went down with his hands on the lever.

Robert Holland, fireman on the passenger, was so badly hurt that he died at 5 o'clock. Engineer Gordon of the passenger may live, although he is badly injured, and at first was thought to be fatally hurt. He suffered great pain from a rupture in addition to his other injuries. He was thrown over a barb wire fence by the force of the collision.

Hines, the Midland fireman, was so badly hurt that the doctors who examined him at five o'clock said that he could not recover. He was shockingly burned, but bore his pain bravely. James Keenan, the postal clerk, will not live until noon, the doctors say. He is terribly scalded.

Two express messengers on the Rio Grande train saved their lives, but their escape was a thrilling one. They were James C. Foley and William S. Messagar, both of Denver.

It is difficult to get particulars about the dead and injured, so great is the confusion. In addition to the above named it is now known that Alex. Hartman, of Hersher, Ill., has both legs broken and can not live. His wife and two children were the first of the dead to be removed from the wreckage.

At least two cars of stock were wrecked and the road strewn with dead animals.

The express car and its contents, of the wrecked passenger train, were entirely consumed by fire.

Frank P. Mannix, editor of the Victor Record, was a passenger on the Denver and Rio Grande train.

"I was in the smoker when the collision happened," he said, "and was jammed down in the seat. I saw daylight on one side and managed to pull myself out, and, with the help of Brakeman Daniels, helped to pull three people from the wreck. At the time of the collision the tank under the smoker exploded and set fire to the train. The scene was awful. The mail, baggage, smoker, day coach and a tourist sleeper were burned, the rear Pullman and a private car remaining on the track."

Mr. Mannix is of the opinion that at least 40 are dead and burned. Four more bodies have been brought in which are burned beyond any possibility of identification.

NEWCASTLE, Col., Sept. 11.—Conductor Burbank of the Colorado Midland stock train which collided with the Denver and Rio Grande passenger has been arrested. A careful seach around the Midland engine failed to reveal the remains of Engineer Ostrander. It is believed he jumped from his engine in time to save his life and realizing that the accident was due to his negligence, fled to the hills.

Charred fragments of limbs and bodies of a number of persons have been taken out of the ruins, but it is not likely that any more bodies will be positively identified, and it seems certain that the number killed will remain in doubt. The coroner found a shaving mug with the name "W. Nicholson" upon it, also a gold watch with the name of F. C. Potter engraved on the outside.

Fireman Hines and Engineer Gordon died Friday night.

STRIKE ENDED,

So Far as Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and West Virginia are Concerned.

Resolutions Adopted Accepting the Sixty-five Cent Compromise—Ten Days is the Time Provided for Miners to Resume Work—Illinois Miners to Convene.

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 13.—The great miners' strike which was declared on July 4, was brought to an end Saturday evening, so far, at least, as western Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and West Virginia are concerned, by the action of the interstate convention of miners, which has been in session here since Wednesday.

After a day of voting and wrangling, the convention adopted a resolution accepting the proposition of the Pittsburgh operators. The vote was 495 for and 317 against accepting the terms of settlement. Eleven votes were not cast. The delegates from Illinois, who had 350 votes, were unanimously against a settlement. Indiana and West Virginia voted solidly to accept the operators' proposition, but there were scattering votes among the Ohio and Pittsburgh delegates against it.

While ten days is provided for the miners to resume work, it is probable many of the Ohio and Pittsburgh mines will be reopened Monday. The convention adopted resolution s indorsing the action of the national executive board in recommending a settlement on the terms proposed.

The Illinois miners will be called in convention at Springfield, September 19, to determine what shall be done in that state. Some of the Illinois delegates are very bitter in their denunciation of the action of the convention, since they claim their interests have not been given due consideration.

A resolution was adopted denouncing the action of the deputies in firing into the crowd of striking miners at Hazelton, Pa.

FREIGHT TRAIN WRECKED.

Seven Men Killed, Six Injured, Two of Whom Will Die—Disaster on the Iron Mountain Road.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Sept. 13.—A special to the Commercial-Appeal from Van Buren, Ark., says: A most disastrous freight wreck occurred on the Iron Mountain road at Hanson, I. T., a small station 20 miles west of Van Buren, at 2 o'clock, resulting in the death of seven men and the serious injury of six others, two of whom will die.

Of the wounded it is thought that two will die, as they suffered internal injuries. All of the dead and wounded were sent to Vian, with the exception Walton's body, it being brought to this place, where he has relatives living. None of the train men were hurt. The wrecked train was a local freight, No. 45, from Coffeeville, Kan., to Van Buren. While the train was running at a speed of 20 miles an hour, the forward trucks of one of the cars near the engine broke, wrecking 15 cars loaded with walnut logs and baled hay. With the exception of two cars in front and three cars in the rear including the caboose, every car of the 20 composing the train was ditched. In the middle of the train was a car loaded with heavy machinery and it was in this car that 13 men were stealing a ride, and from which seven dead and six seriously wounded were taken by the trainmen shortly afterward. It appears that the occupants of the wrecked car were a party of men and boys living at Vian, I. T., who were coming to Van Buren to find employment in the cotton fields. When the machinery car left the rails it fell on its side, nearly all of the men being caught by the heavy beams. A car of logs was piled on top of the one in which the men were riding, and that any of them escaped instant death is but little short of a miracle. A message was sent to Trainmaster Walsh at this place by the train crew, and he immediately ordered out a wrecking train and with Division roadmaster McLeod went to the scene of the wreck, taking with them Dr. Dibrell, the company's local surgeon at this place. The first thing done was to extricate the dead and wounded, and on account of the heavy logs and machinery under which they were buried the task was a laborous one and it was several hours before the last of the bodies was removed from the wreck.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 13.—A special to the Times from Hanburn, Ark., says many sad scenes were enacted at Hanson.

One of the dead, whose name is unknown, was found with his head smashed to a pulp between the heavy logs, his brains oozing out. Others were crushed and mangled in a horrible manner. Two of the dead were brought here, William and Charles Fame. Will was found on one side of the track and Charles on the other, both crushed almost out of semblance to human beings.

MADRID, Sept. 12.—The official dispatch from Havana detailing the loss of the Victoria de las Tunas says; "The garrison of Victoria de las Tunas consisted of 350 men, of whom 325 were sick in the hospital. The place capitulated after a heroic defense. The commandant, with three officers and 75 men, marched out taking with them the sick and wounded. The insurgents fired a cannon at the hospital, although the flag of the Red Cross society was hoisted over it at the time. Many of the wounded perished in the debris. The insurgents lost 100 killed."

Webster's Last Words.

Webster's last words were: "I still live." A teacher in one of the East side schools had been reading anecdotes of the great lexicographer to the pupils, and the next day, catechising them on what she had read, she asked:

"What were Webster's last words?"

There was deep silence, and she repeated the question. Finally a little fellow with a squint in his left eye held up his hand.

"Well, Mulvaney," said the teacher, kindly, "do you know?"

"Yessum," said Mulvaney, confidently. "He said 'I ain't dead yet.'"—N. Y. World.

ARKANSAS LADIES DON'T LIE.

Mrs. Martha A. Johnson.

Malvern, Ark., says: Have used Dr. M. A. Simmons Liver Medicine 10 years, and find it a great deal better than "Zeilin's Regulator" and "Black Draught." It has been of great benefit to my Daughter and Niece during their monthly troubles for Obstructed Menstruation. There should be no home without it.

The Turn of Life.

The cessation of the menses usually occurs between the ages of forty and fifty. Great irregularity takes place in the periodic discharge for some time before the final cessation, the female usually experiencing sudden flashes of heat, fullness in the head, headache and other evidences of constitutional disturbance. The nervous system sympathetically responds, and there is great irritability and nervousness. Finally, the patient is discouraged and has a sense of fullness or suffocation.

At no time in her life does a woman need more constant care and watchful tenderness, nor has more need for a remedy to invigorate and strengthen the nerves. Those who should be kept regular with Dr. M. A. Simmons Liver Medicine, and if Dr. Simmons has gone "the way of all good things," the whole of this critical period, it will invigorate and enrich her blood, soothe and strengthen her nerves and thus relieve all suffering and enable her to pass safely through the change, prolong her life and afford her strength and joy in her declining years.

A. P. Ewton

Pine Bluff, Ark., writes: Dr. M. A. Simmons Liver Medicine has been a God send to myself and family for 20 years. It cures Chills and Fevers, Bilious Fevers, Sick Headache. I think there is no comparison between it and "Black Draught" and "Zeilin's Liver Regulator."

Fullness of Blood in Head.

Where there is great determination of blood to the head, the blood-vessels of the brain become greatly congested, and there exists flushed face, giddiness, especially on stooping, and throbbing pain in the head, increased by movement. It may be caused by living too freely; too late rising in the morning, combined with an inactive life. Menstrual derangements in females will often occasion it. Dr. Simmons Squaw Vine Wine is especially made for this, and it cures.

BLOODY RIOT.

Deputy Sheriffs Attack a Body of Marching Miners at Latimer.

From Fifteen to Twenty Killed and Fifty or More Wounded.

After the First Volley the Infuriated Miners Scattered in All Directions—Gov. Hastings Has Ordered Several Companies of State Troops to the Scene.

HAZLETON, Pa., Sept. 11.—The strike situation reached a terrible crisis on the outskirts of Latimer Friday afternoon, when a band of deputy sheriffs fired into an infuriated mob of miners. The men fell like so many sheep, and the excitement since has been so intense that no accurate figures of the dead and wounded can be obtained. Reports run from 15 to 20 odd killed and 40 or more wounded. One man who reached the scene Friday night counted 13 corpses. Four other bodies lie in the mountains between Latimer and Harleigh. Those who were not injured carried their dead and wounded friends into the woods and estimate is baffled.

The strikers left Hazleton at 3:30 o'clock Friday afternoon, announcing their intention to go to Latimer. As soon as this became known a band of deputies was loaded on a trolley car and went whirling across the mountain to the scene where the bloody conflict followed. After reaching Latimer, they left the car and formed into three companies, under Thomas Hall, E. A. Hess and Samuel B. Price. They drew up in line at the edge of the village, with a fence and a line of horses in their rear.

Sheriff Martin was in entire command and stood in the front of the line until the strikers approached. They were seen coming across the ridge, and Sheriff Martin went out to meet them.

The men drew up sullenly and listened in silence until he had once more read the riot act. This finished, a low murmuring arose among the foreigners and there was a slight movement forward. Perceiving this, the sheriff stepped toward them and in a determined tone forbade advance. Some one struck the sheriff and the next moment there was a command to the deputies to fire. The guns of the deputies instantly belched forth a terrible volley. The report seemed to shake the very mountains and a cry of dismay went up from the people. The strikers were taken entirely by surprise, and as the men toppled and fell over each other, those who remained unhurt stampeded. The men went down before the storm of bullets like tenpins and the groans of the dying and wounded filled the air.

The excitement that followed was simply indescribable. The deputies seemed to be terror-stricken at the deadly execution of their guns, and seeing the living strikers fleeing like wild and others dropping to the earth, they went to the aid of the unfortunates whom they had brought down.

At Farley's hotel there were two men lying on the [illegible] been shot in the head.

One had three bullets in him. His groans and appeals for a doctor or death were heartrending. All along the road the wounded men who were able to leave the field of battle scattered themselves and sought the shade of the trees for protection but there was no need of that then. Approaching the place where the shooting occurred, people were men wringing their hands and bemoaning the catastrophe. They could not talk intelligently and it was with the greatest difficulty that information could be gleaned.

Along the bank of the trolley road men lay in every position, some dead, others dying. Three bodies, face downward, lay along the incline and three others were but a short distance away. On the other side of the road as many more bodies lay. The school house was transformed into a temporary hospital and some of the wounded were taken there. The colliery ambulance was summoned to the place as soon as possible, and upon its arrival two men, both shot through the legs, were loaded into the wagon. All along the hillside wounded men were found, on the green on the roadside and in the fields. Many others, who had been carried to a distance, could not be found.

Amid the excitement the deputies turned their attention to the wounded and carried many of them to places where they could be more comfortably treated.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Sept. 11.—Gov. Hastings Friday night ordered out the Third brigade, of which Gen. Gobin is commander, and instructed Gen. Schall to hold the First brigade in readiness. The troops will mobilize at Hazelton and are expected to be on the scene before daybreak. Capt. A. R. Paxton, U. S. A., attached to the national guard, started for Hazleton Friday night by direction of the governor. Superintendent Creighton, of the middle division of the Pennsylvania railroad, was called into conference at the executive mansion, and has arranged for the speedy transportation of the soldiers.

HAZELTON, Pa., Sept. 13.—The situation here Sunday night was graver than it has been at any time since the bloody affray of Friday afternoon. There is strong reason to fear a conflict between the strikers and the military Monday and there is an indication that from five to seven thousand more miners will join the malcontents.

Feeling continues high against Sheriff Martin and his deputies, and the intensity of the situation is such that a sudden turn of the head or a word spoken above the ordinary tone, brings a running crowd. The soldiers are watchful and ready for any emergency, and the people of the town are in a state which may easily become panic.

An incident of ugly omen occurred during the funeral of three of the victims Sunday afternoon. As services were being held inside of the St. Joseph's church about 9,000 foreigners were congregated about the doors. A number of them raised their voices and it is declared by eye-witnesses that a policeman stationed near the door became unduly officious. Instantly an ominous muttering followed mingled with scowling looks and clenched fists. Word was immediately carried indoors to Rev. Father Aust. He hurried to the door and bundled the men who seemed most quarrelsome in the church. A few words of counsel to the others prevented further demonstrations.

Trouble is in the air, and if it is to come, the time will be Monday. This is clear from the words used Sunday night by Gen. Gobin, commander of the Third brigade. The striking miners have made elaborate preparations for a demonstration at the funeral of ten of the victims, which is fixed for half-past ten o'clock in the morning. The military authorities are determined that nothing of the kind shall be permitted, and that from this time on there shall be no marching of any character whatsoever, whether during funerals or otherwise. This resolution is not generally known and the miners are going on with their arrangements. Gen. Gobin talked over the telephone to Gov. Hastings for an hour or more Sunday afternoon. He said he had merely made a formal report to the governor of the situation. It is apparent, however, that the commander is not cheered by the immediate outlook, although he says he thinks there will be no further turbulence. He would not say when the troops are likely to be withdrawn and he has resolved to act with the utmost rigor.

Furthermore, he made a revelation which puts a startling aspect upon the situation. This was, that the house of the engineer of No. 3 colliery had been broken into late Saturday night by six masked men, and the engineer, who is a cripple, unmercifully beat him. There is no clew to the identity of the assailants. The only work the man has been doing lately is the pumping necessary to free the mine from water. The general had also received a formal report of the Andenreid outrage of last Thursday night, when strikers broke into the house of Gomer Jones, superintendent of the Lehigh and Wilkesbarre Coal Co. Jones, whose unpopularity with the miners was one of the first causes of the strike, was not there but the men literally wrecked the interior of the house and then attacked a mine power house nearby and stole therefrom a quantity of dynamite. As soon as he heard of this Gen. Gobin assigned a guard of the Thirteenth regiment to remain at Audenreid.

The addition to the strikers' ranks, if made, will be the men at Coxes' mines, and should they go out the last big anthracite company in the region will be idle. It was not known until Sunday that the 2,000 men employed at colliery No. 7 had a meeting at Stockton Saturday night, and drew up a petition to the operators demanding an increase in wages of ten per cent. This will be presented Sunday and the action in the event of refusal is "strike." It is accepted as a fact that if the men go out all the others employed by the company will join them making the total number something between five and seven thousand from these mines alone. The Coxe men had already been offered an increase but rejected it on the ground that it was still lower than the scale paid by the other operators in the region. These men have been working steadily up to this time and of late up to ten o'clock at night.

To all intent and purpose Hazleton is under martial law. Gen. Gobin declared Sunday night that in spite of warrants issued for the arrests of Sheriff Martin and his deputies, no constables or civic authority will be permitted to arrest the men. He said that the sheriff is an executive officer, whose duty is to preserve the peace, and that he, Gobin, and the troops are really subordinate to the sheriff at this time, being engaged in helping him to perform that duty. Under these circumstances he will not permit interference with the sheriff's officials so long as the militia is here. In spite of this fine distinction the commander's decision on this point is accepted as superceding the civil authorities by the military power.

The events of Sunday were the death of another of the wounded, Jacob Tomashantos, the 18-year-old boy who was shot through the head, the announcement Snnday afternoon by the hospital doctors that six more will die, several perhaps before morning, and the funeral of four of the victims. These were Andrea Podolak, Steve Urich, John Futs and Mike Cheslo. Ten more will be buried Monday and here the trouble is likely to occur. It has been arranged that the ten coffins shall be carried on the shoulders of the strikers from the undertaker's shop to the front of St. Joseph's church. In front of the church a platform is to be erected upon which it is the purpose to place the ten coffins so that they can be viewed by the crowd.

Then addresses in Polish, Lithuanian and English are to be made by priests and others; the bodies will be carried inside and the pontificial high mass will be celebrated. After the services the procession will go to the Polish cemetery, where eight coffins, those containing Poles, will be placed in one large grave. It is the purpose to acquire by subscription sufficient funds to erect over this a monnment bearing the names of the victims and a brief history of the event. Seventeen societies, all but one made up of Poles, Hungarians and others of the Slav race, and one of Irish, are to march in the funeral procession.

If Gen. Gobin executes the intention he announced Sunday night this whole programme will be upset, and it is feared that the men will resent any interference with the disposition of their dead.

Clement Plofslack, aged 39 years, one of the strikers who was injured in Friday's riot, died late Sunday night, making the twenty-third death.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Sept. 13.—Sheriff Martin spent the night at his home in this city and left for Hazleton with the militia Saturday morning. Before taking his departure he went into Reddington's restaurant for some refreshments. The place was filled with soldiers and sympathizers of the striking miners. The sheriff was hissed when he entered, but he paid no attention to the taunts. Then the crowd gathered around him and he was inclined to resist their interference. His friends, however, hustled him off to a private room, where he remained until the time for the departure of the train.

A reporter accompanied the sheriff on his trip down. Mr. Martin was cool and collected. He said:

"This is an unfortunate affair, but I think ninety-nine men out of a hundred would have done just as I did. But now that the crisis has been reached, I do not propose to shirk my duty. Some say my action was premature; that I should have lolled with the mocking mob. I tell you I had been parleying with them for four days and it did no good. They were gradually getting the best of the situation, and I think in 24 hours more things would have been worse."

The coal operators in this vicinity are inclined to stand by the sheriff. They say they have confidence in him and think he only did his duty. Among the laboring element, however, the feeling is very bitter against the sheriff.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Sept. 13.—The executive mansion has been the scene of much activity during the last 48 hours. Gov. Hastings, Attorney General McCormick, Maj. Gen. Snowden, Adj. Gen. Stewart and Private Secretary Beitler have been on duty almost constantly. A corps of messenger boys is stationed in the parlor to carry messages from the governor to the telegraph offices and the headquarters of the national guard.

Maj. Gen. Snowden will remain at the mansion until after the funeral of the victims Monday. No further trouble is anticipated, but the governor has requested the major general to remain here over Monday in case of an emergency requiring his presence. Gens. Snowden and Stewart may visit the soldiers' camp after the funeral. Gen. Snowden is so well pleased with the admirable manner in which the troops are being handled by Gen. Gobin that he will not interfere with his plans.

Gen. Stewart received from camp Sunday a blue print showing the location of the troops. At the same time he received a telegram from Gen. Gobin stating that the troops are well quartered and have plenty of snpplies. The general also telegraphed that there was no tronble and he did not look for an outbreak.

Gen. Gobin will keep a close watch on the funerals and will prepare to suppress any disorders. Should the miners and operators adjust their differences at Tuesday's conference, the troops, with the exception of a battalion and a troop of cavalry will be withdrawn. The First brigade is still held in readiness, but it is thought here that all danger of another outbreak is passed and no more troops will be needed. Gov. Hastings has announced his visit to the Blue Mountains and will stay here until the troops are withdrawn.

UNITED LABOR LEAGUE.

Of Philadelphia, Denounces the Killing of the Miners at Hazelton.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 13.—At a special meeting of the United Labor league Sunday afternoon, the question of the shooting of the miners near Hazelton by Sheriff Martin's deputies, was brought up for discussion and a number of speeches denunciatory of the action were delivered. Snbsequently, the following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, In view of the deliberate assassination of 21 miners and the mortal wounding of a number of others, most of whom received their wounds in the back while fleeing from the majesty of the law; be it

Resolved, by the United Labor League of Philadelphia and its vicinity that we feel that a crime has been committed in the name of law, and we hereby donate the sum of $25 for the prosecution of the offenders and further call on all affiliated bodies to contribute to their best ability for the same purpose.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 13.—Ex-Queen Lilioukalani, of Hawaii, arrived in this city from the east Friday night. She will be here for some time, and will not for the present define the purpose of her visit, which, it is presumed, she intends to make to Honolulu.

It is estimated that greater quantities of gold and silver have been sunk in the sea than are now in circulation on earth.

WORST WRECK

In the History of the Santa Fe Road Near Emporia, Kan.—Ten or Eleven Persons Killed and Fully as Many Injured.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 9.—A special to the Times from Emporia, Kan., says:

One of the worst wrecks in the history of the Santa Fe railroad occurred three miles east of here at about 7:30 o'clock Wednesday night. Ten or twelve persons were killed and as many more were badly hurt. The fast mail train going east, and the Mexico & California express, westbound, collided head-on. The Mexico & California express was pulled by two locomotives, and when they struck the engine drawing the fast mail, the boilers of all three engines exploded and tore a hold in the ground so deep that the smoking cars of the westbound train went in on top of three engines and two mail cars and balanced there, without turning over. The passengers in the smoking car escaped through the windows. The front end of this car was enveloped in a volume of stifling smoke and steam belching up from the wreck below, and the rear door was jammed tight in the wreck of the car behind. The wreck caught fire from the engines. The cars in the hole and the smoking car burned to ashes in no time. In climbing ont of the smoking car several men fell through the rifts in the wreck below, and it is impossible to tell whether they escaped or were burned to death. The west-bound train carried seven or eight coaches, and its passengers included many excursionists who had been to hear Hon. W. J. Bryan speak at the county fair at Burlingame. Mr. Bryan himself was on the train, but was riding in the rear Pullman some 400 feet from the cars which were wrecked. He states that nothing but a heavy jolt was experienced by the passengers in his coach.

Mr. Bryan was one of the noblest men in the crowd of rescuers. He helped to carry out the dead and wounded and gave the greatest attention to their care. One poor fellow who was badly maimed called to Mr. Bryan and said:

"I went to hear you to-day; I am dying now and want to shake your hand and say God bless you. If you possible can, Mr. Bryan, get me a drink of water."

Mr. Bryan went into the fast mail car, one end of which was burning, and came out with the drink of water, which he gave to the suffering passenger. He brought out cushions for others of the injured, and was everywhere present to minister to the wants of the sufferihg.

The engineer of the westbound train had received orders to meet the fast mail at Emporia, and was making up lost time. These two are the fastest trains in the Sante Fe system, and the westbound train must have been running at a speed of at least 40 miles an hour. The westbound express was going around a slight curve, and met the fast mail probably within 300 feet.

Of the seven or eight cars making up the Mexico and California express only the mail, baggage, express and smoking cars were destroyed. The coach following the smoker was badly splintered.

There were not more than a dozen passengers on the fast mail, all in one coach, and while none of them were seriously injured, their shaking up was terrible. Every seat in the coach was torn from the floor and many floor planks came up with the seats.

One man, John Sweeney, was thrown over three seats, and through a window, but escaped with only scratches and bruises. The other cars of the fast mail train, a baggage and an express, were totally wrecked.

It is stated that the wreck was caused by a miscarriage of oders from the trainmaster. At Emporia the eastbound fast mail train received orders to pass the California express at Lang, seven miles east. Another order was sent to Lang for the California express to take the siding there.

But this order was not delivered, and the westbound train passed on, the trainmen expecting to pass the fast mail at Emporia.

At midnight it becomes apparent that the earlier estimates of the number of dead were exaggerated, and it is now apparent that the number of dead will not exceed ten or eleven. During the excitement early in the evening it was reported that nearly all of the six postal clerks on the two trains were killed or missing. Two of the clerks were killed. All of the others, save one, are more or less seriously injured.

The mail clerks who are hurt are W. F. Jones, R. O. McGee and Claud Holliday. The latter may die, as both his legs are broken and he is otherwise badly hurt. Clerk E. C. Letcher escaped serious injury.

The dead were brought to Emporia. At midnight a special train left Emporia bearing 17 of the injured to Topeka where they will be cared for in the railroad hospital.

BOSTON, Sept. 9.—The following ticket for state officers was chosen by the prohibition convention Wednesday: Governor, Prof. J. Bascom, Williamstown; lieutenant governor, Willard O. Wylie, Beverly; secretary of state, Edwin Sawtelle, Brockton; treasurer, Robert C. Habererly, Hyde Park; auditor, Herbert M. Small, Templeton; attorney general, Wolcott Hamlin, Amherst.

Police Stopped the Fight.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 9.—Police interference put an end to the Tommy Ryan-Kid McCoy fight in the fifth round here Wednesday night, when Ryan was doing the majority of the work and chasing McCoy all over the ring, inflicting a series of wicked inside upper-cuts. Although by no means going, McCoy was having the worse of the contest.

Head Sawed Off.

MURPHYSBORO, Ill., Sept. 9.—James Stephenson, a saw mill employe, fell onto the circular saw and his head was severed from his body.

RECEIVING LIGHT.

Goldbug Writers Are Finding Out Something.

Presently, when some of the reckless editors who have charge of the gold organs realize that the continual fall in silver is likely to produce results that have heretofore played no part in their calculations, they may be willing to admit that the question is more important than even partisanship has made it.

The Boston Advertiser seems to be getting a glimpse of the real situation that now threatens to impose itself on the country should silver, as Mint Director Preston boastfully predicts—fall to 40 cents an ounce. Our contemporary notes that there is now about $3,600,000,000 of legal tender silver in circulation in the world, the billion value of which has decreased more than 50 per cent. since 1873, and says that if silver continues to decrease in value, this vast amount of money now current at its face value, must either take on the form of token money or circulate at its bullion value.

The Advertiser goes on to say that probably the great commercial nations of the world would be glad to see some bimetal by which silver would be restored to the value which it had three decades ago. The difficulty about this is that the men who do the financial thinking for the commercial nations of the world are the very men who are largely responsible for the gradual demonetization of silver. It was a great undertaking, and it has required a good deal of patient diplomacy and bold legislative fraud to bring it about. On this account, we think it is expecting too much to suppose that they will be willing to permit the commercial nations to retrace their steps with respect to silver.

It is true they have made billions of profits out of the undertaking, but there still remain some very rich pickings in this country, and we may be sure that the greed and rapacity which have engineered silver demonetization will not allow any of the proceeds to slip through their fingers.

The actual glee with which some of the more active gold men announce the further fall in silver can only be based on the knowledge that the depreciation of our silver money will prove a rich harvest for those who control the available gold. How long this further scheme of spoliation will be disposed depends entirely on the will of those who are to profit by it.

The Constitution is of the opinion that the people of this country will for many years rue the day when they permitted themselves to be deceived into defeating the democratic party last year. We do not mean to intimate that the democratic party is likely to be defeated in 1900, but we do mean to say that the element which controls the republican leaders will have ample opportunity to do irreparable damage to the financial interests of the people before a new congress can be assembled.

The senate is a barrier, but it is well to remember that, as the senate was controlled by the gold trust in 1893, it can be so controlled in 1898.

Meanwhile, there is but one thing for the democracy to do, and that is to use its forces to hold themselves in readiness to restore the government to the people in 1900.—Atlanta Constitution.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

——The republicans are expecting wheat, not the Dingley law, to pull them through in Ohio and Iowa this year.—Galveston News.

——The sugar trust has to divide $35,000,000, which represents the prosperity that has struck it since the Dingley subsidy was secured.—Kansas City Times.

——The Dingley differential is giving the sugar trust more money than any other combination of a dozen men is ever known to have received for political services in the history of the country.—N. Y. World.

——In regard to the little matter of increase of wages in protected industries, Mr. McKinley begs to ask the workingman if bread isn't going up? What do the workingmen want anyhow—the earth?—Albany Argus.

——The gold organs are trying to destroy "parity" with their mouths. Right in the midst of what they call "prosperity," they shout in a frenzied way that the silver dollar is only worth 40 cents. This would be sad, if true.—Atlanta Constitution.

——Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof, of course, but it is no harm to ask what we will do for prosperity next year if we don't have a foreign famine to help us out. Dingleyism isn't showing a disposition to be up and doing.—Binghamton (N. Y.) Leader.

——It is hardly fair to hold the republicans responsible for the famine in Europe and the consequent rise in wheat, still they seem to be willing to have it charged up to them, since they are bragging so much about the rise in wheat.—Buffalo Times.

——The republicans are trying to decide which of the three republican governors of democratic states have done the most harm to their party, Black, of New York; Tanner, of Illinois, or Bradley, of Kentucky. Each voter selects the candidate nearest home.—Louisville Post.

——All together, the outlook for the agriculturist is brightening with the lengthening days, and he ought to be the happiest citizen in the country today. And so he would be were it not for the knowledge that Dingleyism is going to increase the cost of living to him.—St. Louis Republic.

——There has been plenty of pretentious legislation for the farmer, but it assumes an ignorance on his part that cannot distinguish the real from the fictitious; a childish simplicity in him that finds satisfaction in the glittering bauble and lets shrewder heads take the substance. Nothing could more clearly indicate the contempt in which the farmer is held than does all this mass of legislation enacted in behalf of agriculture, and apparently accepted by it as satisfactory.—St. Paul Globe.

MYSTERIES OF THE TARIFF.

Republican Law a Fearful and Wonderful Thing.

An organ of protection which would enact a prohibitory tariff, and yet collect revenues therefrom sufficient to pay the pension account has discovered a new sensation in its precious Dingley bill. Section 22 is the puzzler and the dazzler this time. Secretary Gage has turned section 22 inside out, examined it to the point of neuralgia, and handed it along to that famous trick artist, Attorney-General McKenna, with the request that he exercise upon it all his skill at prestidigitation.

It is hoped that after the attorney-general has made a few passes in the air and waved his magic wand, an anxious world may know what section 22 means. At present it is several shades darker than the Eleusinian mysteries.

"In all previous laws the section corresponding to section 22 of the new law, after providing for the ten per cent. discriminating duty on goods imported in vessels not flying the United States flag, provided that 'this discriminating duty shall not apply to goods, wares, or merchandise which shall be imported in vessels not of the United States entitled at the time of such importation by treaty or act of congress to be entered in ports of the United States on the payment of the same duties as shall then be payable on goods, etc., imported in vessels of the United States.' The new law omits 'acts of congress' and substitutes 'convention,' so as to make it read not exempt by 'treaty or convention.'

"It is in pursuance of an act of congress (section 4,228) that presidents in the past have by proclamation exempted the vessels of many countries from this discriminating duty. The question now before the attorney-general is whether the omission of the word 'act of congress' does not repeal section 4,228. If it does, it will strike a tremendous blow at all foreign lines now exempt by presidential proclamation and confine the exemption strictly to the vessels of countries with which we have treaties granting such exemptions."

The list of these countries includes such first-class powers as Germany and Austria, but does not include France and England and the British colonies. One of these colonies, it will be remembered, is likely to be seriously affected by another Dingley mystery, namely, the clause which is supposed to discriminate against goods coming through Canada. The clause has raised a tremendous hullabaloo in the New England states, which have found that the competition of the Canadian Pacific with United States transcontinental lines is a good thing for them, and on this point also the assistance of McKenna, the great unraveler, has been invoked. The very framers of the tariff bill profess ignorance of the origin of the clause which is said to have been sneaked in by some few persons who had influence with the senate committee on finance.

'Tis a fearful and wonderful piece of legislation, to be sure, but after all there is nothing so remarkable about it as the profound logic of that same organ of protection, which proposes to have the foreigners pay our pensions through the instrumentality of a tariff. The American consumer of the foreigner's goods would like more light upon this abstruse subject.—Chicago Journal.

REMOVAL OF ONE FALSE ISSUE.

Publican Bimetallism Dodge Exposed.

Many silver republicans voted for McKinley because of the pledge in the platform in favor of international bimetallism. These voters now see that this pledge was simply a dodge to fool the people.

None of the republican leaders is desirous of establishing bimetallism, either through national or international action. All of these leaders knew that, so long as the settlement of international bimetallism rested in the hands of England, the policy of gold monometallism was safe, and for this reason they inserted the plank referred to, believing that it would catch votes and thus in reality make the gold monetary system all the more secure.

The republican press realizes that the international bimetallism dodge has been played for the last time. It has served the purpose for a quarter of a century and is now completely worn out and discredited. No longer will this bait be used to catch gudgeons, not because there is any change in the ethics of the gold clique, but because the leaders recognize that the trick has lost its attraction. Now the fight is to be made squarely on the issue of gold, and the people should hail this change of front as an omen of victory.

The sentiment in favor of bimetallism is growing stronger every day in the United States. But for bribery, intimidation and false promises on the part of the republicans the people would have won in the last presidential campaign. Now that the issue has been made plain, that falsehoods have been exposed; that international bimetallism has been shown in its true light, the people will flock to the support of that party which has their interests at heart, and will, by their united votes in 1898 and 1900, establish national bimetallism and thus restore the prosperity that was destroyed by the demonetization of silver.—Chicago Dispatch.

——Readers of democratic papers demand that their party press serve them fairly and honestly. The democratic press does not seek to mislead or deceive its readers on men or measures. It does not always cater to their prejudices, and join them in the folly of temporary aberrations from democratic standards and landmarks. It is honest with the people, and that is why, as a distinguished republican said a few days ago, that the readers of the democratic papers are more intelligent than the readers of republican journals, and that the democratic press is a power in the land.—Utica Observer.

——There does not seem to be any sufficient virtue left in the republican party to enable it to escape unassisted from the tangle of corruption and extravagance in which it has become involved. It is the mere plaything of self-helping schemers who use it for their own advantage and advancement.—Philadelphia Record.

"If it be true that after Sept. 28th, local option in Boone county is void under the new constitution, and saloons can be opened up at every cross roads, then it matters but little if water is scarce, is the way a prominent Lexington spike politician expressed himself. There was a trotting race pulled off during the Florence fair that the directors failed to have on the programme, and yet it deserved a place and should have been listed for a $40 premium at least. The entries were for 30 year olds and free for all horses without hobbles and able to carry arms. Only four entered, but they made it monstrous interesting. John R. W., a promising youngster of 52 led by 20 lengths in the first heat, and if he had not carried heavy weights, would have won by at least a quarter. Rocky Holton and Prince Norman, two 40 year olds, came in second, neck and neck, carrying heavy rocks and other weights. The fourth horse, a gelding of some 35 winters, made it interesting until the home stretch was reached, when a section of the track flew up and knocked him out.

Richard Kouns and Bessie West, a pretty young couple from the knobs of Middle Creek, visited friends at Utica, Ind., and while there concluded to get married. So they hied themselves off to Jeffersonville, and Squire Kegwin joined them for better or worse.

Why J. W. Kennedy did not allow his name to be balloted for as a candidate for the legislature in the late convention, is a puzzle to the kids, as well as a great many others. He went into the convention with more instructed votes than anyother candidate.

The Western Medical Society met in Cincinnati, one day last week, and Dr. E. L. Grant was an honored guest. His son, Horace, read a very interesting paper on Surgery, and after the society adjourned the guests repaired to the Palace Hotel, where they were banquetted by the physicians. After the saw-bones were all seated at the table, looking over the bill of fare, which were printed in French, a waiter approached the venerable Doctor and asked what he would have. "Salt and water," replied the old Doctor. He said he wanted to be sure and call for what they had.

NORTH BEND ASSOCIATION.

A Very Interesting Two Days' Meeting.—A Large Crowd In Attendance Each Day.

The North Bend Baptist Association was held with the Big Bone Church, last Wednesday and Thursday. A very large crowd attended each day, and the excessive heat and dust-laden atmosphere detracted considerably from what would otherwise have been a very pleasant occasion. At noon each day a bountiful dinner was served, each and every one being invited to partake. The hospitality of the occasion was not limited to the splendid dinners provided, but every house within a reasonable distance of the church was thrown open for the entertainment of visitors from a distance, and strangers and persons from other neighborhoods received especial attention, and were made to feel that they were entirely welcome, and so they were.

The Association organized by reelecting Rev. B. F. Swindler, Moderator, and D. E. Castleman, clerk.

The only departure from the routine business was the adoption of the following preamble and resolutions, offered by J. C. Revill in regard to the Whitsitt matter. The resolutions were those adopted by Long Run Association, which includes the city of Louisville. The third and fourth resolutions were added by Mr. Revill. There was but one vote against their adoption, and that person, Rev. J. A. Lee, is opposed to Dr. Whitsitt's teachings, but thought the association was going beyond its duty in adopting the resolutions. They are as follows:

Whereas, The Board of Trustees of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, at their recent session in Williugtou, took no definite and decided action in regard to the Whitsitt matter; and,

Whereas, We believe this inaction in a large measure due to the failure of the Baptist bodies to officially lay their wishes before the board; and,

Whereas, Dr. Whitsitt has pursued such a course as to alienate from him the great mass of the denomination; and

Whereas, It is the firm conviction of the association that so long as he continues President of the Seminary and Professor of Church History, the great mass of Southern Baptist will withhold from the institution their co-operation and support;

Resolved, First — That we hereby heartily indorse and approve the action of the General Association of Kentucky at its recent session in Georgetown in adopting a resolution requesting the Trustees of the Seminary from Kentucky to unge, insist upon and vote for the retirement of Dr. Whitsitt from the presidency of the Seminary and from the chair of Church History.

Second—That the clerk of this association be hereby instructed to forward a copy of these resolutions, duly signed and certified by himself and the Moderator, to the Hon. Joshua Levering, chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, with the request that they be laid before the Trustees at their next meeting.

Third—That in appointing representatives to attend the Southern Baptist Convention (1898) and the General Association of Kentucky (1898) brethren be appointed who are in sympathy with these resolutions, and that the said brethren be instructed to vote for any measure looking toward the accomplishment of the above named desires.

Fourth—That we unqualifiedly and wholly endorse the course pursued by Dr. T. T. Eaton and the "Western Recorder," and urge them to continue their crusade until our Seminary shall be managed by those who are in fullest sympathy with Baptists.

Besides the ministers who preach within the bounds of the association, the following were in attendance:

Revs. W. B. Crumpton, of Georgetown. He represented the Georgetown College, and is a bright, interesting gentleman; T. D. Ware and C. F. Dame, of Indiana; T. D. Jenkins, Moderator of the Concord Association, and P. E. Burroughs, of New Liberty; O. M. Huey, of Carrollton; G. W. Hill, of Williamstown, and Democratic nominee for Superintendent of Schools in Grant county; A. F. Bowling, of Cincinnati, formerly of Campbell county; M. D. Early, an able minister of Memphis; S. E. Davis and J. L. Presser, also Mrs. Mary Hollingsworth, matron of the Louisville Baptist Home.

NOTES.

A nice stone wall constitutes the front portion of the fence inclosing the church.

The Association will meet in Covington, with the Madison Avenue church, next year.

Under all the circumstances it was well that the session was for only two days this year.

Three ladies fainted Thursday afternoon, and were all receiving medical attention at the same time.

The business of the Association was transacted in the church, while the preaching was from a stand in the woods.

Uncle Ed Smith, in his 86th and Mr. Ben Allen, in his 85th year, were enjoying the occasion equally to any of the younger people.

Those who had charge of the arrangements for the association would not permit the sale of watermelons, ice-cream or lemonade on the grounds. They desired that the Association should not be a source of revenue to anyone.

The supply of drinking water was exhausted each day directly after dinner. On the afternoon of the first day the pond, which had been built at a spring near by from which it was proposed to furnish the drinking water, was destroyed by persons who took possession of it for watering their horses, and after that drinking water had to be hauled a mile or more.

A Nest of Goose Eggs.

The Burlington ball team ran up against the softest snap at Rising Sun, last Saturday, it ever struck. At the end of the seventh inning the score stood 17 to 0 in favor of Burlington, and all parties interested having enough of the very poor exhibition of ball tossing the game was called. The Rising Sun team can not play much ball, but they know how to treat visitors as they ought.

Officers Elected.

The North Kentucky Agricultural Association held its annual election of officers, last Wednesday afternoon, and the old board was reelected on the first ballot. Previous to the election the reports of the Secretary and Treasurer, for the year ending that day, were read to the meeting, and all present were pleased with the most excellent showing made by these reports, according to which the society is entirely out of debt, and has a nice little surplus on hand.

A NEW NOVEL.

David A. Piatt, who writes over the nom de plume of Kennith Lake, announces that his next Literary production will be a novel of some hundred pages, dealing with theatricals and a vein of occult mystery. That Mr. Piatt is a practical writer is evidenced by the fact that he has been closely identified with the Rumley Sisters' Concert Co., during the summer, procuring data for the theatrical portion of his novel, which will possibly appear during the coming year from the press of Laird & Lee, Chicago, to sell at 25 cents.

Odd-Fellows' Lodge Instituted.

An Odd Fellows Lodge was instituted, last Thursday night at McVille, by Deputy Grand Master, John S. Gaunt, of Carrollton. The new lodge is composed of 21 members, 15 of whom were initiated at the institution of the lodge. A large number of brethren were present from the several lodges in the county, while Covington, Lawrenceburg, Aurora, Rising Sun and Patriot, Ind., were represented. J. J. Huey is Noble Grand and Leonard Kite, Vice Grand of the new lodge. The members of the new lodge were well prepared to entertain the visitors and the institution of Bellevue Lodge will be long remembered as a most pleasant event in the history of Odd Fellowship in this county.

Barns Burnt.

The barn belonging to J. J. Custer, who lives near Walton, was destroyed by fire last Wednesday evening about 7:30 o'clock, together with 100 bbls. of corn, a good buggy, a wagon, new hay rake, new sled, several plows, and numerous other articles of small value. The building was insured in the Boone County Company for $65, while the loss is about $300. Mr. Custer has no idea how the fire originated.

The large barn belonging to J. J. Allphin, of the southern end of the county, was destroyed by fire, about noon, last Wednesday. There was very little in the barn. It is thought that the fire was caused by someone who went into the building and filled and lighted his pipe for a smoke, as fragments of tobacco were seen, after the fire, lying in the road near by. The barn was insured in the Boone County Company for three hundred dollars.

BURLINGTON, KY.

"STRANGE FISH."

BY J. FREDERIC THORNE.

"HELLO, Frank, you're just the fellow I want to see! Will you come for a sail?"

"Yes; certainly."

"All right. I will go down and get the Seagull ready."

Frank Haughton and his chum Walter Lanrence were skillful sailors, and had spent many an honr in Walter's little sloop Seagull, sailing around the bay, even, at times, going as far as "the Hook." It was a bright, beautiful morning, in the summer of 1775, that these two boys of Elizabethport, N. J., started upon their sail.

Walter hoisted the jib and fastened the halyard just as Frank pulled the anchor inboard; then, as the head of the boat swung around into the wind, both boys grasped the mainsail halyards and soon had the sail spread to the wind.

The sails bellied out, and, with Walter at the helm and Frank tending the sheets, the Seagull heeled over under the strong breeze and went skimming along, speedily emerging from Raritan bay and rounding the upper end of Staten Island. The boys then came about and pointed for the Narrows.

"Let's run down to the Hook."

"All right; we've got plenty of time, and this is a splendid breeze; 'twon't take us more than about two hours, going at this rate."

"We may see some British ships."

"We may, but I hardly think it is likely — none have been reported. George Trevers, whose father, you know, is one of the committee of safety, told me that his father said at dinner last night that nothing had been seen or heard of any British ships for some time."

"I'd like to see one, wouldn't you?"

"Oh, yes; unless they capture us!"

"Why should they do that?"

"They might try to find out something about the continentals from us."

"Well, they wouldn't learn anything from me. I'd let 'em cut off my head first."

"They would have a hard time making me tell anything."

The boys continued discussing what they would and would not do in the event of their being taken prisoners by the British. Meanwhile the Seagull, which the boys declared was the fastest boat in New York harbor, was making good use of her wings, and showing that she deserved their boast. They had passed through the Narrows, and were rapidly nearing Sandy Hook.

"I hear that George has got a new — Look there! A British ship!"

"Where?"

"Over there."

"Sure enough!"

"I wonder if she's a man-of-war?"

"I don't think so; she doesn't look like one to me."

"She's taking in sail."

"There goes her anchor."

"Let's run down close enough to see what she is."

"All right."

A turn of the tiller, and the nose of the Seagull was pointed in toward the Jersey shore, where a large, square-rigged ship, flying the easily recognizable "Union Jack" of England, was anchoring.

The boys fan up quite close, and soon saw that she was not a man-of-war. As they came near they were hailed by a sailor:

"Boat ahoy!"

"Ahoy!"

"Come up alongside."

"What do you think, Frank — shall we?"

"Yes, we might as well. I don't think they will touch us."

The boys accordingly sailed up near the ship, and dropped their mainsail.

This time an officer leaned over the side and asked;

"Where are you from?"

"Elizabethport, sir."

"Where is that?"

"In New Jersey."

"Near New York?"

"Yes, sir."

"Are those rebels whipped yet?"

"Not yet, sir."

"Gov. Sir Henry Clinton is in New York, is he not?"

"Yes, sir."

"Will you deliver a letter to him for me?"

There was a moment's hesitation upon the part of Walter, who was acting as spokesman, and then he answered:

"Yes, sir; I'll take it."

"Thank you, my boys. He will be very glad to get it, as he's fond of a good dinner. Here it is — catch it!"

The officer threw down a sealed letter, which Walter deftly caught.

"Now, don't lose it."

"We'll be very careful, sir."

The boys hoisted their sail again and put about, returning the officer's wave of the hand.

Neither spoke until they were quite some distance from the ship. Then Walter, taking the letter from his pocket, where he had placed it, turned it over and reread the superscription:

"To Gen. Sir Henry Clinton,
"Governor, etc., of New York
"In the American Colonies."

"Frank, I'll wager you anything that that is a provision ship for the British troops!"

"What makes you think so?"

"Didn't you hear that officer say that Gov. Clinton would be glad to get this, as he liked a good dinner?"

"Yes."

"Well, he wouldn't be likely to accept an invitation to dine on an ordinary ship, way down at the Hook, at that, would he?"

"No; I shouldn't think so."

"Of course not; and I tell you it is a provision ship."

"I shouldn't wonder but that you are right."

"Well, Gov. Clinton will have to wait some time before he eats anything from that ship! I'm going to give this letter to the committee of safety!"

"That's right! We're not tories, to be doing anything to help our country's enemies!"

"No, indeed, we're not!"

"Maybe the committee will send some men to capture the ship."

"My! but that would be great! They could do it. I didn't see any cannon, did you?"

"No."

"We want to get back home just as fast as we can and tell the committee!"

"Well, the Seagull can get there quicker than anything else I know of."

"Right you are! Pull in that mains'l-sheet; we can go several points closer to the wind."

Frank did as directed, and the little boat buried her scuppers in the water, and fairly flew along.

The boys were almost too excited to talk, and as soon as they dropped anchor again at their mooring place, they hurried ashore and started on a run for the town to inform the committee of safety of their discovery and the letter.

Almost the first man they met was Mr. Trevers.

"Oh, Mr. Trevers! there's a British provision ship down at the Hook!"

"What's that?"

"A British ship down by the Hook, and we think she's loaded with provisions for the British. The officer gave us a letter for Gov. Clinton, and asked us to take it to him. We took it, and here it is!"

"Slowly, slowly, boys. I can't understand you when you talk at such a pace. Did you say you had a letter that is addressed to Gov. Clinton, of New York?"

"Yes, sir — here it is!"

"How did you come to get it?"

"Frank and I took a sail down the Hook this morning, and saw the ship; and the officer gave it to us — the letter, I mean; and we think it's a provision ship, because he said Gov. Clinton would be glad to get it, as he liked a good dinner."

"It's not a war ship, anyway."

Mr. Trevers finally managed to get the boys to give a lucid account of their adventure, which they wound up with:

"And then we came for home as fast as the Seagull could go!"

"That's right, my boys. You are bright lads, and have done just right. This may be of importance to us. Go up to the hall and wait for me; I will notify the rest of the committee. I want them to hear your story."

Within the hour the committee of safety had assembled. The boys repeated their story, and then the letter which had been given them by the officer was read. It ran as follows:

"On Board of His Majesty's Transport
"Ship, the Deerhound.
Sandy Hook, July —, 1775.

"To Gen. Sir Henry Clinton, Commander of His Majesty's Troops in America, and Governor of New York:

"Sir — I have the honor to inform you that I have arrived in the harbor with a cargo of provisions for the troops under your command, and also some choice delicacies and wine for your own table.

"I am at anchor near Sandy Hook, and respectfully await your commands.

"I am, sir, most respectfully, your obedient and humble servant,

"GEOFFREY HENDERSON,
"Commander of the Deerhound."

The boys gazed proudly at each other to see their suspicions verified.

"Did she carry any cannon?"

"Not that we could see."

"Were there many men on board?"

"We only saw the sailors who were furling the sails, and the man and the officer who spoke to us. We think, sir, if you will pardon our boldness, that she could easily be captured."

"The boy is right."

"We will do it."

The boys were questioned closely upon all they had seen, and then the committee held a long consultation as to the plan to be pursued to capture the ship, thus adding to their own stores and crippling the enemy.

The British had found it necessary to send provisions across the sea to their troops in America, as, not only were supplies scarce in the colonies, but the patriots destroyed whatever they could not use themselves that was likely to fall into the enemy's hands. At this time food was at a premium with both the Americans and the British, and the provisions aboard the Deerhound would be as grateful an addition to the patriots' store, as it would be a severe loss to the British. So these patriots of Elizabethport were more than willing to take the risk in order to capture the supplies. To fight, men must eat, and, as they ate that they might fight, so they often fought that they might eat.

That afternoon four large boats put out from Elizabethport, each manned by two rowers, who, apparently, were fishermen. But a search under the hatches would have shown each boat to be loaded with men — patriots, who were all heavily armed with muskets, swords and pistols. Among them, in the leading boat, crouched Frank and Walter. They had been taken along upon their earnest solicitation, representing that they were needed to show where the British ship lay. But they determined earlier in the day to do more than act as pilots.

"I'm not going to be left out of the fighting if I can help it, are you?" said Walter.

"Not much; but I'm afraid they won't let us have any arms."

"We'll get some for ourselves, and not let them know it until we get there."

"Where can we get any?"

"I saw a lot of them when we were at the hall. They won't all be used. We can get some without their seeing us, I think."

"Come on."

The two boys were lazared by chance, as no one was at the hall when they reached there, nearly everyone in the town being down at the beach watching the preparations for the expedition. They secured a cutlass and pistol apiece, with ammunition. Then came the question how to conceal the weapons. It was easy enough with the pistols, but with the swords it was a much more difficult matter. Finally they concluded to put them inside their shirts and down the legs of their breeches. This made walking rather awkward, but the boys hoped to escape detection, and in the excitement of the preparations they did so. As they lay in the dark hatchway they fairly trembled with suppressed excitement, and in fact, the older members of the little band were not too self-possessed.

It was nearly dusk when a sailor on board the Deerhound sang out:

"Four boats on the sta'board bow, sir!"

"What are they?"

"Look like fishing craft, sir."

"Many men?"

"Two in each boat, sir."

"How are they headed?"

"This way, sir."

"Good! Hail them when they are near enough, and tell them to come alongside. I'd not mind a mess of fresh fish."

"Ay, ay, sir."

The four boats drew slowly nearer, and, upon being hailed by the sailor, they ranged along the side of the ship.

The officer before mentioned hailed the man at the bow-oar of the leading boat with:

"What have you there, my man?"

"Strange fish for you, sir."

"What's that?"

"Fresh fish, sir."

"Send some on board."

"I will that, sir — more than you'll like."

"What say you?"

"I'll send as many as you want, sir."

"All right; send them along."

The supposed fisherman then turned unnecessarily loud:

"Get out the fish!"

This was the agreed signal, and the words had no sooner left his lips than the hatches were burst open and the armed Americans swarmed up the sides of the ship.

Capt. Henderson had given a surprised shout at this catch of what were indeed "strange fish," and they were far more than he liked.

His shout and the sight of the climbing Americans aroused the crew of the Deerhound. They sprang for their arms, and, what was not an altogether pleasant surprise to the Americans, were joined by a company of soldiers, who came pouring up from below, guns in hand. This put the numbers in favor of the British, but the Americans hesitated not a moment.

Frank had sprung for and grasped the anchor-chain, up which he went, followed by Walter, their swords between their teeth, and the pistols stuck in their waistbands. As Frank leaped down from the bulwarks his foot caught, and he fell headlong on the deck. One of the soldiers sprang forward, and in another moment would have run him through with his bayonet, but Walter was right behind his chum. He had one leg over the side of the ship, when he saw the soldier spring at Frank. Walter whipped the pistol out, and, hardly waiting to aim, fired, and had the satisfaction of seeing the man fall when he was within a foot of Frank. Frank was on his feet again in a minute; he grasped his friend's hand for a second, without speaking, and then the two boys dashed into the fray. In a few minutes from the first shout, the deck of the ship was the scene of a hot and fierce fight.

The Americans were forward, led by Mr. Trevers, while the British sailors and soldiers were massed just abaft the mainmast. There was not much time for any formation, as the fight began when the first American put his foot on deck. It was shoot, cut, slash and stumble. Back and forth across the deck raged the conflict; at one time it seemed as though the Americans would be driven back to their boats, but they were rallied by the cry of: "Remember Lexington!"

From then on the British were driven slowly but surely back. The two boys played their parts manfully, more than once saving each other's life.

The conflict, though sharp, was short; there was a final rush on the part of the Americans, and then, less than half an hour from the time the first shot was fired, the Americans were in full possession of the ship, with the defeated British prisoners. They had been taken completely by surprise, and lost nearly 30 men, while the American loss was but four killed and half-a-dozen wounded. The captors manned the Deerhound and sailed her up to Elizabethport, where her cargo was landed amid the cheers of the whole town, who crowded the shore.

Frank and Walter were the heroes of the day, and the objects of envy of every other boy in town.

So Gov. Clinton was deprived of some good dinners by two boys, and it became a catch word in Elizabethport, when asked what one had, to reply: "Strange fish!" — Leslie's Popular Monthly.

"Didn't I hear that man address you as colonel?" said Mrs. Whiffett to Tired Traddles, as she gave him some cold victuals.

"Yes'm."

"You don't belong to the army?"

"Yes'm."

"Not to the United States regular army, surely?"

"No'm."

"It can't be that you belong to the Salvation Army?".

TIMELY SERMON.

Dr. Talmage Discourses on Comfort for the Discontented.

Happiness Is Not in the Pursuit of Wealth—Few Are Ever Satisfied With the Riches Gained—Life Is a Hard Struggle, But Righteousness Finds Plenty of Reward.

In his sermon Rev. Dr. Talmage discusses a subject vital to all, and never more timely than now, when the struggle for power, position, wealth and happiness is so absorbing. The text is, James iv., 14: "What is your life?"

If we leave to the evolutionists to guess where we came from, and to the theologians to prophesy where we are going to, we still have left for consideration the important fact that we are here. There may be some doubt where the river rises, and some doubt about where the river empties, but there can be no donbt about the fact that we are sailing on it. So I am not surprised that everybody asks the question, "Is life worth living?"

Solomon, in his unhappiest moments, says it is not. "Vanity," "vexation of spirit," "no good," are his estimate. The fact is that Solomon was at one time a polygamist, and that soured his disposition. One wife makes a man happy; more than one makes him wretched. But Solomon was converted from polygamy to monogamy, and the last words he ever wrote, as far as we can read them, were the words "mountains of spices." But Jeremiah says life is worth living. In a book supposed to be doleful, lugubrious, and sepulchral, and entitled "Lamentations," he plainly intimates that the blessing of merely living is so great and grand a blessing that, though a man have piled on him all misfortune and disasters, he has no right to complain. The ancient prophet cries in startling intonation to all lands and to all centuries, "wherefore doth a living man complain?"

A diversity of opinion in our time as well as in olden time. Here is a young man of light heart and blue eyes and sound digestion, and generous salary, and happily affianced, and on the way to become a partner in a commercial firm of which he is an important clerk. Ask him whether life is worth living. He will laugh in your face and say, "Yes, yes, yes!" Here is a man who has come to the forties. He is at the tiptop of the hill of life. Every step has been a stumble and a bruise. The people he trusted have turned out deserters, and the money he has honestly made he has been cheated out of. His nerves are out of tune. He has poor appetite, and the food he does eat does not assimilate. Forty miles climbing up the hill of life have been to him like climbing the Matterhorn, and there are 40 miles yet to go down, and descent is always more dangerous than ascent. Ask him whether life is worth living, and he will drawl out in shivering and lugubrious and appalling negative, "No, no, no!"

How are we to decide this matter righteously and intelligently? You will find the same man vascillating, oscillating in his opinion from dejection to exuberance, and if he be very mercurial in his temperament it will depend very much on which way the wind blows. If the wind blows from the northwest and you ask him he will say "Yes," and if it blow from the northeast and you ask him he will say "No." How are we then to get the question righteously answered? Suppose we call all nations together in a great convention on the eastern or western hemisphere and let all those who are in the affirmative say "Aye," and those who are in the negative say "No." While there would be hundreds of thousands who would answer in the affirmative, there would be more millions who would answer in the negative, and because of the greater number who have sorrow and misfortune and trouble the "Noes" would have it. The answer I shall give will be different from either, and yet it will commend itself to all who hear me this day as the right answer. If you ask me, "Is life worth living?" I answer, it all depends upon the kind of life you live.

In the first place, I remark that a life of mere money-getting is always a failure, because you will never get as much as you want. The poorest people in this country are the millionaires. There is not a scissors grinder in the streets of New York or Brooklyn who is not so anxious to make money as these men who have piled up fortunes year after year in storehouses, in government securities, in tenement houses, in whole city blocks. You ought to see them jump when they hear the fire bell ring. You ought to see them in their excitement when a bank explodes. You ought to see their agitation when there is proposed a reformation in the tariff. Their nerves tremble like harp strings, out no music in the vibration. They read the reports from Wall street in the morning with a concernment that threatens paralysis or apoplexy, or, more probably, they have a telegraph or telephone in their own house, so they can catch every breath of change in the money market. The disease of accumulation has eaten into them—eaten into their heart, into their lungs, into their spleen, into their liver, into their bones.

Chemists have sometimes analyzed the human body, and they say it is so much magnesia, so much lime, so much chlorate of potassium. If some Christian chemist would analyze one of these financial behemoths he would find he is made up of copper, and gold, and silver, and zinc, and lead, and coal, and iron. That is not a life worth living. There are too many earthquakes in it, too many agonies in it, too many perditions in it. They build their castles and they open their picture galleries, and they summon prima donnas, and they offer every inducement for happiness to come and live there, but happiness will not come. They send footmaned and postilioned equipage to bring her; she will not ride to their door. They send princely escort; she will not take the arm. They make their gateways triumphal arches; she will not ride under them. They set a golden throne before a golden plate; she turns away from the banquet. They call to her from upholstered balcony; she will not listen. Mark you, this is the failure of those who have had large accumulation.

And then you must take into consideration that the vast majority of those who make the dominant idea of life money-getting fall far short of affluence. It is estimated that only about two out of a hundred business men have anything worthy the name of success. A man who spends his life with the one dominant idea of financial accumulation spends a life not worth living.

So the idea of worldly approval. If that be dominant in a man's life he is miserable. Every four years the two most unfortunate men in this country are the two men nominated for the presidency. The reservoirs of abuse, and diatribe, and malediction gradually fill up, gallon above gallon, hogshead above hogshead, and about midsummer these two reservoirs will be brimming full, and a hose will be attached to each one, and it will play away on these nominees, and they will have to stand it and take the abuse, and the falsehood, and the caracature, and the anathema, and the caterwauling, and the filth, and they will be rolled in it, and rolled over and over in it until they are choked, and submerged, and strangulated, and at every sign of returning consciousness they will be barked at by all the hounds of political parties from ocean to ocean. And yet there are a hundred men to-day struggling for that privilege, and there are thousands of men who are helping and in the struggle. Now, that is not a life worth living. You can get slandered and abused cheaper than that! Take it on a smaller scale. Do not be so ambitious to have a whole reservoir rolled over on you.

But what you see in the matter of high political preferment you see in every community in the struggle for what is called social position. Tens of thousands of people trying to get into that realm, and they are under terrible tension. What is social position? It is a difficult thing to define, but we all know what it is. Good morals and intelligence are not necessary, but wealth, or a show of wealth, is absolutely indispensable. There are men to-day as notorious for their libertinism as the night is famous for its darkness who move in what is called high social position. There are hundreds of out-and-out rakes in American society whose names are mentioned among the distinguished guests at the great levees. They have annexed all the known vices, and are longing for other worlds of diabolism to conquer. Good morals are not necessary in many of the exalted circles of society.

Neither is intelligence necessary. You find in that realm men who would not know an adverb from an adjective if they met it a hundred times in a day, and who could not write a letter of acceptance or regrets without the aid of a secretary. They buy their libraries by the square yard, only anxious to have the binding Russian. Their ignorance is positively sublime, making English grammar almost disreputable. And yet the finest parlors open before them. Good morals and intelligence are not necessary, but wealth or a show of wealth is positively indispensable. It does not make any difference how you got your wealth, if you only got it.

The best way for you to get into social position is for you to buy a large amount on credit, then put your property in your wife's name, have a few preferred creditors, and then make an assignment. Then disappear from the community until the breeze is over, and come back and start in the same business. Do you not see how beautifully that will put out all the people who are in competition with you and trying to make an honest living? How quickly it will get you into high social position! What is the use of toiling 40 or 50 years of hard work when you can by two or three bright strokes make a great fortune? Ah! my friends, when you really lose your money how quickly they will let you drop, and the higher you get the harder you will drop.

There are thousands to-day in that realm who are anxious to keep in it. There are thousands in that realm who are nervous for fear they will fall out of it, and there are changes going on every year, and every month, and every hour which involve heart-breakings that are never reported. High social life is constantly in a flutter about the delicate question as to whom they shall let in and whom they shall push out, and the battle is going on—pier mirror against pier mirror, chandelier against chandelier, wine cellar against wine cellar, wardrobe against wardrobe, equipage against equipage. Uncertainty and insecurity dominant in that realm, wretchedness enthroned, torture at a premium, and a life not worth living.

A life of sin, a life of pride, a life of indulgence, a life of worldliness, a life devoted to the world, the flesh and the devil is a failure, a dead failure, an infinite failure. I care not how many presents you send to that cradle, or how many garlands you send to that grave, you need to put right under the name on the tombstone this inscription: "Better for that man if he had never been born."

But I shall show you a life that is worth living. A young man says: I am here. I am not responsible for my temperament; God gave me that. But here I am, in the evening of the 19th century, at 90 years of age. I am here, and I must take an account of stock. Here I have a body which is a divinely constructed engine. I must put it to the very best uses, and I must allow nothing to damage this rarest of machinery. Two feet, and they mean locomotion. Two eyes, and they mean capacity to pick out my own way. Two ears, and they are telephones of communication with the outside world, and they mean capacity to catch sweetest music and the voices of friendship—the very sweetest music.

A tongue, with almost infinity of articulation. Yes hands with which to welcome, or resist, or lift, or smite, or wave, or bless—hands to help myself and help others.

Here is a world which, after 6,000 years of battling with tempest and accident is still grander than any architect, human or angelic, could have drafted. I have two lamps to light me—a golden lamp set on the sapphire mantle of the day, a silver lamp set on the jet mantle of the night. Yes, I have that at 90 years of age which defies all inventory of valuables—a soul with capacity to choose or reject, to rejoice or to suffer, to love or to hate. Plato says it is immortal. Seneca says it is immortal. Confucius says it is immortal. An old book among the family relics—a book with leather cover almost worn out, and pages almost obliterated by oft perusal, joins the other books in saying I am immortal. I have 90 years for a lifetime, 60 years yet to live. I may not live an hour, but then I must lay out my plans intelligently and for a long life. Sixty years added to the 90 I have already lived, that will bring me up to 80. I must remember that these 80 years are only a brief preface to the five hundred thousand millions of quintillion of years which will be my chief residence and existence. Now I understand my opportunities and my responsibilities. If there is any being in the universe all wise and all beneficent who can help a man in such a juncture I want him. The old book found among the family relics tells me there is a God, and that for the sake of His Son, one Jesus, he will give help to a man. To Him I appeal. God help me. Here, I have 60 years yet to do for myself and to do for others. I must develop this body by all the industries, by all the gymnastics, by all the sunshine, by all the fresh air, by all good habits. And this soul I must have swept, and garnished, and illumined, and glorified by all that I can do for it. It shall be a Luxembourg of fine pictures. It shall be an orchestra of grand harmonies. It shall be a palace for God and righteousness to reign in. I wonder how many good deeds I can do in the next 60 years? I will try. God help me!

That young man enters life. He is buffeted, he is tried, he is perplexed. A grave opens on this side and a grave opens on that side. He falls, but he rises again. He gets into a hard battle, but he gets the victory. The main course of his life is in the right direction. He blesses everybody he comes in contact with. God forgives his mistakes, and makes everlasting record of his holy endeavors, and at the close of it God says to him: "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter into the joy of thy Lord." My brother, my sister, I do not care whether that man dies at 30, 40, 50, 60, 70 or 80 years of age; you can chisel right under his name on the tombstone these words: "His life was worth living."

Amid the hills of New Hampshire in olden times, there sits a mother. There are six children in the household—four boys and two girls. Small farm. Very rough, hard work to coax a living out of it. Mighty tug to make the two ends of the year meet. The boys go to school in winter and work the farm in summer. Mother is the chief presiding spirit. With her hands she knits all the stockings for the little feet and she is the mantua maker for the boys, and she is the milliner for the girls. There is only one musical instrument in the house—the spinning wheel. The food is very plain, but it is always well provided. The winters are very cold, but are kept out by the blankets she quilted. On Sunday, when she appears in the village church, her children around her, the minister looks down and is reminded of the Bible description of a good housewife—her children rise up and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praises her."

Some years go by, and the two oldest boys want a collegiate education, and the household economies are severed, and the calculations are closer, and until those two boys get their education there is a hard battle for bread. One of these boys enters the university, stands in a pulpit widely influential and preaches righteousness, judgment and temperance, and thousands during his ministery are blessed. The other lad who got the collegiate education goes into the law, and thence into legislative halls, and after awhile he commands listening senates as he makes a plea for the downtrodden and the outcast. One of the younger boys becomes a merchant; starting at the foot of the ladder, but climbing on up until his success and his philanthropies are recognized all over the land. The other son stays at home because he prefers farming life, and then he thinks he will be able to take care of father and mother when they get old.

Of the two daughters: When the war broke out one went through the hospitals of Pittsburg Landing and Fortress Monroe, cheering up the dying and the homesick, and taking the last message to kindred far away, so that every time Christ thought of her He said, as of old, "The same is my sister and mother." The other daughter has a bright home of her own, and in the afternoon—the forenoon having been devoted to her household—she goes forth to hunt up the sick and to encourage the discouraged, leaving smiles and benedictions all along the way.

But one day there start five telegrams from the village for these five absent ones, saying, "Come: mother is dangerously ill." But before they can be ready to start they receive another telegram, saying, "Come, mother is dead." The old neighbors gather in the farmhouse to do the last offices of respect. But as that farming son and the clergyman and the senator and the merchant and the two daughters stand by the casket of the dead mother taking the last look or lifting their little children to see once more the face of dear old grandma, I want to ask, that group around the casket one question: "Do you really think her life was worth living?" A life for God, a life for others, a life of unselfishness, a useful life, a Christian life is always worth living.

THE EVER-HELPFUL HEN.

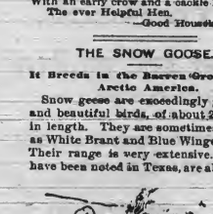
"Breathes there a man with soul so dead,
Who never to himself hath said,"
There's naught on earth that goes ahead
Of either meat, or fish, or bread,
And that so fully "fills the bill"
In various ways as does and will
The very ever-Helpful Hen?

And there's nothing quite "so good to eat."
That furnishes a rarer treat,
Or a richer feast, and more complete,
When savory, succulent and sweet,
And there's "but little appetite,"
There is no more enrapturing sight
Than a dish of good roast chicken?

Breathes there a woman in all the earth,
Who doesn't know the use and worth
Of the real value of dollars and cents,
Of the saving grace in family expense,
Of the joys and welcomes oft intense,
While patiently waiting in some suspense,
Egg fresh from the Helpful Hen?

Is there a housewife overwise,
Who fully appreciates her prize,
When she over, and over, and over tries
To make her pudding, and sometimes pies,
And gets into trouble up to her eyes
From failing to use what's about the size
Of the egg of the Helpful Hen?

Breathes there a child in our broad land,
Who hasn't even an open hand,
And mouth a little more open still
With a welcome stomach ready to fill,
And never a thought of "a bitter pill"
When eating with relish, wish and will,
Products of the Helpful Hen?



Breathes there anyone who never sings
In praise of Biddy and what she brings,
Alike to beggars, as well as to kings,
Who covers her brood with outstretched wings,
And folds them close to mouhsts
With an early crow and a cackle late
The ever Helpful Hen.

THE SNOW GOOSE.

It Breeds in the Barren Grounds of Arctic America.

Snow geese are exceedingly graceful and beautiful birds, of about 28 inches in length. They are sometimes known as White Brant and Blue Winged geese. Their range is very extensive. They have been noted in Texas, are abundant on the Columbia river and Audubon notes that he has seen them in every part of the United States which he has visited. The young geese are gray. At what period they become white is not definitely known. One that had been captured while young remained gray for six years, when in two months' time it grew to be a pure white. Every spring these birds migrate to the north, and it is a curious fact that the old, white birds go first, followed a week or two later by the young or gray ones. Dr. Richardson as authority for the statement that they breed in the barren grounds of Arctic America. The young are able to fly in August, and by the middle of September they have departed for the south. They mainly feed on rushes, insects and berries and in turn are very excellent eating themselves, but are rarely domesticated.—Orange Judd Farmer.

AMONG THE POULTRY.

Much discomfort and disquietness among the fowls at this season of the year is causing vermin.

A light Brahma hen's egg will weigh from 2¼ to 2½ ounces or about 1 pound and 12 ounces per dozen.

Milk is the best feather and bone producer that can be used on the farm, when ground bone is not easy to secure.

Hens running at large on the farm should be practically picking their own living now, but a feed of grain at night will pay.

No longer put off the job of cleaning up the hen house; clean from top to bottom; make a bonfire of the litter; whitewash the inside and give the fowls a chance to rest these hot nights. —Rural World.

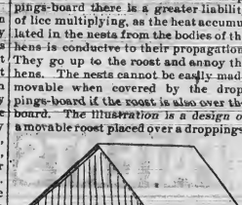
Cracked Wheat for Chicks.

Some cracked wheat should be given to chicks even before they are a week old. It is the best exercise their digestive organs can have. Whole wheat will be eaten when the chicks are ten days to two weeks old, and should always form a part of their ration. It is especially valuable to make them feather quickly, the grain containing just the kind of material necessary for feather production. Where wheat is largely grown the fowls find enough scattered grains about barns or stacks, so that young chicks hatched in midsummer will become full feathered before winter, and will make early spring layers.

Dipping Is a Good Practice.

The practice of dipping sheep is a very commendable one. In fact, it is considered absolutely necessary for the preservation of a flock. Many on the western range think that sheep there are free from all diseases, but the fact remains that while sheep may run a year or two and show no signs of being affected in any way, there may be a few sheep that are affected and consequently the whole flock must be dipped to reach the few as well as to prevent the growth of the disease until it affects the whole flock. —Dakota Field and Farm.

FEEDING PROBLEMS.



Balanced Rations Produce Better Results Than Corn Alone.

There are several horns to the dilemma that confronts the man who settles down to one way of doing things without so much as a thought about changing his plans and methods to suit changing conditions, says the Kansas Farmer. We may use the feeding problem as an illustration of the point in question. When corn is comparatively cheap, or as might be said during the last feeding season, absolutely below cost of production, the feeder does not feel justified in buying more concentrated feeds in any form whatever for making up a balanced ration. In one sense he is a loser by this neglect, but upon the whole no doubt he is on the safer side, all things considered. But to fix upon this as a rule of action for all seasons, would be to invite and meet sure defeat. The Kansas experiment station has had under consideration some important phases of the feding problem. Their operations in the feed yard have shown conclusively that steers fed a balanced ration have eaten more pounds of grain and more pounds of fodder than steers that were fed on cornmeal and corn fodder, and likewise more than steers fed on ear corn and corn fodder. These balanced ration steers made a gain of 141.8 pounds more during the season than the cornmeal fed steers, and 164.2 pounds more than the ear corn fed steers. Being in better condition when sold they brought a better price than did the other lots. But what would appear to be the strangest part of it all, is the fact that they made their gains at a less cost than did she other two lots. This lot was fed on cornmeal, oil meal and mill feed, closely approximating Wolff's feeding standards for fattening steers. The profit over that derived from feeding the other lots was quite small as we understand it, and for the ordinary feeder who has on his farm in a year like this, unlimited stores of corn, and who might have the corn fodder if he would, it would unquestionably be the better policy to feed simply corn and corn fodder. And this is exactly what feeders have been doing upon the whole. Yet the experiment is a valuable one in demonstrating how necessary it is that the feeder go about his business intelligently and thoughtfully if he expects to get the most possible out of it in the way of profits. Because he has found it good policy to be a little hap-hazard in using whatever was at hand for feeding in a year like this, it does not follow that he can do it again without coming out loser. When corn goes higher in price it will pay the feeder to return to more careful methods of feeding.

COMFORT FOR POULTRY.

How to Build a Movable Roost and Droppings Board.

When the nests are under the droppings-board there is a greater liability of lice multiplying, as the heat accumulated in the nests from the bodies of the hens is conducive to their propagation. They go up to the roost and annoy the hens. The nests cannot be easily made movable when covered by the droppings-board if the roost is also over the board. The illustration is a design of a movable roost placed over a droppingsboard, the board having legs of any height desired to keep it off the floor. This arrangement permits of placing the roost and board at any desired location in the house, and it and the nests (which should also be movable) can be taken outside and cleaned at any time. —Farm and Fireside.

Patent for Fattening Pigs.

The most ingenious scheme ever devised by the Yankee mind was that of a man who wished to claim as exclusively his a plan for fattening hogs by a wonderful method. The plan was this: Three pig pens were built, one having several lean scrub swine, known as "razor-backs," the central one being empty, and the third containing the blooded animal which it was desired to fatten. The scheme was to let the fine pig into the central yard and let him eat all he could out of the trough. When he had as much as he could hold, a hungry pig would be let in, and, of course, begin to eat. It being a pig's nature to eat as long as it saw another pig do so, the man reasoned that the full pig would immediately set to work again and take another meal. When the razor-back was full he was to be taken out and a third hungry pig brought in, when the same performance would be gone through again.—Philadelphia Times.

Right Size of Turkeys.

People, as a rule, do not want enough turkey at one time to lay a banquet spread, and consequently they pick for something small, or not exceeding medium in size. The hen turkeys always sell first, simply because they are more suited in size to the wants of the ordinary family. Then the smallest gobblers go, and lastly the pride of the flock—the biggest tom in the lot; and he usually goes at a discount of two or three cents a pound less than the lesser weights. A turkey that weighs 10 to 15 pounds dressed is plenty large enough. The people don't want a turkey as big as a hog, but do want a fat turkey.—Western Plowman.

It requires constant vigilance to keep the poultry premises free from vermin at this season of the year.

INFANT INCUBATORS.

A Successful Machine for Raising Weakly British Babies.

At the Victorian Era exposition at Earl's court recently a novel treatment of prematurely born and weakly infants was opened to private inspection. The situation of the model institution, which is of considerable dimensions, having a 60-foot frontage and a corresponding breadth of 25, is in the line of buildings in the Western gardens, opposite the old Welcome club. It is conveniently divided into three sections. In the central one are the handsome nickel-plated and plate glass incubators, in which the infants are placed, neatly wrapped in cotton wool and laid on little white coverlets. One wing of the building, which is built of brick, is arranged as a model nursery, while the other is used for the offices of the nurses and medical men in charge. The most important considerations in the vitality of premature infants are weight and temperature, and on these features depend entirely the chances of saving their lives. As a general fact, infants weighing less than two pounds three ounces die on the day of their birth. Of those under three pounds five ounces half are saved by the Altman apparatus. In the primitive methods of years ago the puny babies were wrapped in wadding or in a sheepskin with the wool adhering. In some countries they were put in jars of feathers or a cradle was drawn close to the hearth. M. Turnier's couveuses have done good service at the Paris Maternity hospital, and other apparatus has been usefully employed to a limited extent; but nothing so regular and uniform, so pure and wholesome in its operation, has heretofore been devised.

The new apparatus was explained to the audience of Prof. Coney, of Heidelberg—its paramount qualification being the automatic maintenance of a uniform temperature, the incubator is a metal and glass case under a cubic yard in capacity. The front portion is formed by two swinging doors. The child rests on the coverlet of a fine wire hammock suspended from the four corners. The air is supplied through a pipe four inches in diameter connected with an air box, and before entering it is made moist by passing through a small sheet of antiseptic absorbent wool. The air then passes through dry wool, which retains the soot and other impurities of the atmosphere. From this filter the air traverses another pipe leading to the center of the incubator. Over its orifice is placed a disk for uniformly distributing the air and above all is a three-foot chimney with a horizontal revolving fan, which compels the exhausted air to escape. The uniform heating of the case is produced by hot water drawn from an external boiler heated by paraffin, gas or electricity, the circulation being effected by a copper pipe running beneath the wire hammock. In the right hand wall is fixed a thermostat, connected to a light chain, which suspends an aluminum cone lid over the lamp of the boiler, and its expansions and contractions automatically control the temperature to the degree to which the apparatus is set. A thermometer suspended inside [illegible] the glass doors renders possible observations of the temperature of the interior, while a hygrometer similiarly indicates the moisture of the air within. — London Standard.

PROTECTING THE BIRDS.

Efforts to Stop the Slaughter of the Songsters.

It is the evident duty of all good citizens to do everything in their power to protect the song birds. In a neighborhood near Baltimore a mutual agreement has been made among the larger holders of property that strict orders shall be given to every employe to refrain from molesting birds of any kind, except the crows. This agreement, although only a year old, has wrought miracles, and in the spring, summer and autumn the trees in that neighborhood are full of the most exquisite music; and in the mornings there is a regular orchestral chorus, beginning with the break of day and chattering its merry course until sundown and after.

There are strict laws against the slaughter of song birds in many states, but they are indifferently enforced. There are two factors that must be dealt with—the small boy, who slays from mere wantonness, and the millinery fiend. The small boy can be controlled by the law. The millinery offenders must be reached by public sentiment. An officer of the New York museum of natural history—an institution which we advise all, who have the opportunity, to visit—recently said that in the course of two afternoons in New York he saw on the hats worn by women 173 wild birds, or parts of them, representing more than 40 different species.

What this means must be plain to the commonest understanding. It is that the birds which furnish us music, the birds which give life to our trees, the birds which were placed on earth to sing, the birds which we love, are simply sacrificed to the caprices of fashion. Public sentiment must sop this slaughter.—Leslie's Weekly.

A MOTHER'S EFFORT.

A Mother Sees Her Daughter in a Pitiful Condition, But Manages to Rescue Her.

From the New Era, Greensburg, Ind.

The St. Paul correspondent for the New Era recently had an item regarding the case of Mabel Stevens, who had just recovered from a serious illness of rheumatism and nervous trouble, and was able to be out for the first time in three months. The letter stated that it was a very bad case and her recovery was such a surprise to the neighbors that it created considerable gossip.

Being anxious to learn the absolute facts in the case, a special reporter was sent to have a talk with the girl and her parents. They were not at home, however, being some distance away. A message was sent to Mr. Stevens, asking him to write up a full history of the case, and a few days ago the following letter was received from Mrs. Stevens:

" ST. PAUL, IND., Jan. 20, 1897.

"Editors New Era, Greensburg, Ind.

"DEAR SIRS: Your kind letter received and I am glad to have the opportunity to tell you about the sickness and recovery of Mabel. We don't want any newspaper notoriety, but in a case like this where a few words of what I have to say may mean recovery for some child, I feel it my duty to tell you of her case.

"Two years ago this winter Mabel began complaining of pains in her limbs, principally in her knees and thighs. She was going to school, and had to walk about three quarters of a mile each day, going through all kinds of weather. She was thirteen years old and doting on her pale cheeks that I disliked to take her from school, but we had to do it.

"For several months she was confined to the house, and she grew pale and dwindled down to almost nothing. Her legs and arms were drawn up and her appearance was pitiful. Several doctors had attended her, but it seemed that none of them did her any good. They advised us to take her to the springs, but times were so hard we could not afford it, although we finally managed to get her to the Mudinaville baths. Here she grew suddenly weaker, and it seemed that she could not stand it, but she became better, and it seemed that she was being benefited, but she suddenly grew worse, and we had to bring her home.

"She lingered along, and last winter became worse again, and was afflicted with a nervous trouble almost like the St. Vitus' dance. For some time we thought she would die, and the physicians gave her up. When she was at her worst a neighbor came in with a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and wanted us to try them as they were advertised to be good for such cases, and her daughter had used them for nervousness with such good results that she thought they might help Mabel.

"We tried them. The first box helped her some, and after she had taken three boxes she was able to sit up in bed. When she had finished a half dozen boxes she was able to be out and about. She has taken about nine boxes altogether now, and she is as well as ever, and going to school every day, having started in again three weeks ago. Her cure was undoubtedly due to these pills."

(Signed) MRS. AMANDA STEVENS."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effect of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, all forms of weakness in either male or female. The pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price, 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50—(they are never sold in bulk or by the 100), by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

Gross Outrages

Upon the stomach and bowels are perpetrated by multitudes of injudicious people who, upon experiencing the annoyance of constipation in a slight degree, infiltrate their bowels with drenching evacuants, which enfeeble the intestinal membrane to a serious and sometimes, even, superinducing dysentery or piles. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the true succedaneum for these nostrums, since it is at once invigorating, gentle and effectual. It also banishes dyspepsia, malarial complaints, rheumatism and kidney troubles.

Real Rest and Comfort.

There is a powder to be shaken into the shoes called Allen's Foot-Ease, invented by Allen S. Olmsted, LeRoy, N. Y., which druggists and shoe dealers say is the best thing they have ever sold to cure swollen, burning and tender or aching feet. Some dealers claim that it makes tight or new shoes feel easy. It certainly will cure corns and bunions and relieve instantly sweating, hot or smarting feet. It costs only a quarter, and the inventor will send a sample free to any address.

Just as Wiggins was ready to leave home the other morning to go down to his office, his wife said to him:

"John, I wish you would stop at Blank & Co.'s department store and have them to send me up three yards of goods to match this sample."

"All right," said Wiggins, reaching for the sample. "How much will it cost?"

"I don't remember exactly," replied his wife. "It's 35 or 40 cents a yard."

"But I must know the exact cost," he persisted, "or I can't stop for it. I am in a rush this morning to get down to the office."

"But what difference does it make," asked Mrs. Wiggins, "about knowing the cost of the goods to the penny?"

"A whole heap of difference," snapped Wiggins. "It will save my losing a couple of hours waiting for my change."—Ohio State Journal.

Yes, children, gather around and we will study the first page of the new Prosperity primer. The present blessings of good times are all due to McKinley and his kind friend, Mr. Hanna. That you must understand in the first place. For instance: We have a beautiful crop of wheat. If Mr. Bryan had been elected the weather would have been very bad all spring and we would have no wheat at all and wou'd have to eat hay and oats like a dumb beast of the field. Would not that be sad? Coon skins are very plentiful, as you will notice. If Bryan had been elected last fall instead of that truly good man, McKinley, and his nice friend, Mr. Hanna, coon skins would now be very, very scarce and we would have to struggle through the hard winter without a single coon skin to our name. Then blessings on Mr. McKinley and his kind friend, Mr. Hanna! If that nasty thing, Bryan, had been elected eggs would undoubtedly sell at 25 cents a dozen, because only McKinley could restore confidence to the hens, and oh, dear! the cattle would all die and there would be a drought and small beer would sell at 10 cents a drink. It is shocking to think of. But thanks to Mr. McKinley and his best friend, Mr. Hanna, it is all different. It is even rumored that gold would not have been discovered in the Klondike if Bryan had been elected. Everything is just too lovely, isn't it? And now, children, you may tie on your rags and go and beg for cold victuals from back door to back door. Now that prosperity has returned you should have little trouble in getting something to eat at least once a day.—Paducah News.

The Campbell county taxpayers faint when they are told of the enormous increase in their taxes over those paid last year. The increase is attributed to the Jackson and Walling prosecution, but it is hard to make some believe that is responsible for the entire increase.

FROM GRANT COUNTY.

[Courier]

J. T. Chipman, of Stewartsville, who has been scouring the Kentucky mountains for the past two weeks for mountain sheep and cattle, came home last week with a few car loads of the mountain specimen and a keg of apple jack, a drink of which is guaranteed to cure all of the ills to which flesh is heir. Jack says that it is a very difficult matter to keep your sheep in the mountains when you buy them, that the mountaineers will steal them from you right under your nose and while you are watching them. They got away with 45 of his purchase after he had them in the pens ready for shipping, stealing some of them twice before giving up.

The Following Reports were Made to the North Bend Baptist Association at Its Recent Meeting.—They Are Interesting Reading.

REPORT ON STATE MISSIONS.

Your Committee rejoices in the prosperity of our State Missions, which, through the blessings of God, have escaped the lessening of income that has been persistently predicted and generally feared.

It is gratifying to know that for 16 years past, though no special appeal has been made to the churches for contributions to cancel the indebtedness of the State Board, yet the work has gone steadily on, and the indebtedness is gradually disappearing.

The report of the Board to the last meeting of the General Association, showed that the labors of our Missionaries and Colporters have been greatly blessed. Sermons preached by them, 4,628; average attendance at each service, 144; prayer meetings conducted by them, 1,852; average attendance, 56; professed conversions, 1,610, (which is an increase of 97 over the preceding year); baptisms, 726; additions by letter and relation, 615; total additions to mission churches during the year, 1,341. The amount raised during the year ending May 1st, 1897, for State Missions, was $5,128 55, (which is an increase over the previous year of $322 43). The amount raised for the Sunday School and Colportage work for the year ending May 1st, 1897, was $1,850 07, which shows a decrease of $74 10 in funds received, when compared with the previous year. Besides this there was raised for Foreign Missions, $12,252 38; for Home Missions, $9,165 81, and for District Missions, $6,831 50. These figures show an increase over the preceding year in the sum of $2,088 78, while there was a decrease in the amount raised for District Missions in the sum of $1,054 42.

When we consider the large amount of work done, and the good results accomplished with the limited means contributed to this Board, our churches should be encouraged to make larger investments in State Mission Work.

We are glad to note the rapid enlargement of the Mission Work in Eastern Kentucky. Bro. M. J. Hoover is working under this Board at Erlanger, Ky., with gratifying results.

We urge our churches to press this work as never before, because opportunities are now offered which may never be repeated.

Respectfully submitted, D. E. Castleman, Chairman.

REPORT ON FOREIGN MISSIONS.

We believe that our Mission Work on Foreign fields appeals more strongly than any other to our unselfishness. In a large measure our offerings and labors in this department are a test of our earnestness and guage the intensity of our love for the Master. We make no comparison to detract from any effort to further the work upon our Home fields, for, there ought to be, there is, in the true spirit, a unity in all missionary labors, since Christ came to His own, was for a light unto the Gentiles and for salvation to the ends of the earth—to this gracious truth we are witnesses and should gladly and obediently preach the gospel in all the world, and to every creature. We believe however there is a selfishness in our humanity that leads us to think more of and do more for those whose relation to us is nearer and whose interests in the world are more closely allied to our own, so that we do not place equal value upon the souls of men, and too many of the professed followers of Jesus among us are found, who confess their unbelief in Foreign Mission Work, and assert, without proper thought, and all too selfishly: "We have enough [illegible] at home." This would not be so were we filled with the spirit of Christ, for, as our eyes behold these fields full white unto harvest—millions sitting in darkness and the shadow of death, our deepest sympathy would go out to them, and we would be impelled to haste to their rescue for Jesus sake.

THE WORK.

The work of our Foreign Mission Board is confined to China, Japan, Africa, Italy, Brazil and Mexico. The Missionaries on these fields number 80, with native helpers, 110. Number of churches, 95, with a membership of 4,824. Last year these churches contributed $6,658, and the number of baptisms reported was 660. Surely this is evidence of a work of grace, and that God is blessing our efforts. The total receipts for our work for these fields, the past year, amounted to $125,681 99, which was not enough to maintain the work undertaken, and pay a debt of some $32,000 remaining at the close of the year 1896, and so left the Board still in debt with the year closing May, 1897, about $13,500. While it is pleasing to note that this debt was assumed at the convention by the different States, recent word from the Secretary of the Board, reports but little more than this pledged amount for the old debt, received altogether since the convention, and as the work in hand requires some $9,000 per month, it is easily seen that our work is falling behind, the Board loaded with debt. To carry it, money must be borrowed and interest paid that should go to support our missionaries on the field. We are led to ask, when will our churches learn to be regular and prompt in meeting their obligations? For our part, we ought to see to it that what we do in this great work, is ALL that we can do, and that it is done regularly and promptly. Brethren, let us pray more, and give more, for the Foreign Mission Work. Let us make the coming year memorable in our history for an unselfish spirit, and for missionary zeal. Let our women, who have done so much for our work, be encouraged, a missionary spirit fostered in our Sunday Schools and among our membership. God will surely bless and revive us, if we thus give ourselves to Him, and by our labors we will as well hasten the day of the coming of our Lord.

Respectfully submitted, A. Logan Vickers, Chairman.

REPORT OF THE EXECUTIVE BOARD.

In giving an account of our stewardship for the past year, we are glad to report an improved condition in some respects.

Our collections are a little larger this year than last. While nothing to boast of, any improvement is worthy of note.

We rejoice to report our work at Erlanger in an improved condition, the church having recently called and settled amongst them, the Rev. M. J. Hoover, who seems to be the right man for the place. To aid and encourage them in the work, we appropriated $25 for this year.

Our income has enabled us to help Ludlow a little during the year. This church has been called upon to change pastors, and also to change from every Sunday meeting to twice a month for the present. Bro. A. L. Vickers, who now has charge, thoroughly understands the situation and is very earnestly striving to build up the cause, and gradually pay off the debts.

We are glad to note that Florence church has called to her pastorate Bro. Geo. Green, who is a worthy and promising minister.

The work at Milldale, upon which the board has spent a little money and labor, has been pushed by the Third Church of Covington till now a handsome chapel, fully paid for, adorns an eligible site in the growing village.

We are sorry that we cannot report some Mission Work done. Our funds have been consumed mainly in meeting our former contracted obligations. In view of our inability to cultivate the field more fully, it is to be hoped that our churches and pastors will be busy building over against their own houses, and thus occupy the field.

Our debt is now $1,062 50, divided as follows: Due by O. M. Huey, $480 75; by Erlanger church, $328 22; by Association, $253 53. It is gradually being paid. Respt'y. submitted, B. F. Swindler for Ex. Bd.

STATE NEWS.

Samuel Clark, of Menifee county, drank cinnamon drops as a substitute for whisky and is dead.

H. C. Wells' tobacco barn and 300,000 pounds of tobacco were destroyed by fire in Nicholas county.

John Broyles, of Paducah, is suffering from blood poisoning, the result of a bite of a vicious mosquito.

Two children of Nat Cox, a Taylor county farmer, were bitten by rattlesnakes and died in a few minutes.

At Mt. Sterling, Beauregard Haywood was given a life sentence in the penitentiary for the murder of James Cochran.

The Henry county grand jury refused to indict Col. W. L. Crabb on the charges preferred against him by the Oldham Bank, and for which he was held to answer at his recent examining trial.

The Grayson county grand jury indicted the town of Leitchfield for permitting a nuisance, the nuisance consisting in suffering the old Kentucky custom of horse swapping to be carried on upon an important street.

The State will not be able on the 1st of October to pay to the School Fund the 40 per cent due, which amounts to about $300,000. The Treasurer and Superintendent of Public Instruction have figured the matter out, and announce that only about $360,000 will be available for this fund at that time, or less than 20 per cent. of the amount. This is caused by the failure of county Sheriffs to pay in the amounts collected for taxes. They are given by law until December 1 to finish paying the year's taxes, and a great many of them hold out till the last few days before settling.

The account of the lynching, at Versailles, Indiana, is given in full on an inside page.

The Cubans appear to have mended their holt, and have Weyler spending sleepless nights.

The Commercial is the only paper of note in Louisville that is advocating Todd's reelection as mayor.

CROP AND STOCK.

Within the past year Mr. H. T. Groom, of Lexington, has purchased and shipped West about 1,400 head of pedigreed and high grade short-horn cattle, the largest part of them going to the ranch managed by his father, Mr. B. B. Groom, at Panhandle, Texas.

At the Kansas City horse show Kentucky animals were dead in it. The first prize, $500, went to Red McDonald, exhibited by John T. Hughes, Lexington. The second money, $250, was awarded to Monte Cristo, jr., exhibited by J. T. Crenshaw, Scott Station, and the third prize, $150, was awarded to Matilda, exhibited by John B. Castleman, Louisville. The Ball Brothers, of Versailles, took premiums also.

Miss Sidney Ayers, of near Duckers' Station, Mercer county, is a lovely Kentucky girl, who had courage enough and business sense enough to take up her father's horse business where he left it off when he died nearly a year ago, says the Harrodsburg Democrat. A visitor at the farm where Beuzetta 2:06½ and Early Bird 2:10¼ were raised would find Miss Ayers at the track in the morning directing her colored trainer what colts to drive and how much work to give them as she watched their speed and condition with a critical eye.

Eighteen new cases of yellow fever reported at New Orleans, yesterday.

In the matter of lynchings Indiana leads the procession now. The mob spirit is enjoying a healthy growth in the north.

Gov. Mount, of Indiana, denounces the lynching at Versailles, but those who took part in it are sawing wood and saying nothing.

Sometimes Republicans go gunning for eachother, but Hunter and Bradley departed from that custom and went trapping for oneanother, last winter.

The rain was inclined to break up the silver camp meeting up in Ohio, last week, but the dromoters of the meeting were not to be out done by as small a matter as rain,

There are several persons connected with the Hunter bribery prosecution, who ought to be given a term in the penitentiary for the reckless manner in which they have been swearing.

Hunter & Co. are trying to make it appear that they were not acting in good faith in their efforts to purchase a block of votes for United States Senator, last winter—that they were only trying to trap Gov. Bradley, who was also doing a little trapping, it turns out.

There is a fearful stench surrounding the prison chair contract at Frankfort, and the Capital edited by a Republican Assistant Secretary of State, says: "In plain English, gentlemen of the Sinking Fund Commission, your reputations are at stake, and nothing but the frankest dealing will absolve you from the suspicion that naturally attaches to the prison affair. If you stand four to one against the Governor as you have in the past, then you must take the responsibility."

A mob of masked men took five prisoners out of the jail at Versailes, Ripley county, Indiana, one night last week, and hung them all on the same tree. The men were charged with burglary, which offense had been so repeatedly committed in that county that the citizens organized for the purpose of exterminating the gang, and the beginning made indicates success. The Circuit Court was in session, and two of the men had been indicted, but those who composed the mob were not willing to await the action of the law in meeting out justice.

In 1844 the remains of Daniel Boone were removed from Missouri, where he died, to the state cemetery at Frankfort, Ky. Now a state officer of Missouri who has visited the grave at Frankfort reports that it is shamefully neglected, the monument chipped away by relic hunters, etc., and Missourians are talking about demanding that the remains be returned to that state.

There was a man in the Yorkville court in New York recently charged with mendicancy, who admitted that he had practiced begging as an art for more than thirty years. He told Magistrate Wentworth that he "worked" a different avenue each day in the week, and that by 11 o'clock every morning he had collected enough to enable him to live in comparative comfort through the day.

According to Mr. Rabenstein, a distinguished statistician, the world will be full in 180 years. The total population of the earth at present is little less than one billion five hundred millions, and there is room on the earth for nearly six billions of people. By the year 2079 the sign "Standing Room Only" must be hung ont, for the earth will then have its six billion of inhabitants—all it can accommodate.

By the death of a cat the Temple quarter in Paris receives a legacy of 10,000 francs for its elementary schools. The cat's mistress, who died in 1892, left the money for the maintenance of her pet cat, with the reversion at its death to the district municipality if it would look after the cat. It speaks well for the honesty of the trustees that the cat, which is now dead at the age of 16 years, should have survived its mistress five years.

A new kind of match, which is supposed to be non-poisonons, is said to have been invented by a Frenchman. Potasinm permangate and amylacetate are among the ingredients, and tests at the Pasteur Lucifer Match manufactory have proven it a success. The matches are made without the slightest danger to factory hands. They ignite freely; there is no danger of explosion when stored, and the disagreeable odor of incifer matches is replaced by an agreeable one.

Six miles from Liverpool, Eng., a model village has been established by a manufacturing firm. For from four to six dollars a month a house is furnished, together with water and gas. The employers and employes govern the village, each department of the works electing six members to the village council. It costs a member but 24 cents a year to join a club or society—the firm contributing three times as much—where he has all the features of a modern club. An eight-hour day prevails.

Lord Charles Beresford, who is to be raised to the rank of rear admiral in the British navy, has been associated with the British bine jacket since he was 11 years of age. That was in 1859. The young nobleman was advanced rapidly. He became a lieutenant in 1868 and a commander in 1875. He served in a dozen or so of the big warships of the queen. It is not too much to say Lord Beresford is the most popular man in the navy. His personal bravery has challenged admiration from all hands.

It is rather hard to understand how such tiny drops can flatten down the enormons swells of an angry ocean, but the observations of a well-known English scientist explain it clearly. Each drop, he says, sends below the surface a certain quantity of water in the form of rings, which, with gradually decreasing velocity and increasing size, descend as much as 18 inches below the surface. Therefore, when rain is falling on the sea, there is as much motion immediately beneath the surface as above, only the drops are larger and their motion slower.

German immigration is decreasing, that conntry having sent out but 37,500 immigrants in 1895, and 83,000 in 1896, against an average of over 80,000 for each of the five years preceding 1895. During the same half decade Britain sent out 979,600, and Italy 751,300, the same countries sending out last year 161,930 and 187,909, showing an immense increase in Italian immigration. In proportion to population the Scandinavian immigration is largest, but France for five years ending with 1895 contributed but 27,000 of her people to other lands.

Travelers in Siberia tell of the wonderful flower that grows there, and which blooms only in Jannary, when the winter is at its height. The blossom has something of the characteristic of a "morning glory," lasting only a single day. The flower, when it opens, is star shaped, its petals of the same length as the leaves, and about half an inch in width. On the third day the extremities of the anthers, which are five in number, show minute glistening specks, veritable vegetable diamonds, about the size of a pin's head—these are the seed of the flower.

Few are aware that not only has Mr. Gladstone figured as a playwright, but that, also, he was to such an extent stagestruck in his youth that he actually consulted the famous actor, Macready, respecting his chances of success in the theatrical profession. The tragedian is reported to have accorded a favorable opinion, but, subsequently, Mr. Gladstone was induced to abandon his intentions in that direction by the advice of his friend, Lord Stanley, afterward 14th earl of Derby, so celebrated as prime minister and the most successful translator of the works of Horace.

NEW MINISTER

To Spain Officially Presented to the Queen Regent—Domestic Exports for August.

Washington, Sept. 16.—Domestic exports for August were the largest of any August of which the bureau of statistics of the treasnry department has a record. They were valued at $79,497,820, as against $66,689,981 in August 1896, an increase of $12,807,839; for the eight months ended August 31, 1897, they amounted to $629,454,273, an increa of $62,317,887 over last year.

The excess of exports of merchandise over imports for August last was $40,953,753 as against an excess of $19,133,516 in August, 1896, and during the past eight months $95,299,213 as compared with $109,698,493 during the corresponding months of 1896.

The value of imports during August amonnted to $39,876,640.

This is the smallest value since June, 1879, when they amounted to $38,389,451.

The imports of the month just passed were about equally divided between free and dutiable goods, the value of the former being $21,331,592, and of the latter, $18,045,048, an excess of free goods of about two and one-half millions of dollars. The increase of exports is made up mainly of breadstuffs, which is accounted for by the heavy foreign demand for American grains.

The amount of gold imported during August amounted to $4,374,175 and the exports to $1,983,588.

The silver imports during August amounted to $1,491,753 and the exports to $5,313,977.

Senator Thurston, of Nebraska, who is in the city, was asked as to the truth of the report that he would oppose the ratification of the Hawaiian annexation treaty when it shall come up in the senate next session. "Nothing," replied the senator, "could be farther from the truth. I am now, as I have been for years, an ardent annexationist, and I shall do all that I can to promote the approval of the treaty when it comes up. I can not imagine how the supposition got abroad that I would pursue a contrary conrse, nnless it grew ont of the fact that I have advocated the abrogation of the existing reciprocity treaty which admits Hawaiian sugar free. That position I took because of the fact that Nebraska is a beet sugar state and because our sugar comes into competition with the Hawaiian article. But, while this would continne to be the case with Hawaii a part of the United States, there would be so many advantages of other kinds growing out of annexation, that I would forego my opposition to free Hawaiian sugar in order to secnre those benefits."

The senator added that he thought the treaty would be taken up soon after the convening of congress.

Washington, Sept. 16.—Upon advices from United States Consul Pringle at Guatemala City to the effect that revolutionists had captured Ocas, a town on the west coast of Guatemala, the state department has called upon the navy department to send a warship there to watch over American interests and the Alert at Mare island has been ordered to the scene of trouble.

The state department has been at last officially informed that Mr. Woodford, the new United States [illegible] to Spain, has been officially presented. The news came in an official cablegram from Mr. Woodford himself Tuesday night.

Commissioner Powderly, of the immigration bureau, has directed the deportation of 16 contract laborers recently arrived at San Francisco from Japan by way of Victoria, B. C. These laborers arrived at Victoria on August 28 by the steamer Colnmbia.

Washington, Sept. 16.—Secretary Sherman said Wednesday, in response to a direct inquiry, that he would not go to Ohio until near the end of the month, and that he probably would not take any active part in the state campaign. "It is not customary," he remarked, "for the secretary of state to make political speeches."

UNTIL NEXT TERM.

The Suit Against the Southern Pacific Company in the Fiscal Court Continued—The Hunter Trial.

Frankfort, Ky., Sept. 16.—In the state fiscal court Wednesday the significant suit against the Southern Pacific Co. for failnre to make reports to the franchise tax board, was continned till the next term, on motion of the commonwealth because, it was explained, that the company has recently agreed to make all the reports required.

The circuit court Wednesday afternoon continued all other cases till later in the term and "cleared the docks" for the trial of the indictments against Dr. Hunter, et al, which will be called the first thing Thursday morning. An immense crowd of spectators, lawyers and witnesses will be on hand. Attorneys for the defense have confessed that many of their prominent witnesses were summoned as a precaution and told such men as Gov. Bradley, ex-Senator Blackburn and others that they need not be on hand unless sent for. The subpœnaing of these leaders at first was construed and so intimated by the defendants as an intention to attempt to prove that Hunter was himself the victim of a "conspiracy."

President Wilson Installed.

Lexington, Va., Sept. 16.—William L. Wilson, ex-postmaster general and formerly a distinguished member of the house of representatives, was installed in office as president of Washington and Lee Univerasity Wednesday.

Eight Miners Injured, Four Fatally.

Nanticoke, Pa., Sept. 16.—The cage in which ten men were being lowered into shaft No. 2, of the Alden Coal Co. Wednesday morning suddenly dropped to the bottom of the shaft. Eight of the men were severely injured and the injuries of four may prove fatal. The mine is 580 feet deep. The cage had started down the shaft, and the engineer losing control of the machinery, it dropped to the bottom at terrific speed. The steel cage itself was broken and twisted, and the men narrowly escaped instant death. The four most seriously injured have been removed to the Wilkesbarre hospital.

TEXAS FEVER.

It is Asserted That Infected Cattle Are Being Shipped Into Illinois

Contrary to the Federal Law in Regard to this Disease—The Reciprocity Treaty Between the United States and France—Other Interesting Information.

Washington, Sept. 17.—Secretary Wilson is informed that the board of live stock commissioners of Illinois probably will quarantine all cattle shipped to that state from Kentucky. There have been a number of outbreaks of Texas fever in Illinois recently, caused by cattle shipped in violation of the federal and state regulations from Texas, Arkansas and Tennessee. It is asserted that infected cattle are now being driven across the quarantine line, shipped to Louisville and re-billed to points in Illinois. The latter state has already quarantined against Arkansas and Tennessee. The federal law is not very specific in regard to this disease. It provides that the disease shall not be considered contagious or infectious as to cattle being transported by rail to market for slaughter when they are unloaded only to be fed, and watered in lots on the way. The officials of the department of agriculture think further legislation is necessary to define the powers of the department and they hope that the losses sustained in these and through these local quarantines will lead to a demand for adequate control by the general government. The authority of the department in regard to export cattles is clear and ample precantions are being taken to prevent the infection of these animals.

The French ambassador, M. Patenotre, was at the state department Thursday for the purpose of seeing Judge Day and proceeding with the preliminary negotiation on the reciprocity treaty between the United States and France. The assistant secretary was absent, however, and the ambassador did not wait. He left at noon for his summer home at Elberton, N. J.

It is expected as a result of the ambassador's call on the president Wednesday that the preliminary negotiations on the treaty will proceed, although no definite results are expected until the president comes back for the winter. Meanwhile the treasury department will prepare data bearing on the proposed reciprocity scheme.

Washington, Sept. 17.—United States Consul Wieslke at Managua, has been earnestly at work to secure from the Nicaraguan government a liberal concession for the construction of an inter-oceanic railway in that country which should place the capitol, Managua, in direct communication by rail with the Atlantic ports of Bluefields and Rama and reduce from 15 to 6 days the time required for communication with the United States. He has addressed himself on this subject to President Zelaya and to Gen. Espinoza, president of the congress, pointing out the many advantages to accrue to Nicaragua and the United States by the construction of this railway. He did not ask the concession for himself or his friends, but asked only that it be bestowed upon United States citizens. The correspondence on the subject, which has reached the state department, shows that both President Zelaya and Gen. Espinoza gave the project a hearty indorsement, and Mr. Wieslke has consequently secured a promise from Don Santiago Lajer, the representative in congress of the Atlantic coast district, that he will introduce a bill based upon the consul's ideas.

FOREIGN WOMEN

Invade the McAdoo and Audenried District and Compel the Miners to Cease Work.

Hazleton, Pa., Sept. 17.—Two hundred and fifty women made more trouble Thursday morning than the 10,000 striking miners have caused since last Friday's shooting.

They were the foreign women of the McAdoo and Audenried district. Armed with clubs, rolling pins, pokers and any weapon they could find, they invaded the washeries that have hitherto been working and forced the men, 300 in number, to quit work. As the men were husbands, sons or brothers of the women, in most instances, they met no resistance, although this is the first successful movement to get them out. In every other part of the region quiet prevailed. The strike may now be said to be general, as there is not a colliery of importance in operation.

Suspected Case of Yellow Fever at Kansas City.

Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 17.—What is possibly a case of yellow fever has developed here in the city hospital. Claude Anderson, a Negro boy, seven years old, was taken to the hospital Thursday from a Negro lodging house on East Twelfth street in the central part of the city. The boy came here from Mississippi six days ago. The lad was suffering from fever and his condition seemed so suspicious that a consultation of physicians was called but at a late hour no conclusion was reached.

Murder and Suicide.

Butte, Mont., Sept. 17.—Tom Lane, a miner, shot and killed Jim Shea, a shift boss at Mountain Iron mine, and then turned the weapon on himself and committed suicide. Lane had been discharged by Shea for drunkenness.

Storm in Northern Ohio.

Cleveland, O., Sept. 17.—The storm which swept over Northern Ohio Thursday afternoon approached a tornado in intensity. At Sandusky roofs were blown off, plate glass windows demolished and numerous trees blown down. A yacht in the harbor was wrecked. At Defiance considerable damage was done to buildings and crops, and the same report comes from Massillon. At Paulding several buildings on the county fair grounds were wrecked and panic ensued among the people. Thus far no loss of life is reported.

THE SITUATION

a New Orleans Assumes a More Serious Aspect—The Board of Health Announces the Appearance of Eight New Cases.

New Orleans, Sept. 18.—The fever situation in New Orleans Friday assumed a somewhat more serious aspect than at any time since Sunday when six of the 5h Claude cases were declared to be yellow fever. At six o'clock Friday evening the board of health officially announced the appearance of eight new cases, and of these one death, that of Zena Brauner. At the office of the board of health Friday's reports were considered somewhat surprising and disappointing.

The situation had so materially improved Thursday night that it was felt that pretty much the worst had come and that conditions would improve Thursday, however, was one of the hottest days of the month, and as yellow fever thrives in that character of weather, there seems to have been a rapid development of germs.

The physicians still feel, however, that there is much that is satisfactory in the situation, It is true that the new cases Friday represent the extreme upper, the extreme lower and the central portion of the city, but there has been no serious spread from original foci, and the hopeful opinion is still expressed that the disease may still be controlled and that there is no imminent danger of an epidemic.

Secretary Patton, of the board, said Friday evening: "The appearance of eight cases Friday is not necessarily alarming. I said three evenings ago that the prospects seemed to point to the development here of at least fifty cases as a result of constant interconrse we have been having with the infected town on the Gulf coast, and the fact that the promiscuous throng of some seven or eight hundred people had hastened into the city on the Monday evening following the declaration of the Ocean Springs sickness to be yellow fever. We have had now 28 cases and two deaths. The majority of the remaining cases are improving. It is still quite likely that there will appear numerous cases in New Orleans, but the situation is not distressing and the chances of a disastrous epidemic are remote."

Vicksburg, Miss., Sept. 18.—Dr. Purnell reported to the state board of health Friday night 15 new cases for the day, including one convalescent at Edwards, the worst report yet. Details will be late. Four trained nurses sent to Edwards by special train.

Ocean Springs, Miss., Sept. 18.—The situation here is not encouraging Friday night. Mr. Brantford, who was reported by Surgeon Murray Thursday, is in a very critical condition. Several of the dengue patients have taken a turn for the worse, although none of them are considered as critically ill. There were seven new cases of the prevailing fever reported Friday. Total number now sick 25.

At Scranton, Miss., there were no new cases Friday and the sick are reported as doing well.

At Augusta, Miss., Friday, Rev. T. S. Powell, of Brandon, died of yellow fever. No other case of fever here.

Working Full Time.

Scranton, Pa., Sept. 18.—The Delaware, Lackawanna & Western railroad has placed its several hundred shops men in this city on ten hours time, an increase of two hours a day over the time worked the last eight months. This is due to the necessity of maintaining and enlarging the rolling stock owing to greatly increased freight business upon the company's lines.

The Wage Scale Settled.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 18.—At a conference of chimney-glass workers and manufacturers in this city, the wage scale was settled by the manufacturers conceding last year's scale, after demanding a cut of ten per cent. The fires have been lighted at all the factories and work will be resumed at once. This is the last of the flint glass scales to be arranged for this season.

Three Fatally Injured.

Denver, Col., Sept. 18.—Three persons were fatally injured in a runaway in the southern part of the city. While Robert Creek, a ranchman living near the city with his wife, was out driving on Broadway his team ran away dashing into a buggy driven by H. W. Hildebrand, a printer. All three were thrown out and suffered fractures of the skull.

Italian Cabinet Crisis Ended.

London, Sept. 18.—A dispatch to the Standard from Rome says the Italian cabinet crisis has ended. Senor Giantureo, minister of education, has been appointed minister of justice in succession to the late Senor Costa; while Count Codronchri, now minister without portfolio, has been appointed minister of education to succeed Senor Giantureo.

Attempted Triple Murder.

New York, Sept. 18.—August Cook, an actor, was locked up here Friday night on the charge of attempting to kill his wife, baby and nurse. Mrs. Cook is suffering from severe scalp wounds, the nurse has her fingers slightly cut and the baby, although besmeared with blood, escaped unhurt. Jealousy was the cause.

President Cave Installed.

Lexington, Ky., Sept. 18.—Rev. R. Lin Cave, of Nashville, assumed the duties of president of Kentucky university Friday. He was tendered a reception Friday night by the faculty and students.

Five Children Burned to Death.

Little Rock, Ark., Sept. 18.—News of a terrible accident near the little town of Richmond, in Little River county has reached here. Mariah Billingsley, colored, living on Ben Lacy's place, went to church, leaving her five children, the oldest being 11 years of age, locked up in her house. About 10 o'clock the house caught fire and burned to the ground, the five children being burned to death in the flames. The bodies of the younger children were entirely consumed and only the charred bones of the older children could be found.

THE SHOOTING

Of Hogansville's Postmaster May Make Trouble for Denizens of That Town.

Two Prominent Citizens Will Be Arrested—The Old Postmaster Retains His Post Office for the White People—He Will Be Prosecuted by the Government.

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 20.—The recent shooting of the Negro postmaster at Hoganaville, threatens to entail no end of trouble for the people of that town. A post office inspector has finished a three-days investigation of the shooting and it was stated Sunday night that as a result of his work two of the most prominent business men in the town will be arrested this week on a charge of attempting to assassinate the postmaster. The people of the town are called upon to face a most uncomfortable state of affairs.

They have never yet patronized the Negro postmaster directly, the old postmaster, Hardaway, maintaining his old post office and sending for and obtaining in bulk the mail matter for all his white patrons. Their letters were mailed on the train. The ex-postmaster will be prosecnted for this and the letters can no longer be mailed on the train. When this action was announced two days ago, the citizens conceived the plan of having their mail sent to the next nearest post office and sending a carrier for it. They are now told that this would be in violation of the law which permits only the government to retain a post route. Feeling is high among both whites and blacks and further trouble is feared.

FACTORIES REOPEN.

Ending of the Coal Strike and Reduction in the Price of Fuel the Causes.

Akron, O., Sept. 19.—The settlement of the coal strike and the consequent reduction in the price of coal have enabled a large number of factories, which have been shut down for weeks, to once more reopen. First among them are the clay working industries, and every sewer pipe factory and pottery in this vicinity, giving employment to nearly 2,000 men who have been idle. The stock of finished product which is usually maintained by these concerns has been so depleted that the shops will be enabled to run on full time until next spring at least.

The miners in this vicinity are all working now, the men having gone back at the 56 cent rate, being the nine cent differential from the Pittsburgh scale.

EDWARD B. HOLDEN

Found Hanging From a Limb of a Tree—Was it Suicide?

Elmira, N. Y., Sept. 20.—The body of Edward B. Holden, a carpenter, was found hanging from the limb of a tree in the woods three and a half miles from this city. He hired a horse and wagon to go to Millport Saturday afternoon. The horse and wagon were found nearby. The wagon was covered with blood and Holden had two gashes on his right arm above the elbow and four on his wrist, evidently cut with a knife, but no knife could be found or money on his person, although his [illegible] he had $167 when he left home. The family surmise foul play. The authorities are of the opinion that Holden committed suicide. Holden was former vice commander of L. Hazard post, G. A. R., of this city.

The Coffee Creek Gold Fields.

San Francisco, Sept. 20.—George Madeira, the well-known mining expert who has been making a careful examination of the Coffee Creek district, in Trinity county, has sent a report to Secretary Durden, of the state mining bureau. He says that the value of the recent finds in that section have been greatly exaggerated. Gold can be panned out from the surface dirt only in small quantities, paying from three to twenty-five cents to a pan. Any strikes that may be made there in the future will accrue to the benefit only of those having plenty of capital with which to buy machinery and properly work claims.

Bank Failure.

Benton Harbor, Mich., Sept. 20.—The First national bank of this city did not open for business Saturday, and National Bank Examiner George R. Caidwell, of Detroit, is in charge. About $90,000 is due depositors, and it is generally believed that 75 per cent. will be about as much as will be realized. There is a crowd of anxious depositors about the door. They attribute the bank's embarrassment chiefly to bad loans.

Two Men Drowned at Chicago.

Chicago, Sept. 20.—Peter Praesen, a laborer, and Henry Blank, a fisherman, were drowned in the lake near the mouth of the Calumet river Sunday afternoon. The two men were gratifying a wish of Mrs. Praesen to ride on the lake when it was rough and the laborer's wife barely escaped. When the boat capsized she managed to grasp hold of it and hang on until rescued by the life saving crew, but the high sea swept the men away and they sank before help came.

Several Miners Arrested.

Hazleton, Pa., Sept. 20.—All was quiet in every mining district Saturday morning except at Latimer. A report reached Gen. Gobin at headquarters that a mob of miners had made a disturbance there and a company of the Third regiment had arrested several men carrying clubs.

Japanese Student at Rose Polytechnic.

Terre Haute, Ind., Sept. 20.—The school year of the Rose Polytechnic institute has begun with an increased attendance. The freshman class has 80 students, and all the other classes are full. Among the students of the year will be a young man from Japan, who comes for special preparation in civil engineering. A former graduate of Rose made a great reputation during the war with China and is now chief engineer of the railroads of the country, which are under government control. The new student at Rose comes through his recommendation.

A Question Answered.

The State Board of Nebraska recently sent circulars to the farmers of the state, asking the question: "Does farming pay?" The following letter reproduced from the September number of "The Corn Belt" would seem to answer the question pretty effectively:

Seward, Neb., Aug. 25, 1897.

I landed in Seward County Nov. 22, 1895, from Pennsylvania, overland with a team and wagon and about $600 in money. I now have 400 acres of well improved land within sight of the county seat, unincumbered, worth $20 per acre. I also have 30 head of horses, 35 head of thoroughbred Hereford cattle, and 100 head of thoroughbred Poland-China hogs, some 8 or 10 of them costing me $100 each. I also have city property to the amount of over $3,000, and some $3,000 or more of personal property, besides several thousand bushels of corn and grain. I have made it a point to feed all I raise. I do not believe I have sold over a thousand bushels of corn since I have lived in the state. While we have had a few short crops, we have never had a total failure. I am well pleased with farming in Nebraska, and would advise all my friends to cast their lot with us. Yours very truly,

PROPOSITION 2.

LIVER MEDICINE CERTIFICATES.

Write us 1st How long you have known, used or sold Dr. M. A. Simmons Liver Medicine. 2nd State Disease it cured. 3d Give names of those cured. 4th State the difference between its strength and action and the strength and action of Zeilin & Co.'s "Liver Regulator" and the Chattanooga Medicine Co.'s "Black Draught," both of which contain Woor, Bulbs of Roots and Stems of Herbs, and have sold at about 50 cents per package, and should not retail at over 10 cents if consumers are not long-nosed nor fools, while Dr. M. A. Simmons Liver Medicine, made from the purest and most carefully selected Drugs, retailed at 75 cents, with the Bulbs of the Roots and Stems of the Herbs by our secret process extracted and thrown away, cannot be sold at less than 25 cents. The reason of the difference is this:

On June 30th, 1893, the Supreme Court enjoined J. H. Zeilin & Co. from manufacturing and selling medicine under the name of "Dr. Simmons' Liver Medicine."

Zeilin's answer to our bill said, the medicine was designed as "cheap negro medicine for the nse of the Mississippi Valley." And Zeilin's manager testified in the case, and Zeilin's advertisements said "that the Liver Medicine they made is made by the same formula." What more conclusive evidence could there be that all their Liver Medicine is "cheap negro medicine?"

Again, the United States Court, in the Zeilin case at Knoxville, Tenn., enjoined the old proprietors of the article now called "Black Draught" from perpetrating fraud by using the words constituting our trade name, and "Black Draught" was put on the till after 1876; yet they falsely advertise that it was established in 1868, and fiend nor drug by allowing their customers to untruthfully represent it as the same as our genuine article, they giving color of truth to the deception by publishing the picture of a Dr. Simmons on their wrapper, thereby associating their article with ours, Dr. M. A. Simmons' Liver Medicine, which he established in 1860, and every package of which has borne the picture since 1868.

On receipt of letter enclosing a recently taken photograph we will mail you a $1.00 Package Liver Medicine (FREE).

FIVE BURGLARS

Were Taken From the Versailles Jail and Hanged From the Limb of a Tree.

Robberies and Burglaries Had Become Unendurable.—The Gang Was Betrayed by One of Its Own Members.—Four Hundred Masked Men Did the Job.

VERSAILLES, Ind., Sept. 16.—Incensed by the numerous depredations, and repeated burglaries and daylight robberies, the people of Ripley county, Ind., have taken the law into their own hands, and meted out to the perpetrators a punishment greater than provided by the law. Five men, who have long been a terror to the citizens of this county, met their death at the hands of an enraged populace and when the citizens of Versailles, the county seat, arose Wednesday, it was to find the bodies of five men dangling from as many limbs of an elm tree in the center of the public square.

Stout ropes, not over six feet in length, had served to send each to his eternity.

Versailles is a town of some eight hundred people. It is one of the oldest in the state, and although it is five miles from a railroad station and has no telegraphic communication with the outside world, as have more pretentious towns of the county, it is still the county seat. For four or five years, and even longer, the farmers of the county have been the victims of a lawless gang, who, apparently lacking in fear, have plied their vocation to the terror of the people, for they seemingly have had no visible means of earning a living. Farmers would come into town with a bunch of cattle or a load of farming products and next morning they would be found along the roadside suffering from a wound and minus the proceeds of their sale. Old farmers have been visited and both men and women have been subjected to all the tortures that a hardened mind could stand. Aged German women have been forced to stand upon a redhot stove in an effort to compel them to disclose the hiding place of some treasure in the house. These depredations have continued unceasingly. Arrests have been made but the guilty parties had covered up their lawlessness and it was seldom that conviction followed.

During the past week robberies had increased alarmingly. On last Saturday word was received by the sheriff that the store of Wooley Bros.' at Correct, Ind., ten miles from here, was to be entered. The information was given by one of the gang's confederates who had been under suspicion. Sheriff Henry Bushing arranged that his informant should accompany them, and securing five deputies they went to the place. Sheriff Bushing concealed himself in the cellar, stationing his deputies at a convenient distance outside.

Shortly after midnight the gang reached Wooley Brothers' store. Clifford Gordon and the sheriff's informant were designated to break into the building. Gordon himself effected an entrance, and just as he stepped inside the sheriff grabbed him. Both pulled pistols at the same time and began firing. Bert Andrews was with the robbers and he too joined in the fusilade while the deputies came to the assistance of the sheriff. Some 30 shots were fired, the sheriff was shot through the hand and Gordon was shot several times. Three pistol balls entered his body and he was also shot in the leg. Gordon and Andrews succeeded in escaping and came to Osgood, where they were arrested. The robbers had driven out to the place in a buggy belonging to Lyle Levi, and from information subsequently gathered it was learned that the robbery had been planned at the home of Wm. Jenkins. The two latter were arrested as accessories. All were taken to the jail at Versailles. Henry Schulter, aged 24 years, was put in the jail for robbing the barbershop at Osgood last week. Levi was 57 years of age, Gordon 28, Andrews 30 and Jenkings 27.

None of the citizens seem to deplore the action of the mob, but on the contrary, the hanging of three or four more members of the gang Wednesday night is talked of, and it may be done. No troops have been asked for and the citizens say they are not wanted.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 16.—Gov. Mount has sent the following to the sheriff of Ripley county:

"Wire me at once the particulars of lynching that has occurred in your county. I further direct that you proceed immediately with all the power you can command and to bring to justice all parties guilty of participating in the murder of the five men alleged to have been lynched. Such lawlessness is intolerable and all the power of the state, if necessary, will be vigorously employed for the arrest and punishment of all parties implicated.

(Signed) "JAMES A. MOUNT,
"Governor."

OSGOOD, Ind., Sept. 16.—It is now an assured fact that the mob which wreaked such terrible vengeance on the Versailles prisoners, was organized under military instruction, and was directed by veterans of the late war. It moved like a procession of regulars down upon Versailles after the two rockets were shot on the brow of the town hill, and was commanded in military style.

From a reliable source information came Wednesday night that the gigantic and terrible organization holds itself intact, and will never be thoroughly disbanded until about 20 or more of the gang of desperadoes have been disposed of. The plan outlined at present is to have as many as possible of the persons under the public ban remanded to jail on paltry charges.

When this is done the signal for the mob to advance will be given and the same dread punishment will be meted out to the rest that was given Wednesday morning to the ill-fated five whose bodies now await burial. Not less than 20 are spotted, and especially those who Wednesday publicly made threats of vengeance against the mob, are to be dealt with. The watchword is to rid Osgood and Ripley county of desperadoes at any cost.

THE LEADER

Of the Lynchers at Versailles, Ind., Is Known to Many Persons.

Gov. Mount's Representative at Versailles, and Will Make an Attempt to Bring the Lynchers to Justice—Bill Jenkin's Wife Threatbens Vengeance.

VERSAILLES, Ind., Sept. 17.—While the funeral carriages of the victims of Wednesday's lynching were wending their way to the cemetery, the majestic arm of the law, represented by Merrill Moore, of Indianapolis, assistant attorney general, was busy Thursday trying to bring the lynchers to justice.

Moore, who represents Gov. Mount, says he is here to make a full report to the governor of the circumstances of the case.

He has talked with the sheriff, deputies and others and can get nothing tangible. He created some excitement by calling on Maggie Steinmetz and quietly asking for information.

On the night of the lynching she saw the men with guns in front of the hotel kept by her father. Moore asked her to tell all she knew.

"I can't tell more," was the reply.

"I will have you before the grand jury," Moore said. But the girl was scared and would not talk further. She does not know any of the men, because all were masked.

Coroner Laswell finished his inquest Thursday afternoon. The verdict is death at the hands of an unknown mob, Gordon and Andrews by hanging, the others in jail by blows and shots.

The leader of the mob is known to nearly every citizen here, but not one man will mention his name in connection with the lynching. He is said to be either an official or ex-official of the county. He laid the groundwork for the mob's raid on Tuesday night, and it is said that no one will ever serve on a jury to convict him.

Said a man who is thought to have been in the mob:

"No one will be found to tell anything, and no jury can be found to convict any one. In fact, I don't think a jury could be found in the county without some one on it who was in the mob."

As the funerals passed to the cemetery Thursday afternoon a big rain and windstorm came up and kept the crowd down.

Vengeance is the cry of relatives and friends of the deceased. Already threats have been made. As yet there have been no threats against the mob, because no one in the mob is positively known to them. They swear vengeance on Guards Kenan, Black and Singer, saying that they should have made greater effort to keep the mob back. Friends of the deceased claim they shoved the white feather and made no effort to do their duty. They want revenge.

The people will protect the deputies and say if an attempt shall be made to injure them they will sweep off the face of the earth every remaining member of the band of cutthroats and robbers. Word was sent especially to Levi's friends Thursday to keep quiet or they would get into trouble.

Sheriff Busching will go before the grand jury as soon as he shall be able to be out and tell his version of the affair. Merrill Moore will say nothing as to the result of the investigation, but sent word to the governor that there is no need for troops.

There was considerable excitement at Osgood Thursday afternoon, when noised around that one of the gang, who escaped death on account of not being in jail, went to Judge New and gave him information where a lot of plunder of the mob was disposed of. Deputies were appointed to make search, as indicated by the man, who "squealed" at the request of officials. The details are kept quiet at present.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 17.—Gov. Mount is using all available means to get at the core of the lynching at Versailles. No response has yet been received to the governor's instructions sent to Sheriff Busching. In sending a representative to ascertain the true state of things he held the railroad trains until the assistant attorney general could make direct connection and get through without delay.

"I think the lax enforcement of the law has brought about this disgraceful act at the hands of lynchers in Ripley county," the governor said. "I understand that thieving and systematic robbery have been carried on there, and that the criminals have not been promptly brought to justice."

"While this failure to enforce law may have occurred, yet it is no justification for mob law. No matter what the pretext is, men who take the enforcement of law into their own hands and lynch men shall be punished in Indiana.

"It makes no difference what crime these outlaws have committed, they are entitled to an impartial trial before punishment. When men are denied the right to a fair trial at the hands of a competent court, we are in the midst of revolution and anarchy, and that condition shall not exist in Indiana.

"I told the assistant attorney general that the state would stand by him, and that he might use the power of the state to prevent further threatened violence?"

"Does this mean the militia?" was asked.

"Whatever power may be necessary," the governor replied.

Socialists Stampede a Meeting.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—The socialists stampeded the Hungarian meeting held Thursday night to protest against the Latimer meeting. At 9:10 an outbreak occurred and the chairman and other officials left the socialists in charge of the meeting.

Weyler's Plan of Campaign.

MADRID, Sept. 17.—The government has received a cablegram from Capt. Gen. Weyler in the course of which he says that his plan of campaign is to complete the pacification of the west end of the island of Cuba before commencing operations in the east.

OUTBREAK FEARED.

The Passions of the Citizens of Osgood and Versailles Fanned Into a Furious Flame.

OSGOOD, Ind., Sept. 18.—The volcano of public excitement in this county is on the eve of another terrible eruption. Mutterings of an impending storm are heard on every side, and what is most horrible in the threatening outlook is that women are involved in the danger of the lowering clouds of the portentous storm, and human life may again be submerged beneath the billows that are ready to break over the barriers established by law to protect person and property.

Early Friday morning it was apparent that the mysterious horsemen and signal rockets that flamed through the darkness of the preceding night were pregnant with some strange meaning. The determined efforts of the judge, prosecuting attorney and Sheriff Busching to ferret out the actors in the lynching caused considerable uneasiness. Scores of witnesses from every part of the county were subpoenaed before the grand jury.

Mrs. Jenkins, the widow and niece of two of the victims, appeared before the grand jury heartbroken over her terrible affliction and bewailing in piteous language and sobbing voice her double bereavement.

Warrants have been sworn out for the arrest of Mrs. Jenkins and her aunt, Mrs. Missouri Rittenhouse, charging them with receiving stolen goods. Friends of the women are forming, and swear they shall not be arrested, and the outlook is growing more serious.

The location of thousands of dollars' worth of secreted stolen goods has been discovered, and the officers are preparing for an astonishing coup. Greensburg, Shelbyville, North Vernon, Madison and other towns will be called upon to contribute their part in proving that an extensive and strong gang of thieves had been operating in and about all these places. Nine hundred dollars' worth of goods are known to be secreted in one place, and parties have made overtures to the officers for their surrender and the proof who stole them, and each day the evidence is accumulating against the guilty parties.

OSGOOD, Ind., Sept. 18.—Early Friday afternoon Sheriff Busching decided to search the houses of Jenkins and Rittenhouse for stolen chattels and a search warrant was sworn out and ten deputies sworn to execute them.

At Jenkins' house the only things found here were two packages of silverware, which were seized. The officers then marched to the home of the world-renowned Missouri Rittenhouse, farther up on the street and surrounded it. Missouri was also at Versailles, along with her son Sam and a door was forced open.

The officers lost no time, but went right to work. On every side were evidences of prosperity and abundance. After finding a narrow stairway between the dining and bed rooms, Officer Wills went upstairs. The sight that met him there caused his eyes to look like saucers. Ranged about the low room, which embraced all the space beneath the rafters, were 14 beds, enough to accommodate at least 30 men, as a few of them are single beds.

No evidence existed below stairs that at once struck the eye as suggestive of such a singular hostelry. Here it is believed that the clans have been gathering and conspiring for years. After going literally all through the house three rolls of new rag carpet, several bolts of cloth of ladies' dress goods and a new trunk, heavy and locked, were seized and taken to Versailles in a livery rig. Four new cooking stoves were also found.

THE WOMEN

Attacked the Working Miners With Sticks and Stones—Violence Was Avoided by the Men Promptly Going Out.

HAZLETON, Pa., Sept. 18.—Friday opened with commotion at the headquarters of the Third brigade and all in the various camps. At an early hour Friday morning a message reached Gen. Gobin that there was more trouble at Audenreid. The attack made by the women Thursday, which resulted in driving the miners at those collieries out, was repeated when another attempt to start up the collieries was made Friday. Over 100 men reported for work at the Monarch washery, when the band of Amazons, armed with sticks and stones, swooped down upon them. Some of their number again stationed themselves on top of a culm bank, ready to pelt the men with their weapons, but violence was avoided by the men promptly going out. At the Star washery about 100 of the 125 men returned to work, but the women are determined to drive them out and they are not expecting to work more than a few hours. No attempt was made to resume at the Carson washery. As soon as the reports of this disturbance reached Gen. Gobin he sent a squad of the governor's troops to the scene. When the cavalry reached there, all attempts at violence had ceased, but the women followed the troops about the street, hooting and cursing them. A storekeeper at Audenried declared Friday morning that his entire stock of revolvers had been sold during the past few days. Reports from Cranberry confirmed the news that the powder house of Edward Tuenbach had been broken into early Friday morning by strikers, who had stolen a quantity of dynamite.

Bad Harvest in Russia.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 18.—The bad harvest affects 17 Russian provinces and it is feared it will also be felt in 1898, as the drought has prevented sowing winter wheat in a large area. The immense reserve stocks will prevent a famine, but the peasants are ruined for several years.

West Virginian Dies of Yellow Fever.

MOBILE, Ala., Sept. 18.—J. L. Taylor, aged 32, who came here four weeks ago from Wayne county, West Virginia, and was taken sick last Sunday, died Friday of yellow fever. His death creates intense excitement here.

TRACKS TORN UP

And a Trestle Burned on the Alabama and Vicksburg Railroad.

A Violation of the Quarantine Rules of Running Trains Through Jackson, Miss., the Cause—The Governor Calls Out the Militia to Protect Property.

JACKSON, Miss., Sept. 20.—It was learned Saturday morning that in addition to tearing up the tracks of the Alabama & Vicksburg railroad a short distance west of the city, reported at midnight Friday, the crowd also burned a trestle on the same road a few miles west of the city.

Meridian having consented to allow trains to pass through that city, the Alabama and Vicksburg regular train passed here at 6 p. m., Friday, going to Meridian. The speed of the train was not greater than four miles an hour, whereas the road had been ordered to run their trains through here at a 20 mile rate. Not only was this order willfully disregarded by the road, but the train actually stopped in the heart of the city. Indignation is at fever heat here, and the people say that if necessary to compel observance of their reasonable quarantine regulations, they will burn every bridge between here and Vicksburg.

The city authorities say that if yellow fever is introduced into our city it will be by the unlawful disregard of their rules, as in this case.

Gov. McLaurin has ordered out the Capital Light guards of this city, in order to protect the property of the railroads in this county.

The governor of a sovereign state denied admission to his capital city. This is the unique state of affairs that existed in Mississippi Saturday morning as a result of the troublesome times in which the people now find themselves.

Gov. McLaurin at the outbreak of the yellow fever wave was in the interior of Simpson county, from which place he proceeded to his old home in Brandon. Being anxious to return to the state capitol, he made application to the city board of health for permission to enter the city, which was promptly declined by that board. There is a general quarantine rule against persons entering the city and these public officials had no respect of persons enforcing the rule.

The number of men composing the capital guards company in ordinary times is about 36, but it is doubtful whether more than ten or twelve men can be assembled at this time.

EDWARDS, Miss., Sept. 20.—Twenty-one new cases of yellow fever since last report.

The rapid spread of the disease is remarkable. Five of the total are in the country. The disease is now well distributed throughout the town. Several new cases were reported, but not yet passed upon by the physicians, which will doubtless swell the total to 50. The general condition of all the worst cases is improved and none are now considered dangerous.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 20.—The local fever situation has undergone little change since Saturday. At 6 o'clock Sunday night the record of the board of health office showed a total of six new cases and one death. The official bulletin shows two deaths, that of the woman Santa Graffeta, who died in the hospital Saturday night, not having been included in the official bulletin.

JACKSON, Miss., Sept. 20.—Dr. H. D. Geddings, of the Marine hospital service, arrived here Sunday on his way to Edwards to establish a camp of refuge. He has with him 300 tents and mattresses.

Dr. J. F. Hunter, secretary of the state board of health, arrived here Monday morning from Vicksburg to confer with Dr. Geddings with a view to establishing a base of supplies and taking stringent measures to stamp out the yellow scourge.

MOBILE, Ala., Sept. 20.—The official bulletin for the last twenty-four hours ending at noon Sunday showed 11 new cases. One death, that of Frank Donaldson. He was 16 years of age and a paper carrier. Total cases to date, 29; total deaths, 3.

MASS MEETING

Of Laboring Men Held at Scranton, Pa.—The Lattimer Killing Denounced.

SCRANTON, Pa., Sept. 20.—Nearly 5,000 laboring men, the majority miners and mine laborers, attended a mass meeting at Nay Aug park Sunday, called by the Central Labor union to protest against the Lattimer killing. The gathering was quiet and orderly. Among the eight speakers were Hugh O'Donnell, the Homestead labor leader and George Chance, of Philadelphia, of the United Labor league. They denounced the Lattimer shooting as wanton murder, a brutal outrage and massacre, but suggested law as the present remedy and organization as the safeguard of the future. The company store system, the importation of cheap foreign labor and the encouragement of race prejudices were given as the main causes of the recent outbreak. Resolutions of considerable length, blaming Sheriff Martin and his posse and criticising Gen. Gobin for alleged unwarranted interference with civil law, were adopted.

A Distillery Fails.

CYNTHIANA, Ky., Sept. 20.—Jake Wolford, secretary of the Redmon distillery, has assigned. Assets, $49,000; liabilities, $39,000.

The Statement is Premature.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—The Times Sunday morning says: The statement of the American press that the state department at Washington and the British ambassador have received instructions to reopen negotiations for a general treaty of arbitration is at least premature.

No Yellow Fever at Atlanta.

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 20.—The fear which was at first felt in Atlanta that there might be cases of yellow fever develop among the refugees has almost entirely disappeared. Fewer refugees than usual came in Sunday.

IN A STATE OF CONFUSION.

The Dingley Law Proves to Be a Deficit Producer.

The Boston Advertiser by its comments on the Dingley law illustrates the confusion of mind that protectionists, who used to howl about the deficit until they were black in the face, are in now that the Dingley law is a greater deficit producer than any other bill that was ever framed. It confesses to disappointment, but it must be remembered, it says, that "the new tariff is not like the old one, the work of a party pledged to lay import taxes 'for revenue only.'" The "one great end of a well-constructed American tariff must always be the protection of American industry," and if the Dingley act "should ultimately prove to be inadequate, to the extent of a few millions a year, for the raising of revenue, it would still stand before the country in favorable comparison with its predecessor." Finally the Advertiser expects in the future to get both revenue and protection from the Dingley bill, when in "the better times the people will buy enough of such foreign goods as are not made at home to bring up the receipts from imports to high-water mark."

Just how this expectation will be realized, when the protection policy is to tax only goods produced here and admit goods not made here free of duty, isn't quite clear.

But to revert to the pretense that the Dingley bill was not designed to raise revenue. Such a claim is an insult to President McKinley, who called congress together in extra session. It is a refutation of the national republican platform, which declares: "We demand such an equitable tariff on imports which comes into competition with American products as will not only furnish adequate revenue for the necessary expenses of the government, but will protect American labor from the degradation to the wage level of other lands."

In his inaugural address President McKinley said: "It is the paramount duty of congress to stop deficiencies by the restoration of that protective legislation which has always been the firmest prop of the treasury."

It won't do for defenders of Dingleyism to claim now that the revenue matter is of secondary importance. It won't do for republicans who were appalled at an average deficit of $3,000,000 a month under the Wilson law to make light of a deficit of $14,000,000 the very first month of the operation of a new law designed by order of the president to stop deficiencies. It won't do for defenders of Dingleyism to expect to raise revenue upon such foreign goods as are not made at home, because the doctrine of protection as laid down in the republican platform calls for the free admission of such goods.

We refer to these troubles of our republican friends not for the purpose of embarrassing them, but to point out to them the fact that protection conflicts with revenue raising. They didn't settle the tariff question. On the contrary, it must be thoroughly overhauled in a very short time and a new tariff act be made, for revenue only, and upon lines distinctively different from those upon which Mr. Dingley proceeded.—Utica Observer.

NO CHANGE IN RATIO.

Sixteen to One Will Remain the Demand.

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat does not foresee an early dropping of the sixteen to one ratio by the advocates of free silver coinage. "The moment they abandon this anchorage," it says, "they are at sea without a compass or rudder. Some would want to adopt the twenty to one ratio which Senator Vest proposed in 1893, others would advocate the thirty-two to one which Japan accepted, still others would suggest a drop to forty to one, which is approximately the market proportion, while others yet would variously want to tie their party to everything between these two extremes."

It is not unlikely that the adoption of an arbitrary ratio cost the silver cause no little popular support last year, there being many persons who believe that a coinage ratio is to a great extent a creature of circumstances, determined by conditions. Still, there were good reasons why the ratio of sixteen to one should have been the choice of the silver men: It was the existing legal ratio, and its adoption would render recoinage unnecessary in the event of popular acceptance of the policy of silver remonetization. It is a very convenient ratio, considered from the point of view of the sizes of the silver and gold coins, and moreover, according to the theory of the silver men (a theory not without plausibility) the adoption of the free coinage policy would have quickly caused the commercial ratio to come down nearly if not quite to the legal ratio. If this theory is correct, it does not matter whether the commercial ratio is thirty to one or fifty to one.

There is no reason, therefore, why the silver men should abandon the sixteen to one ratio, although they would doubtless add to their following if they did not make an arbitrary ratio an article of political faith. It is doubtless true, moreover, as the Globe-Democrat says, that the dropping of this ratio would lead to confusion in the silver ranks, and it is to be presumed, therefore, that the silver slogan will be "sixteen to one" until the end.—Binghamton (N. Y.) Leader.

——The republican goldite organs that have an over-supply of Hanna prosperity, might pass a portion of it over to the suffering and starving miners. In other lines of labor there are men seeking work who would be glad to come in for a share.—Illinois State Register.

——Mr. Hanna has never been more impressive and eloquent than in his present passionate declarations of how he loves the laboring man.—Chicago Chronicle.

PANICS AND PARTIES.

Tom Reed Puts the Republicans in a Bad Light.

Says Tom Reed, statesman and economic philosopher: "After a great smash, like that of 1893, or that of 1873, there is nothing to do but wait and let the business world settle itself."

So it seems we have the admission of one of the great lights of the republican party that there was a "great smash" in 1873, and that it was of the same kind as the "great smash" of 1893, and that in each case there was nothing to do but wait and let the business world settle itself.

What will the organs and sponters of the republican party do with this admission? It has been their practice to lay the great smash of 1893 all to democratic success and to democratic tariff which did not exist until more than a year after the smash. And in order to avoid troublesome questions arising ont of their assignment of a cause for the smash they have also made it their practice studiously to ignore the smash of 1873.

But now stands forth one of their chief prophets and frankly admits that there was a great smash in 1873. They can no longer ignore or deny the fact without repudiating one of their infallible leaders. How, then, are they going to account for the result?

The democratic party was not in power in the summer of 1873 when the panic occurred. A republican president had been elected by an overwhelming majority less than a year before and still had three and a half years to serve. There was a large republican majority in both honses of the congress-elect. Never did the democratic party seem farther from power, never did its prospects seem darker. Nothing conld be more absurd, therefore, than to charge the panic of 1873 up against the democratic party.

But according to the assumption of the republican organs some party must have caused the "great smash." Of course, it was the republican party, if any. Now, we were living under republican legislation in 1893, as we were in 1873, not a line of the currency laws or the tariff laws which the republican party had given the country had been repealed or changed in the least particular.

It is then a necessary conclusion, from which the republican organs can in no way escape, that if republican policy and administration produced the great smash of 1873 they must also have prodnced the great smash of 1893. Mr. Reed has put all his party organs in a position where they must admit, unless they throw all consistency to the winds, either that their party caused both the great smashes or that these events occur no matter what party may be in power. Mr. Reed himself is evidently disposed to admit the latter.—Chicago Chronicle.

A DISGRACEFUL APPOINTMENT.

An Infamous Act of President McKinley's.

President McKinley appointed Henry Demas naval officer of the customs at New Orleans, a position of high responsibility and trust in the gift of the United States.

The president made the appointment with full knowledge that Demas was a perjurer, a bribe-giver, a bribe-taker, a man without character, a boon companion of the frequenters and inmates of the lowest dives in New Orleans. The proofs of these allegations were laid before him and are now in his possession, and he has admitted that he has read and "was worried" by them.

He made the appointment knowing that the people of the whole country were aware of his complete acquaintance with the facts about Demas. The proofs were published in the World in a series of articles beginning June 11 last, and were copied everywhere and were not and cannot be denied in the smallest particular of depravity.

He made the appointment to fulfill a bargain between Demas on the one side and William McKinley Osborne and Mark Hanna on the other. Demas and several of his "pals" were pledged and even sworn to support Reed in the republican national convention. Osborne bought Demas for McKinley with cash and a promise of this office.

President McKinley has now made himself a principal partner in this bargain, shocking in itself but vastly more shocking in view of the degraded character of the man with whom the president of the Unite States has locked arms.

It is a disgraceful act, and one which will put a lasting stain on the administration of President McKinley.—N. Y. World.

POINTS AND OPINIONS.

——Oddly enough the man of unsavory reputation whom the president has appointed naval officer of the customs of New Orleans turns out to have been one of McKinley's supporters in the St. Louis convention.—Detroit Free Press.

——Republican logic is a queer thing. Here we have a tariff bill protecting American manufacturers of iron against foreign manufacturers, and the American manufacturers are actually underselling the foreigner in his own market.—Omaha World-Herald.

——There seems to be no good reason why Secretary John Sherman should speak in this year's campaign. He has already said more than he can atone for or explain in the rest of his natural life. Anything he might say would probably be an extension of his iniquities rather than apology or reparation for the past.—Cincinnati Examiner.

——It is now asserted in Wall street that the sugar trust is known to have a surplus of $35,000,000 which will be distributed shortly. This is given as the cause of the recent investments of the Rockefellers in sugar stock. Possibly it may also help the Rockefellers to unload at advanced figures the sugar stock they have accumulated.—Indianapolis Sentinel.
